 begynnynge, and euell thinges for the vngodly.
 All thinges necessary for the life of man are created from the begynnynge : 'water, fyre, yron and salt, meel, wheate and hony mylke and wyne, oyle and clothinge. All these thinges are created for the best to the faithfull :
 But to the vngodly shal all these thinges be turned to hurte and harme. There be spretes that are created for vengeaunce, and in their rigorousnes haue \hat{y} they fastened their tormentes. In the tyme of the ende they shal poure out their strēth, and pacifie \hat{y} 'wrath of him that made them. Fyre, hayle, honger and death : all these thinges are created for vengeaunce.

The teth of wylde noysome beestes, the scorpions, serpentes, and the swerde are created also for vengeaunce, to the destruction of the vngodly. They shall be glad to do his commaundementes : and whan nede is, they shalbe ready vpon earth : and whan their houre is come, they shal not ouerpasse the commendement of the LORDE.

Therefore haue I taken a good corage vnto me from the begynnynge, and thought to put these thinges in wrytynge, and to leaue the behynde me. "All þy workes of the LORDE are good, and he geueth euery one in due season, and whan nede is, So that a man nede not to saye: this is worse then that. For in due season they are all pleasaunt and good: And therefore prayse the LORDE with whole hert and mouth, & geue thankes vnto his name.

The xl. Chapter.

A GREATE trauayle is created for all mē, and an heuy yock vpon all mens children, from the daye that they go out of their mothers wombe, tyll they be buried in (the earth) the mother of all thinges: namely, their thoughtes and ymaginacions, feare of the hert, counsell, meditations, longinge and desyre, the daye of death: from the hyst that sytteth vpon the glorious seate, vnto the lowest and most symple vpon the earth: from him that is gorgeously arayed, and weereth a crowne, vntyll him that is but homely and symple clothed. There is nothinge but wrath, zeale, fearfulness, vnquietnes, and feare of death, rigorous anger and stryfe. And in the night whan one shulde rest and slepe vpon his bedd, the slepe chaungeth his vnderstandinge and knowlege. A litle as nothinge is his rest, in þy slepe as well as in the daye of labour.

33 He feareth and is disquyted in the vision of his hert, as one that renneth out of a battayll: and in the tyme of health he awaketh, and marueleth that the feare was nothinge. Soch thinges happen vnto all flesh, both man and best: but seuenefolde to the vngodly. Morouer death, bloudsheddinge, strife & swerde, oppression, honger, destruction and ^bpunishment: these thinges are all created agaynst the vngodly, and for their sakes came the floude also. All that is of the earth, shal turne to earth agayne: and all waters ebb agayne in to the see. All brybes and vn-righteousnes shalbe put awaye, but faithfulness and trueth shal endure for euer. The substaunce and goodes of þy vngodly shalbe dried vp and syncke awaye as a water floude, and they shall make a sounde like a greate thonder in the rayne.

Like as the righteous reioyseth whan he openeth his hande, so shall the trasgressours be faynte, whan their goodes vanysh and consume awaye. "The children of the vngodly shal not optayne many braunches: and þy vnclene rotes vpō the hye rockes shalbe roted out before the gras by the water syde & vpon the ryuer bankes.

Frendlynes and liberalite in the increase and blessinge of God, is like a paradise & garden of pleasure: soch mercy also & kindnes endureth for euer. "To labour & to be content with that a man hath, is a swete pleasaunt life: & that is to fynde a treasure aboue all treasures. To beget children and to repayre the cite, maketh a perpetuall name: but an honest woman is more worth thē they both. Wyne and mynstralyse reioyce the hert, but the loue of wysdome is aboue them both.

D Pypinge and harpynge make a swete noyse, but a frendly tonge goeth beyonde them both. Thine eye desyreth fauoure and bewtie but a grene sede tyme rather thē they both. A frende and companyon come together at oportunte, but aboue them both is a wife that agreeth with hir huszbande. One brother helpeth another in the tyme of trouble, but allmes shal deliuer more then they both. Golde and syluer fasten the fete, but a good counsell is more pleasaunt then they both. Temporall substaunce and strength lift vp the mynde: but the feare of the LORDE more then they both. The feare of the LORDE wanteth nothinge, and nedeth no helpe. The feare of þy LORDE is as a pleasaunt gardē of blessinge, and nothinge so bewtyfull as it is. My sonne, lede not a beggers life, for better it were to dye thē to begg. Who so loketh to another mans table, taketh no thought for his owne lyuyng how to vpholde his life, for he fedeth himself with other mens meate. But a wyse and well nurtoured man wyll beware therof. Beggyng is swete in the mouth of the vnshamefast, but in his bely there burneth a fyre.

The xlii. Chapter.

A O DEATH, how bytter is the remembrance of the, to a man that seketh rest and comforte in his substance and riches, vnto the man that hath nothinge to vexe him, and that hath prosperite in all thinges, yee vnto him that yet is able to receaue meate? O death, how acceptable and good is thy iudgment vnto the nedefull, and vnto him whose strength fayleth, & that is now in his last age, and that in all thinges is full of care and fearfulness; vnto him also that is in dispayre, and hath no hope ner pacience? Be not thou afrayed of death: remembre them þy haue bene before the: and þy come after þy: this is the iudgmēt of þy LORDE ouer all flesh. "And why woldest thou be agaist this pleasure of þy Hiest? Whether it be ten, an hundreth, or a thousande yeaes: death axeth not how longe one haue lyued.

B The children of the vngodly are abhominable children, and so are they that kepe company with the vngodly. The inheritaunce of vngodly children shall come to naught, and their posterite shal haue perpetuall shame and confucion. The children complayne of an vngodly father: and why? for his sake they are rebuked and despyed. Wo be vnto you (O ye vngodly) which haue forsakē the lawe of þy hiest God: Yf ye be borne, ye shal be borne to cursynge: yf ye dye, þy curse shal be youre porcion.

C All that is of þy earth, shal turne to earth agayne: so go the vngodly also out of þy curse in to destruccion. The sorow of men is in their body: but þy name of the vngodly shal be put out, for it is nothinge worth. Laboure to get the a good name, for that "shall continue surer by the, then a thousande greate treasures of golde. A good life hath a nōbre of dayes, but a good name endureth euer.

My children, kepe wysdome in peace: for wysdome that is hyd and a treasure that is not sene, what profit is in the both? "A man that hydeth his foolishnes, is better then a man that hydeth his wysdome. Therefore be ye turned at my wordes: for it is not good, in all thinges and allwaie to be ashamed. True faith must proue and measure it.

Be ashamed of whordome before father and mother: Be ashamed of lesynge before the prynces and men of auctorite: Of synne, before the iudge and ruler: Of offence, before the congregacion and people: Of vnrighteousnes, before a companyon and frēde: Of theft, before þy neghbours. As for the truth of God and his couenaunt, be not ashamed therof.

Be ashamed to lye with thyne elbowes vpon the bred: Be ashamed to loke vpō harlottes: Be ashamed to turne away thy face from thy frende: Be ashamed to take & not to geue: Be ashamed also to loke vpon another mans wyfe, and to make many tryflinge wordes with hir mayden, or to stonde by hir bedsye. Be ashamed to vpbrade thy frēde: and when thou geuest eny thinge, cast him not in the teth withall.

The xliij. Chapter.

REHearse not a thinge twyse, and disclose not the wordes, that thou hast herde in secrete. Be shamefast & well mannered in dede, so shall euery man fauoure the. Of these thinges be not thou ashamed, and accepte no personne to offende. Namely, of these thinges be not ashamed: Of the lawe of God, of the couenaunt, of iudgmēt: to brynge the vngodly from his vngodlines vnto righteousness, and to make him a good man: to deale faithfully with neghboure & companyon: to distribute the heretage vnto þy frendes: to be diligent to kepe true measure and weight: to be content, whether thou gettest moch or litle: to deale truly with temporall goodes in byenge and sellynge: to brynge vp children with diligence: to correeke an euell seruauant: to kepe that thine is frō an euell wife: to set a lock where many handes are: what thou delyuerest and geuest out to be kepte, to tell it, and to weye it: to wryte vp all the out geuynges and receauynges: to enfourme þy vnlernd and vnwyse: Of the aged, that are iudged of the yonge. Yf thou be diligēt in these thinges, truly thou shalt be lerned and wyse and accepted of all men.

The daughter maketh þy father to watch secretly: and the carefulness that he hath for her, taketh away his slepe: yee in the youth, lest she shulde ouergrowe him: And when she hath an huszbande, lest she shulde be hated: lest she shulde be defyled or rauyshed in hir virginyte, or gotten with childe in hir fathers house: Or (whan she commeth to the man) lest she behaue herself not right, or contynue vn frutefull. Yf thy daughter be wanton,* kepe her strately, lest she cause thine enemies laugh the to scorn, & the whole cite to geue & an euell reporte, and so thou be fayne to heare thy shame of euery man, and be confounded before all & people. ^aBeholde not euery bodies bewtye, & haue not moch dwellynge amonge wemen. For like as the worme and moth commeth out of clothinge, ^cso doth wickednes come of wemen.

^c It is better to be with an euell man, then with a frendly wife & putteth one to shame and rebuke. I wyl remembre the workes of the LORDE, and declare the thinge & I haue sene. In & wordes of & LORDE are his workes. The Sone ouerloketh all thynges with his shine, & all his workes are full of & clearnes therof. Hath not the LORDE brought to passe, that his sayntes shulde tell out all his wöderous workes, which the all-mightie LORDE hath stablyshed? All thynges endure in his glory. He seketh out the grounde of the depe and the hert, and he knoweth all their ymaginacion & wyszdome. ^dFor & LORDE knoweth all scyence, and he loketh in to & token of the time. He declareth the thinges & are past and for to come, & discloseth thinges that are secrete. ^eNo thought maye escape him, nether maye eny worde be hyd from him. He hath garnysed the hye excellent workes of his wyszdome, and he is frō euerlastinge to euerlastinge. Vnto him maye nothinge be added nether can he be mynished, he hath no nede also of eny counsell. O how amiable are all his workes, & as a sparke to loke vpon? They lyue all, and endure for euer: and whan so euer nede is, they are all obedient vnto him. They are all dubble, one agaynst another: he hath made nothinge* that hath faute or blemysh. He hath stablyshed the goodes of euerychone: and who maye be satisfied with his glory, whan he seith it?

The xliij. Chapter.

^a THE glory of the heyth, is the fayre and cleare firmament, the bewtye of the heauen in his glorious clearnes. The sonne whan it appeareth, declareth the daye in & goinge out of it, a maruelous worke of the Hyest. At noone it burneth & earth, and who maye abyde for the heate therof? Who so kepeth an ouen whan it is hote, thre tymes more doth the Sonne burne vpon & mountaynes, whan it bretheth out the fyrie beames and shyneth: with the brightnes of it, it blyndeth the eyes. Greate is the LORDE that made it, and in his commaundement he causeth it to renne hastily.

^bThe Moone also is in all, and at conuenient season it sheweth the tymes, and is a token of the tyme. ^cThe token of the solemne feast is taken of the Moone, a light that mynischeth and increaseth againe. The Moneth is called after the Moone, it groweth wonderously in hir chaunginge.

The armye of heauen also is in the Heith, ^din the firmament of heauen it geueth a cleare and glorious shyne. This is the clearnes of the starres, the bewtiful apparell of heauen, the apparell that the LORDE lighteneth in the heyth. In his holy worke they continue in their ordre, and not one of them fayleth in his watch. ^eLoke vpon & rayne bowe, and prayse him that made it: very bewtiful is it in his shyne. He compaseth the heauen aboute with his clearnes and glory, the handes of the Hyest haue bēded it. Thorow his commaundement he maketh the snowe to fall, and the thonder of his iudgment to smyte hastily. Thorow his commaundement the treasures are opened, and the cloudes fle as the foules. In his power hath he strengthened the cloudes, and brokē the hayle stones.

The mountaynes melt at & sight of him, the wynde bloweth accordinge to his wyll. The sounde of his thonder beateth & earth, and so doth the storme of the north: the whirle wynde also lighteth downe as a feathered foule, casteth out and spredeth the snowe abroad: and as the greshoppers that destroye all, so falleth it downe. The eie marueleth at & bewtye of the whytenesse therof, and the hert is afraied at the raine of it. He poureth out the frost vpon earth, like salt, and whan it is frozen, it is as sharpe as the prycke of a thistle.

(In his worde he stytleth the wynde,) In his counceill he setteth the depe, and (the LORDE) Iesus planted it. They that sayle ouer the see, tell of his pannels and harmes: and whan we heare it with oure eares, we maruell therat. For there be straunge wonderous workes, dyuerse maner of nyce beestes and whall fishes. Thorow him are all thinges set in good ordre and performed, t in his worde all thinges endure.

I speake moch, but I can not sufficiently attayne vnto it, for he himself onely is the perfeccion of all wordes. We shulde prayse the LORDE after all oure power, for he is greate in all his workes. t The LORDE is to be feared yee very greate is he, and maruelous is his power. Prayse the LORDE, and magnifie him as moch as ye maye, yet doth he farre farre excede all prayse. t O magnifie him with all youre power, and laboure earnestly, yet are ye in no wyse able sufficiently to prayse him. t Who hath sene him, that he might tell vs? Who can magnifie him so greatly as he is? For there are hyd yet greater thinges th e these be: as for vs, we haue sene but few of his workes. For the LORDE hath made all thinges, and geuen wysdome to such as feare God.

L ET vs commend the noble famous men, and the generacion of oure forefenders and fathers. Many more glorious actes hath the LORDE done, and shewed his greate power euer sens f begynnynge. The noble famous men raigned in their kyngdomes, and bare excellent rule. In their wysdome and vnderstandinge, they folowed the counceill shewed in the prophecies. t They led the folke thorow the counceill and wysdome of the scribes of the people. Wyse sentences are founde in their instruccion.

They sought the swetenes and melody of Musick, and brought forth the pleasant songes in scripture. They were riche also, t coude comforte and pacifie those that dwelt with them. All these were very noble and honorable men in their generacions, and were well reported of in their tymes. These haue left a name behynde them, so that their prayse shal allwaye be spok e . Afterwarde there were some, whose remembrance is gone. t They came to naught and perished, as though they had neuer bene: and became as though they had neuer bene borne, yee t their children also with them.

Neuertheles these are louynge men, whose b righteousnes shal neuer be forgotten, but contynue by their posterite. Their children are an holy good heretage: Their sede endured fast in f couenaunt. For their sakes shal their childre t sede contynue for euer, t their prayse shal neuer be put downe. Their bodies are buried in peace, but their name lyueth for euermore. The people can speake of their wysdome, t the congregacion can talke of their prayse. f Enoch walked right t acceptably before the LORDE: therfore was he traslated for an example of amendem e t to f generacions. t Noe was a stedfast t righteous man: t in the tyme of wrath he became a rec o cylinge. Therfore was he left a remnant vnto the earth, whan the floude came. t An euerlastinge couenaunt was made with him, that all flesh shulde perishe nomore with f water.

Abraham was a greate father of many c people, t in glory was there none like vnto him. He kepte the lawe of the Hyest, t came in to a couenaunt with him. He set the couenaunt in his flesh, t and whan he was tempted, he was founde faithfull. Therfore swore God vnto him with an ooth, that he wolde blesse all people in his sede, that he wolde multiplie and increase him as the dust of the earth, and to exalte his sede as the starres: yee and that his sede shulde haue f possession and inheritaunce of the londe from see to see, and from the ryuer vnto f borders of the londe.

made it to rest vpon the heade of Iacob. He knew him,^a in that he prospered him so well and richely, and gaue him an heretage, and sundered his porcion by it self,^b and parted it amonge the twolue trybes. Mercifull men brought he out of him, which founde fauoure before all flesh.

The xlv. Chapter.

MOSEs beloued of God and mē, whose remembrance in is hie prayse: 'him hath the LORDE made like in the glory of the sayntes, and magnified him so that the enemies stode in awe of him, thorow his wordes he dyd greate wonders. He made him greate in the sight of kynges, gaue him commaundement before his people, and shewed him his glorious power. He stablyshed him with faithfulness and mekenes,^d and chose him out of all men. For he herde his voyce, and led him in the darcke cloude,^e and there he gaue him the commaundementes, yee the lawe of life and wysdome, that he might teach Iacob the couenaunt, and Israel his lawes.

He chose Aaron his brother also out of ^f trybe of Leui,^f exalted him, ^g made him soch like. An euerlastinge couenaunt made he with him,^g and gaue him the presthode in the people. He made him glorious in bewtifull araye, and clothed him with the garment of honoure. He put perfecte ioye vpo him, and gyrded him with strength. He deckte him with syde clothes and a tuncle, with an ouerbody cote also and gyrdle. Rounde aboute made he him belles of golde, and that many: that whan he wente in,^h the sounde might be herde, that they might make a noyse in the Sanctuary, and geue the people warnynge. The holy garment was wrought ⁱ broderd with golde, yalow sylke and purple. And in the brestlappe there was a goodly worke,ⁱ wherin was fastened light and perfectnesse.

Vpon ^j same also there was a worke fastened and set with costly precious stones, all bounde with golde: and this he brought in his mynistracion. The stones also were fastened for a remembrance, after the twolue trybes of Israel. Vpon his mytre there was a plate of pure golde, a grauen ymage of hollynes, a famous and noble worke, garnished, and pleasaunt to loke vpon. Before him were there sene no soch fayre ornamētes, and these it behoued hi allwaye to vse: There might none other put them on, but onely his children and his childers children perpetually. Daylie perfourmed he his burntofferings two tymes.^k Moses fylled his handes, and anoynted him with holy oyle.

This was now confirmed him with an euerlastinge couenaunt, and to his sede, as ^l dayes of heauē: namely, that his childre shulde allwaye mynistr before him, and perfourme the office of the presthode, and wyshe the people good in his name. Before all men luyng chose he him, that he shulde offre before the LORDE, and make odours for a swete sauoure and remembraunce, that he shulde reconyle the people of the LORDE with him agayne.^m He gaue him auctorite also in his commaundementes and in ⁿ couenaunt, that he shulde teach Iacob the statutes and testimonies, and to enfourme Israel in his lawe.

Therefore there stode vp certayne agaynst him,^o and had envye at him in the wyldernes: namely, they that were of Dathan ^p Abirams syde, and the furious congregaciō of Chore. This the LORDE sawe, and it displeased him, and in his wrothfull indignacion were they consumed. A greate wonder did he vpon them, and consumed them with the fyre.^q Besydes this, he made Aaron yet more honorable and glorious. He gaue him an heretage, and parted the first frutes vnto him.^r Vnto him specially he appoynted the bred for sustenance (for the prestes ate of ^s offerynges of the LORDE) this gaue he vnto him ^t his sede. Els had he no heretage^r ner porcion in ^u londe and with the people. For the LORDE himself is his porcion and enheritance.

The thirde noble and excellent mā is Phineas the sonne of Eleazar, which pleased the God of Israel,^v because he had ^w zeale ^x feare of the LORDE. For whan the people were turned back, he put him self forth right soone, ^y that with a good wyll, to pacifie the wrath of the LORDE towards Israel. Therefore was there a couenaunt of peace made with him, ^z he shulde be the principall amonge

The xlii. Chapter.

MANLY ⁊ stronge in battaill was Iesus ⁊ sonne of Naue,^a which in steade of Moses ⁊ prophet was geuen to be capytayne of the people (which acordinge vnto his name was a greate sauoure vnto the electe of God) to punysh the enemies, that rose vp agaynst Israel, ⁊ Israel might optayne their inheritaunce. O how greate, noble and excellent was he,^b whan he lift vp his hande, and drew out his swerde agaynst the cities? Who stode so manly before him? For the LORDE himself brought in the enemies.^c Stode not the Sonne styll at his commaundemēt, and one daye was as long as two? He called vpon the Hyest ⁊ most mightie, whā ⁊ enemies preassed vpon him on euery syde: and the LORDE herde him with the hayle stones. They smote ⁊ Heithenish people mightely, ⁊ in fallinge downe they slew all ⁊ aduersaries, so that the Heithē knewe his hoost, and all his defence, that the LORDE himself fought against them, for he folowed vpon the mightie men of them.

In the tyme of Moses also he and Caleb the sonne of Iephune,^d dyd a good worke, which stode agaynst the enemies, withelde the people from synne, and stylld ⁊ wicked murmuryng. And of sixe hundreth thousande people of fote, they two were preserued, whan they were brought in to the heretage, namely, a londe that floweth with mylke ⁊ hony. The LORDE gaue strength also vnto Caleb,^e which remayned with him vnto his age: so that he wente vp in to the hye places of the londe, and his sede conquered the same for an heretage: that all the childrē of Israel might se, how good a thinge it is, to be obedient vnto the LORDE. And the iudges or rulers (euery one after his name) whose hert wente not a whoringe, ner departed from ⁊ LORDE, and that forsake not the LORDE vnfaithfully, whose remembraūce hath a good reporte: Yee their bones flourish out of their place, and their name shal neuer be chaūged.

Samuel the prophet beloued of the LORDE,^f ordeyned a kinge, and anoynted the prynces ouer the people. In the lawe of the LORDE ruled he, and iudged the congregacion, ⁊ the LORDE had respecte vnto Iacob. The prophet was founde diligent in his faithfulness: yee in his faithfulness was the faithfulness of the vision knowne. He called vpon ⁊ LORDE the mightie,^g whā the enemies preassed vpon him on euery syde, what tyme as he offred the suckynge lambes. And the LORDE thondred from heauen, and mayde his voyce to be herde with a greate noyse. He discomfited the prynces of Tyre, ⁊ all the rulers of the Philistynes. Before his last ende he made protestaacion in the sight of the LORDE ⁊ his anoynted, that he toke nether substaunce ner good of eny man, no not so moch as a shue: ⁊ no man might accuse him. After this he tolde, that his ende was at honde, and shewed the kynge also his ende and death: ⁊ from ⁊ earth lift he vp his voyce in the prophecie, ⁊ the vngodly people shulde perishe.

The xliij. Chapter.

AFTERWARDE in the tyme of kynge Dauid,^h there rose vp a prophet called Nathan: For like as the fat is taken awaye from the offryng, so was Dauid chosen out of the childrē of Israel. He toke his pastyme with the lyons as with kyddes, and with beares like as with lambes. Slew he not a giantte whan he was yet but yonge,ⁱ ⁊ toke awaye the rebuke from his people? what tyme as he toke the stone in his hande, ⁊ smote downe proude Goliath with the slyng? For he called vpon the hiest LORDE, which gaue him strength in his right hande, so that he ouerthrew the mightie giantte in the battaill, that he might set vp the horne of his people agayne.

Thus brought he him to worshipe aboue all prynces, and made him to haue a good reporte in the prayse of the LORDE, ⁊ he shulde weere a crowne of glory. For he destroyed the enemies on euery syde,^a roted out the Philistynes his aduersaries, & brake their horne in sunder, like as it is broke yet this daye. In all his workes he prayes y^e Hyst & Holiest, & ascribed the honour vnto him. With his whole hert dyd he prayse and loue him that made him.^d He set syngers also before the autler, and in their tune he made swete songes. He ordeyned to kepe the holy daies worshipfully, and that the solempne feastes thorow the whole yeare shulde be honorably holdē, with prayseing the name of the LORDE, & with synginge by tymes in the mornynge in the Sanctuary.

C The LORDE toke awaye his synnes, and exalted his horne for euer. He gaue him y^e couenaunt of the kyngdome, and the trone of worshippe in Israel. After him there rose vp the wyse sonne called Salomon, ^aand for his sake he droue y^e enemies awaie farre of. This Salomon reigned with peace in his tyme (for God gaue him rest from his enemies on euery syde, that he might buylde him an house in his name, & prepare the Sanctuary for euer) like as he was well instructe in his youth & fylled with wysdome and vnderstōdinge, as it were with a water floude. He couered and fylled the whole londe with similitudes and wyse prudent sentences.

D His name wente abrode in the Iles, because of his peace he was beloued. All londes marueled at his songes, prouerbes, symilitudes, and at his peace, and at the name of y^e LORDE God, which is called the God of Israel. He gathered golde as tynne, & he had as moch syluer as leade. He was moued in vnordinate loue towardes we men, and was ouer come in affection. He stayned his honour and worshippe, yee his posterite defyled he also, in bringinge the wrath of the LORDE vpon his children, and sorowe after his ioye: so y^e his kyngdome was deuyded, & ^e Ephraim became an vn faithfull & an vn constant kyngdome. Neuertheles God forsoke not his mercy, ^fnether was he vtterly destroyed because of his workes, y^e he shulde leaue him no posterite.

E As for y^e sēde y^e came vpon him (which he loued) he brought it not vtterly to naught, but gaue yet a remnaunt vnto Iacob, and a rote vnto Dauid out of him. Thus rested Salomon with his fathers, and out of his sēde he left behynde him a very foolishnes of the people, and soch one as had no vnderstōdinge: namely, Roboā which turned awaye the people thorow his counsell, and Ieroboam y^e sonne of Nabat, which caused Israel to synne, and shewed Ephraim the waye of vngodlynnes: In so moch that their synnes & myszdedes had the vpper hande so sore, that at the last they were dryuen out of the londe for the same: Yee he sought out & brought vp all wickednes, tyll the vengeaunce came vpon them.

The xliiij. Chapter.

THEN stode vp Elias the prophet^k as a fyre, and his worde brēt like a creshett. He brought an hōger vpon thē and in his zele he made them few in nombre. (For they might not awaye with the commaundementes of the LORDE.) Thorow the worde of the LORDE he shut the heauen, and thre tymes brought he the fyre downe. Thus became Elias honorable in his wonderous dedes. Who maye make his boost to be like him? One that was deed raysed he vp from death,^m & in the worde of y^e Hyst he brought him out of the graue agayne. He cast downe kynges and destroyed them, and the honorable from their seate. Vpon the mount Syna he herde the punyshment, & vpon Horeb the iudgmēt of the vengeaunce. He prophecied recompensynge vnto kynges, and ordeyned prophetes after him. He was taken vp in the storme of fyre, in a charett of horses of the LORDE. He was ordeyned in the reprouynges in tyme, to pacifie the wrath, to turne y^e hertes of the fathers vnto the children,ⁿ & to set vp the trybes of Iacob agayne. Blessed were they that saw the, and were garnished in loue: for we lyue in life.

Elias was couered in the storme, but Heliseus was fylled with his mouth. Why he lyued he was afraied of no pryncce, and no man might ouer come him. There coude no worde disceaue him,^o & after his death his body prophecied. He dyd wonders in his life, & in death were his workes maruelous. For all this, the people amended not, nether departed they from their synnes: tyll they were caried awaye presoners out of the londe, and were scattered abroad in all countrees, so that of them there remayned but a very litle people, and a prynce vnto \hat{y} house of Dauid. How be it some of them dyd right, and some heaped vp vngodlynes.

Ezechias made his cite stronge, conveyed water in to it, d^{y} gged thorow the stony rock with yron, t made vp a well by the water syde. In his tyme came Sennacherib vp,⁴ and sent Rabsaches, lift vp his hande agaynst Sion, t defyed them with greate pryde. The trymbled their hertes and handes, so \hat{y} they sorowed like a woman trauaylinge with childe. So they called vp o the LORDE, which is mercyfull, t lift vp their hādes before him. Immediately the LORDE herde the out of heaven, and delyuered them by the hande of Esay. H e smote the hoost of the Assirians, t his angell destroyed the. For Ezechias had done the thinge that pleased the LORDE, t remayned stedfastly in the waye of Dauid his father. Which Esay was greate t faithfull in his visions. With a right sprete prophced he, what shulde come to passe at the last: t to such as were soroufull in Sion he gaue consolacion, wherewith they might coforte them selues for euermore. He shewed thinges \hat{y} were for to come t secrete, or euer they came to passe.

The xliij. Chapter.

THE remembraunce of Iosias is like as whan the Apotecary⁷ maketh many precious swete smellynge thinges together. His remembraunce shalbe swete as hony in all mouthes, and as the playenge of Musick by the wyne. He was appoynted to turne the people agayne, t to take awaye all abhominacions of \hat{y} vngodly. He directed his hert vnto the LORDE, t in the tyme of the vngodly he set vp the worships of God agayne. All kynges (excepte Dauid, Ezechias t Iosias) comitted wickednes: for euen \hat{y} kynges of Iuda also forsoke \hat{y} lawe of God. For they gaue their home vnto other, their honoure t worships also to a straunge people.

Therfore was the electe cite of the Sāctuary brent with fyre, and t the stretes therof laye desolate and waist: for they intreated

Jeremy euell, which neuertheles was a prophet ordeyned from his mothers wombe,⁵ that he might rote out, breake of, t destroye: t that he might buylde vp, t plante agayne. Ezechiel sawe the glory of the LORDE in a vision, which was shewed him vpon the charret of the Cherubins. For he thought vpon the enemies in \hat{y} rayne, to do good vnto soch as had ordred their wayes a right. And the bones of the twolue prophetes florish from out of their place: for they gaue comforte t consolacion vnto Iacob, and delyuered the faithfully. How shall we prayse Zorobabel,⁶ which was a ringe in the right hande?

So was Iesus also the sonne of Iosedec: t these men in their tymes buylde the house, t set vp the Sanctuary of \hat{y} LORDE agayne, which was prepared for an euerlasting worships. And Nehemias⁷ is allwaye to be comended, which set vp for vs the walles⁸ \hat{y} were broken downe, made the portes t barres agayne, and buylde our houses of the new. B ut vpon earth is there no man created like Enoch, for he was taken vp from \hat{y} earth. And Ioseph, which was lorde of his brethren, t the vpholder of his people: His bones were couered t kepte. Seth t Sem were in greate honoure amonge \hat{y} people: and so was Adam aboute all the beastes, whā he was created.

ryuers of water: Like as the braunches vpon the mount Libanus in tyme of Sommer: as a fyre & incēse that is kyndled: Like as an whole ornament of pure golde, set with all maner of precious stones: and as an olyue tre that is frutefull: & as a Cypres tre which groweth vp an hye.

When he put on the garment of honoure, & was clothed withall bewtye: whan he wente to the holy altare, to garnysh the couerynge of the Sanctuary: whan he toke & porcions out of the prestes hande, he himself stode by the herth of the altare, and his brethren rounde aboute in ordre. As the braunches of Cedre tre vpon the mount Libanus, so stode they rounde aboute him. And as the braunches of the olyue tre, so stode all & sonnes of Aaron in their glory. And & he might sufficiently performe his seruyce vpon the altare, & garnysh the offrynge of the hyst God, he stretched out his hande and toke of the drynkofferynge, & poured in of the wyne: so he poured vpon the botome of the aulter a good smell vnto the hyst pryncce.

Then beganne & sonnes of Aaron to synge, and to blowe with trompettes, & to make a greate noyse, for a remembraunce & prayse vnto the LORDE. Then were the people afayed, & fell downe to the earth vpo their faces, to worshipe the LORDE their God, & to geue thanks to Allmightie God. They sunge goodly also with their voyces, so that there was a pleasaunt noyse in & greate house of the LORDE. And the people in their prayer besought the LORDE the Hyst, that he wolde be mercyfull, tyll the honoure of & LORDE were performed. Thus ended they their mynistracion and seruyce.

Then wente he downe, and stretched out his handes ouer the whole multitude of the people of Israel, that they shulde geue praise & thanks out of their lippes vnto & LORDE, and to reioyse in his name. He beganne yet once also to praye, that he might openly shew the thankesgeuyng before the Hyst, namely thus: O geue prayse & thanks (ye all) vnto the LORDE oure God, which hath euer done noble and greate thinges: which hath increased oure dayes from oure mothers wombe, and dealt with vs according to his mercy: that he wyl geue vs the ioyfulness of hert, & peace for oure tymes in Israel. Which faithfully kepeth his mercy for vs euermore, & allwaye delyuereth vs in due season.

There be two maner of people, that I abhorre fro my hert: as for the thirde, whom I hate, it is no people: They that syt vpon the mountayne of Samaria, the Philistynes, & the foolish people that dwell in Sichimis.

I Iesus the sonne of Sirac Eleazarus of Ierusalem, haue tokened vp these informations and documētes of wysdome and vnderstādinge in this boke, and poured out the wysdome out of my hert. Blessed is he that exerciseth him self therin: and who so taketh soch to hert, shal be wyse. Yf he do these thinges, he shal be stronge in all. For the light of the LORDE ledeth him.

The li. Chapter.

A prayer of Iesus the sonne of Sirac.

I THANKE the O LORDE and kynge, and praise the O God my Sauoure. I wil yelde prayse vnto thy name: for thou art my defender and helper, & hast preserued my body from destruccion, from & snare of traytorous tōges, and from the lippes that are occupied with leyes. Thou hast bene my helper, from soch as stode vp agaynst me, and hast delyuered me after the multitude of thy mercy, and for thy holy names sake. Thou hast delyuered me from the roaringe of them, that prepared them selues to deuoure me, out of & handes of soch as sought after my life: from the multitude of them & troubled me, & wente aboute to set fyre vpon me on euery syde, so & I am not brent in the myddest of the fyre: From the depe of hell, from an vncleane tōge, from lyenge wordes, from the wicked kynge, and from an vnrighteous tonge. My soule shal prayse & LORDE vnto death, for my life drew nye vnto hell.

They cōpased me rounde aboute on euery syde, & there was no mā to helpe me. I loked aboute me, yf there were eny man that wolde socoure me: but there was none. Then thought I vpon thy mercy O LORDE, and vpon thy actes that thou hast done euer of olde: namely, & thou delyuerest soch as putt their trust in the, and rydest them out of & handes of the Heithen. Thus lift I vp my prayer from the earth, and prayed for delyuerance from death. I called vpon the LORDE my father, that he wolde not leaue me without helpe, in the daye of my trouble

¶ in the tyme of the proude. I praysed thy name continually, yeldinge honoure and thākes vnto it: and so my prayer was herde. Thou sauēdest me from destruccion, and deliueredest me frō þy vnrighteous tyme. Therefore wil I acknowledge and praise the, and magnifie þy name of the LORDE.

¶ Whā I was yet but yonge, or euer I wēte astraye, I desyred wyszdome openly in my prayer. I came therfore before the temple, ¶ sought her vnto the last. Then florished she vnto me, as a grape that is soone ripe. My hert reioysed in her, then wente my fote the right waye, yee from youth vp sought I after her: I bowed downe myne eare and receaued her. I founde me moch wyszdome, and prospered greatly in her. Therefore wyll I ascrybe the glory vnto him, that geueth me wyszdome: for I am aduysed to do thereafter. I will be gelous to cleue vnto the thinge þy is good, so shal I not be cōfounded. My soule hath wrestled with her, and I haue bene diligent to be occupied in her. I lift vp myne handes an hye, then was my soule lightened thorow wyszdome, that I knowleged my foolishnes. I ordred my soule after her, she ¶ I were one hert from the begynninge, and I founde her in clenness. And therefore shal I not be forsaken.

My hert longed after her, and I gat a good treasure. Thorow her þy LORDE hath geuen me a new tonge, wherwith I wil praise him. O come vnto me ye vn lerned, ¶ dwell in þy house of wyszdome: withdrawe not youre selues from her, but talke ¶ comon of these thinges, for youre soules are very thirstie. I opened my mouth, and spake:^c O come ¶ bye wyszdome without money, bowe downe youre neck vnder hir yock, and youre soule shall receaue wyszdome. She is harde at hande, ¶ is content to be founde. Beholde with youre eyes,^d how that I haue had but litle labour, and yet haue founde moch rest. O receaue wyszdome, and ye shall haue plenteousnes of syluer and golde in possession. Let youre mynde reioyse in his mercy, ¶ be not ashamed of his prayse. Wyrke his worke by tymes, ¶ he shal geue you youre rewarde in due tyme.

The ende of Ecclesiasticus, otherwyse called Iesus the sonne of Syrac.

The prayer of Azarias

after Theodotius translation: which wordes are wrytten in þ^e thirde chapter of Daniel after the olde text in Latyn.

AND they walked in the myddest of the flamme, praysynge God and magnifienge þ^e LORDE. Asarias stode vp, and prayde on this maner, Euen in the myddest of the fyre opened he his mouth, & saide: Blessed be thou (o LORDE God of oure fathers) right worthy to be praysed and honoured is þ^e name of thine for euermore: for thou art righteous in all þ^e thinges þ^e thou hast done to vs: Yee faithfull are all thy workes, thy wayes are right, & thy iudgmētes true. In all þ^e thinges þ^e thou hast brought vpon vs, & vpon the holy cite of oure fathers (euen Ierusalem) thou hast executed true iudgment: Yee acordinge to right and equity hast thou brought these thinges vpō vs, because of oure synnes.

For why? we haue offended, & done wickedly, departynge from the: In all thinges haue we trespassed, & not obeyed thy cōmaundementes, ner kepte thē, nether done as thou hast bydden vs, þ^e we might prospere. Wherefore, all þ^e thou hast brought vpon vs, & euery thinge þ^e thou hast done to vs, thou hast done them in true iudgment: As in delyueringe vs in to the hondes of oure enemies, amōge vngodly & wicked abhominacions, & to an vnrigheteous kinge, yee þ^e most frowarde vpō earth. And now we maye not opē oure mouthes, we are become a shame & reprofe vnto thy seruantes, & to thē þ^e worshipe the.

Yet for thy names sake (we beseke the) geue vs not vp for euer, breake not thy couenaunt, & take not away thy mercy from vs, for thy beloued Abrahams sake, for thy seruauant Isaacs sake, & for thy holy Israels sake: to whom thou hast spoken & promysed, þ^e thou woldest multiply their sede as þ^e starres of heauen, & as the londe þ^e lieth vpon þ^e see shore. For we (o LORDE) are become lesse thē eny people, & be kepte vnder this daye in all the worlde, because of oure synnes: So that now we haue nether prynce, duke, prophet, burntofferynge, sacrifice, oblaciō, incēse ner Sanctuary before the.

Neuerthelesse, in a contrite herte and a humble sprete let vs be receaued, þ^e we maie opteyne thy mercy. Like as in the burnt-offerynge of rammes & bullockes, and like as in thousandes of fat lambes: so let oure ^{offrynge} be in thy sight this daye, þ^e it maye please þ^e, for there is no cōfucion vnto them, þ^e put there trust in the. And now we folowe the with all oure hert, we feare the, & seke thy face. Put vs not to shame, but deale with vs after thy louynge kyndnesse, & acordinge to the multitude of thy mercies. Delyuer vs by thy miracles (o LORDE) & get thy name an honour: that all they which do thy seruantes euell, maye be confounded. Let them be ashamed thorow thy Allmightie power, and let their strength be broken: that they maye knowe, how that thou only art the LORDE God, & honour worthy thorow out all the worlde.

And the kynges seruantes þ^e put them in, ceased not to make the ouen hote with wylde fyre, drye strawe, pitch & fagottes: so that the flamme wente out of the ouen vpon a xlix. cubites: yee it toke awaye, & brent vp those Caldees, þ^e it gat holde vpon besyde the ouen. But the angel of the LORDE came downe in to the ouen to Asarias and his felowes, & smote þ^e flamme of the fyre out of the ouen, & made the myddest of the ouen, as it had bene a coole wynde blowinge: so that the fyre nether touched them, greued them, ner dyd them hurte. Then these thre (as out of one mouth) praysed, honoured, and blessed God in the fornaice, sayenge:

Blessed be thou, o LORDE God of oure fathers: for thou art prayse & honour worthy,

The story of Susanna,

Which is the xiiij. chapter of Daniel after the Latyn.

THERE dwelt a man in Babilō, called Ioachim: \hat{y} toke a wife, whose name was Susanna, (\hat{y} daughter of Helchias) a very fayre woman, τ soch one as feared God. Hir father τ hir mother also were godly people, τ taught their daughter accordinge to \hat{y} lawe of Moses. Now Ioachim (hir huszbonde) was a greate rich man, τ had a fayre orcharde ioyninge vnto his house. And to him resorted the Iewes comonly, because he was a man of reputacion amonge them. The same yeare were there made two iudges, such as the LORDE speaketh of: All the wickednesse of Babilon, cometh from \hat{y} elders (\hat{y} is) from \hat{y} iudges, which seme to rule the people. These came off to Iochims house, τ all soch as had eny thinge to do in the lawe, came thither vnto them.

Now when the people came agayne at after noone, Susanna wente in to hir husz-bōdes orcharde, to walke. The elders seynge this, that she wente in daylie τ walked: they burned for lust to her, yee they were almost out of their wittes, τ cast downe their eyes, that they shulde not se heauē, ner remembre, \hat{y} God is a righteous iudge. For they were both wōuded with the loue of her, nether durst one shewe another his grefe. And for shame, they durst not tell her their inordynate lust, \hat{y} they wolde fayne haue had to do with her. Yet they layed wayte for her earnestly from daye to daye, that they might (at the leest) haue a sight of her. And the one sayde to \hat{y} other: Vp, let vs go home, for it is dyner tyme. So they wente their waye from her.

When they returned agayne, they came together, enqueringe out \hat{y} matter betwixte them selues: yee the one tolde \hat{y} other of his wicked lust. Thē apoynted they a tyme, whē they might take Susanna alone.

It happened also \hat{y} they spyed out a conueniēt tyme, when she wente forth to walke (as hir maner was) τ no body with her, but two maydēs, " τ thought to wash her self in the garden, for it was an hote season: And there was not one person there, excepte the two elders, \hat{y} had hyd them selues, to beholde her. So she sayde to hir maydens: go fet me oyle τ sope, τ shut the orcharde dore, \hat{y} I maye wash me. And they dyd as she bad them, τ shut the orcharde dore, τ wente out them selues at a backe dore, to fet the thinge \hat{y} she had cōmaunded: but Susanna knewe not, \hat{y} \hat{y} elders laie there hyd within. Now when the maydens were gone forth, \hat{y} two elders gat them vp, τ ranne vpon her, sayenge: now, the orcharde dores are shut, that no man can se vs: we haue a lust vnto the, therefore consent vnto vs, and lye with vs.

Yf thou wilt not, we shall bringe a testimoniall agaynst the: that there was a yonge felowe with the, and that thou hast sent away thy maydens from the for the same cause. Susanna sighed, and sayde: Alas, I am in trouble on euery syde. Though I folowe youre mynde, it wyll be my death: and yf I consent not vnto you, I can not escape youre hondes. Wel, it is better for me, to fall in to youre hondes without the dede doinge, then to synne in the sight of the LORDE: and with that, she cried out with a loude voyce: the elders also cried out agaynst her.

Then ranne there one to the orcharde dore, τ smote it open. Now when the seruantes of the house herde \hat{y} crie in \hat{y} orcharde, they ruszshed in at the back dore, to se what the matter was. So when the elders tolde them, the seruantes were greatly ashamed, for why, there was neuer such a reporte made of Susanna. On the morow after came the people to Ioachim hir houszbonde, and y two elders came also, full of myscheuous ymaginations agaynst Susanna, to bringe her vnto death, & spake thus before the people: Sende for Susanna, y daughter of Helchias, Ioachims wife. And immediatly they sent for her. So she came with her father & mother, hir children & all hir kynrede. Now Susanna was a tender person, and maruelous fayre of face. Therefore the wicked men cōmaunded to take of the clothes from her face (for she was couered) y at the leest, they might so be satisfied in hir beutie. Then hir frēdes, yee & all they y knewe her, begane to wepe.

These two elders stode vp in the myddest of the people,^a & layed their hondes vpon y heade of Susanna: which wepte, and lokyd vp towarde heauen, for hir herte had a sure trust in the LORDE. And the elders sayde: As we were walkinge in the orcharde alone, this woman came in with hir two maydēs: whom she sent awaye from her, & sparrd y orcharde dores. With that, a yonge felowe (which there was hyd) came vnto her, & laye with her. As for vs, we stode in a corner of the orcharde. And whē we sawe this wickednes, we rāne to her: & perceaued, y they had medled together. But we coude not holde him, for he was stronger then we: thus he opened y dore, & gat him awaye. Now whē we had takē this womā, we axed her, what yōge felow this was: but she wolde not tell vs. This is y matter, & we be witnesses of y same.

The comon sorte beleued them, as those y were the elders & iudges of the people, & so they condemned her to death. Susanna cried out with a loude voyce, & sayde: O euerlastinge God,^b thou sercher of secretes, thou y knowest all thinges afore they come to passe: thou wotest, y they haue borne false wytnes agaynst me: & beholde, I must dye, where as I neuer dyd eny soch thinges, as these men haue maliciously inuented agaynst me. And y LORDE herde hir voyce. For whē she was led forth to death, y LORDE raised vp y sprete of a yōge childe, whose name was Daniel, which cried with a loude voice: 'I am clene frō this bloude. Thē all y people turned thē towarde him, & saide: What meane these wordes, y thou hast spokē? Daniel stode in y myddest of thē, & sayde: Are ye soch fooles (O ye childrē of Israel) y ye cā not discerne? Ye haue here condēned a daughter of Israel vnto death, and knowe not the trueth wherfore: Go syt on iudgment agayne, for they haue spoken false witness agaynst her.

Wherefore the people turned agayne in all the haist. And the elders (that is, the principall heades) sayde vnto him: come sit downe here amonge vs, and shewe vs this matter, seynge God hath geuen the as greates honoure, as an elder. And Daniel sayde vnto them: 'Put these two asyde one from another and then shal I heare them. When they were put a sunder one from another, he called one of them, and sayde vnto him: O thou olde cankerde carle, that hast vsed thy wickednesse so longe: thine vngracious dedes which thou hast done afore, are now come to light. For thou hast geuen false iudgmentes, thou hast oppressed the innocent, and lettē the gilty go fre, where as yet the LORDE saith: 'The innocent and righteous se thou slaye not. Wel than, yf thou hast sene her, tel me, vnder what tre sawest thou them talkynge together? He answered: Vnder a Molbery tre. And Daniel sayde: very wel, Now thou leist euen vpon thine heade. Lo the messaunger of the LORDE hath receaued the sentence of him, to cut y in two.

Then put he him asyde, and called for the other, and sayde vnto him: O thou sede of Canaan but not of Iuda: Fayrnesse hath disceaued the, and lust hath subuerted thine herte. Thus dealte ye afore with the daughters of Israel, and they (for feare) consented vnto you: but the daughter of Iuda wolde not abyde youre wickednesse. Now tell me than, vnder what tre didest thou take them speakinge together? He answered: vnder a pomgranate tre. Then sayde Daniel vnto him: very wel, now thou leyst also euen vpō thine heade. The messaunger of the LORDE stoneth waytinge with the swerde, to cut the in two, and to slaye you both.

With that, all the whole multitude gaue a greates shoute, and praysed God, which allwaye deluyere them y put their trust^a in him. And they came vpon the two elders, (whom Daniel had conuicted with their owne mouth: that they had geuen false witnessse) and dealete with them,^b euen likewyse as they wolde haue done with their neyghboursse: Yee they dyd accordinge to the lawe of Moses, and put them to death. Thus the innocent bloude was saued the same daye.

The Helchias ⁊ his wife prayned God for their daughter Susanna, with Ioachim hir huszbonde and all y kinrede: that there was no dishoneste founde in her. From that daye forth was Daniel had in greate reputacio in the sight of y people.

The ende of the story of Susanna.

The story of Bel, which is the xiiij. Chapter of Daniel after the Latin.

THERE was at Babilon an ymage, called Bel: and there were spent vpon him euery daye, xij. cakes, xl. shepe, and sixe greate pottes of wine. Him dyd the kynge worshipe himself, and went daylie to honoure him: but Daniel worshiped his owne God. And the kynge sayde vnto him: Why dost not thou worshipe Bel? he answered and sayde: "Because I maye not worshipe thinges, that be made with hondes, but the luyunge God, which made heauen and earth, and hath power vpon all flesh. The kynge sayde vnto him: thinkest thou not, y Bel is a luyunge God? Or seist thou not, how moche he eateth and drynketh euery daye? Daniel smyled, and sayde: O kynge, disceau not thyselfe: This is but made of claye within, and of metall without, nether eateth he euer eny thinge.^a 33 Then the kynge was wroth, and called for his prestes, and sayde vnto them: Yf ye tell me not who this is, that eateth vp these expenses, ye shal dye: But yf ye can certifie me, that Bel eateth them, then Daniel shall dye,^c for he hath spoken blasphemy agaynst Bel. And Daniel sayde vnto the kynge: let it so be, accordinge as thou hast sayde. The prestes of Bel were lxx. besyde their wyues and children. And the kynge wente with Daniel in to the temple of Bel. So Bels prestes sayde: Lo, we wil go out, ⁊ set thou y meate there (O kynge) ⁊ poure in the wyne: then shutt the dore fast, and seale it with thine owne signet: and tomorow when thou comest in, yf thou fyndest not, that Bel hath eaten vp all, we wil suffre death: or els daniel, that hath lyed vpon vs. The prestes thought them selues sure ynough, for vnder y altare they had made a preuy in-traunce, ⁊ there wente they in euer, and ate vp what there was.

So when they were gone forth, the kynge set meates before Bel. Now Daniel had comaunded his seruantes to bringe aszshes and these he sifted thorow out all the temple, that the kynge might se. Then wente they out, ⁊ sparre the dore, sealinge it with y kynges signet, and so departed. In y night came the prestes with their wyues and children (as they were wonte to do) and ate and dronke vp all. In the mornynge be tymes at the breake of the daye, the kynge arose, ⁊

Daniel with him. And the kynge sayde: Daniel, are the seales whole yet? He answered: Yee (o kynge) they be whole. Now as soone as he had opened the dore, the kinge loked vnto f altare, and cried with a loude voyce: Greate art thou o Bel, and with the is no disceate. Then laughed Daniel, and helde the kynge, that he shulde not go in, and sayde: Beholde the pauement, marcke well, whose fotesteppes are these? The kynge sayde: I se the fotesteppes of men, women and children.

¶ Therefore the kynge was angrie, and toke the prestes, with their wyues and childrē, r they shewed him f preny dores, where they came in, r ate vp soch thinges as were vpon f altare. ¶ For the which cause f kynge slewe them, r delyuered Bel in to Daniels power, which destroyed him and his temple.

And in that same place there was a greate dragon, which they of Babilon worshipped. And f kynge sayde vnto Daniel: sayest thou, f this is but a god of metall also? lo, he liueth, he eateth r drinketh: so f thou cāst not saye, that he is no luyinge God, therefore worships him. Daniel sayde vnto f kinge: I wil worships the LORDE my God,^a he is f true luyinge God: as for this, he is not the God of life. ¶ But geue me leaue (o kynge) r I shal destroye this dragon without swearde or staff. The kynge sayde: I geue f leaue. Then Daniel toke pitch, fatte, and hairie woll, and did seyth them together, and made lompes therof: this he put in f Dragōs mouth, and so f dragon barst in sonder: and Daniel sayde: lo, there is he whom ye worshipped.

¶ When they of Babylon herde that, they toke greate indignacion, and gathered them together agaynst the kynge, sayenge: The kynge is become a Iewe also, he hath destroyed Bel, he hath slayne f Dragon, and put the prestes to death. So they came to f kynge, r sayde: let us haue Daniel, or els we wil destroye the and thine house.

Now when f kynge sawe, that they russed in so sore vpon him, r that necessite constrained him, he deliuered Daniel vnto them: which cast him in to the Lyons denne, where he was sixe dayes. In the denne there were seuen Lyons, and they had geuen them euery daye two bodies and two shepe: which then were not geuē them, that they might deuoure Daniel.

There was in Iewry a prophet called f Abacuc, which had made potage, and broken bred in a depe platter, and was goinge in to the felde, for to brynge it to f mowers. But the angell of the LORDE sayde vnto Abacuc: go cary the meate that thou hast in to Babilon, vnto Daniel, which is in f lyōs denne. And Abacuc sayde: LORDE, I neuer sawe Babilon: and as for the denne, I knowe it not. ¶ Then the angel of the LORDE toke him by the toppe, and bare him by the hayre of the heade, and (thorow a mightie wynde) set him in Babilon vpon the denne. And Abacuc cried, sayenge: O Daniel thou seruauent of God,^a haue, take the breakfast, f God hath sent f . And Daniel saide: O God, hast thou thought vpon me? wel, thou neuer faylest them that loue the. So Daniel arose, r ate: and the angel of the LORDE set Abacuc in his owne place agayne immediately.

Vpon the seuenth daye, the kynge wente ¶ to bewepe Daniel: and whan he came to the denne, he loked in: and beholde, Daniel sat in the myddest of the Lyons. Then cried f kynge with a loude voyce, sayenge: Greate art thou, o LORDE God of Daniel:^a r he drewe him out of the denne. As for those that were f cause of his destrucciō,^a he dyd cast the in to the denne, and they were deuoured in a moment before his face.

After this, wrote the kynge vnto all people, kynredes and tinges, that dwelt in all countrees, sayenge: peace be multiplied with you. My commaundement is, in all the dominyon of my realme: that men feare and stonde in awe of Daniels God,^a for he is the luyinge God, which endureth euer: his kyngdome abydeth vncorrupte, and his power is euerlastinge.^a It is he that can delyuer and saue: he doth wonders and maruelous workes in heauen and in earth, for he hath saued Daniel from the power of the Lyons.

Chap. XV.

Antiochus wryteth loungely vnto the Iewes, and persecuteth Triphon. He breaketh the bonde with the Iewes.

Chap. XVI.

The faithfulness of Symō & his sonnes. Ptolomy szlayeth them disceatfully, and betrayeth the londe.

The first Chapter.

AFTER that Alexander the sonne of Philippe, kyng of Macedonia wente forth of the londe of Cethim, and slewe Darius kyng of the Persias and Meedes: It happened, that he toke greate warres in honde, wanne very many stronge cities, and slew many kynges of y^e earth: goinge thorow to y^e endes of the worlde, and gettinge many spoyles of the people: In so moch, y^e worlde stode in greate awe of him,^a & therefore was he proude in his herte. Now whē he had gathered a mightie strōge hoost, & subdued y^e lōdes and people with their prynces, so that they became tributaries vnto hi: he fell sick. And whē he perceaued that he must nedes die, he called for his noble estates (which had bene brought vp with him of children) & parted his kyngdome amonge them,^b whyle he was yet alieue. So Alexāder raygned xij. yeaere, and then dyed.

After his death fell the kyngdome vnto his prynces, and they optayned it euery one in his rowme, and caused them selues to be crowned as kynges: and so dyd their childrē after them many yeaeres, & moch wickednesse increased in the worlde. Out of these came y^e vngacious rote, noble Antiochus y^e sonne of Antiochus the kyng^c (which had bene a pledge at Rome) & he raygned in y^e Cxxxvij. yeaere of the raigne of the Grekes.

In those dayes wēte there out of Israel wicked men, which moued moch people with their couēel,^d sayēge: Let vs go & make a couenaut with the Heithen, y^e are rounde aboute vs: for sence we departed from them, we haue had moch sorow. So this deuycce pleased them well, and certayne of y^e people toke vpon thē for to go vnto y^e kyng, which gaue them licence to do after the ordinaūce of the Heithen.^e Then set they vp an open scole (at Ierusalem) of the lawes of the Heithē, and were nomore circumcised: but forsoke y^e holy Testamente, and ioyned them selues to y^e Heithē,^f & were cleane solde to do myschefe.

So when Antiochus beganne to be mightie in his kyngdome, he wente aboute to optayne y^e londe of Egipte also, that he might haue the dominion of two realmes. Vpon this entred he in to Egipte^g with a stronge hoost, with charettes, elephantes, horsmen & a greate nombre of shippes, and beganne to warre agaynst Ptolomy the kyng of Egipte. But Ptolomy was afraied of him, and fled: and many of his people were wounded to death. Thus Antiochus wāne many strōge cities, and toke awaye great good out of the londe of Egipte.

And after that Antiochus had smytten Egipte, he turned agayne in the Cxliij. yeaere & wente towarde Israel,^h and came vp to Ierusalem with a mightie people: and entred proudly into y^e Sanctuary, and toke awaye the golden altare, the candilsticke and all y^e ornamētes therof: the table of the shewbred the pouring vessel, the chargers, the golden spones, the vale, the crownes and golden apparel of the temple, and brake downe all. He toke also the syluer and golde, the precious Iewels, and the secrete treasures that he foude. And when he had taken awaye alltogether, caused a greate murthur of men, and so fulfilled his malicious pryde, he departed in to his owne londe.

Thus there arose greate heuinesse and misery in all the londe of Israel. The prynces and the elders of the people mourned, the yōge men and the maydens were defyled, and the fayre beuteye of women was chaunged: the brydegrome and the bryde toke them to mournynge: the londe and those that dwelt therein, was moued: for all the house of Iacob was brought to confucion.

After two yeaeres the kyng sent his chefe treasurer vnto the cities of Iuda,ⁱ which came to Ierusalem with a greate multitude of people, speakige peaceable wordes vnto thē, but all was disceate: for when they had geuen him credence, he fell sodēly vpon the cite, and smote it sore, and destroyed moch people of Israel. And when he had spoyled the cite, he set fyre on it,^j castinge downe houses and walles on euery syde. The women & their children toke they captiue, and led awaye their catell. Then buylded they the castel of Dauid with a greate and thicke wall, and with mightie towres, and made it a stronge holde for them. Besyde all this they sett wicked people and vngodly men to kepe it, stoared it with weapons and vytalles: gathered the goodes of Ierusalem, and layed the vp there: thus became it a theuysch castell.

And this was done to laye waite for the people that wente in to the Sanctuary, and for the cruell destruction of Israel. Thus they shed innocent bloude on euery syde of y^e Sanctuary, and defyled it: In so moch that the citesyns were fayne to departe, and the cite became an habitation of straungers, be-ynge desolate of hir owne sede, for hir owne natyues were fayne to leaue her. Hir Sāctuary was clene waisted,^a hir holy dayes were turned in to mournynge, hir Sabbathes were had in derision, and hir honoure brought to naught. Loke how greate hir glory was afore, so greate was hir confucion, and hir ioye turned in to sorow.

¶ Antiochus also the kynge sent out a commission⁴ vnto all his kyngdome, that all the people shulde be one. Then they left euery man his lawe, and all the Heithen agreed to the cōmaundement of kynge Antiochus: Yee many of the Israelites consented there vnto, offerynge vnto Idols, and defylinge the Sabbath. So the kynge Antiochus sent his messaugers with his commission vnto Ierusalem, and to all y^e cities of Iuda: that they shulde folowe y^e lawes of the Heithē, and forbād ether burntofferynge, meatofferynge or peaceofferynge to be made in the temple of God, & that there shulde no Sabbath ner hye feast daye be kepte: but commaunded, that the Sanctuary and the holy people of Israel shulde be defyled.

He commaunded also that there shulde be set vp other altares, temples and Idols: to offre vp swynes flesh and other vnclene beastes: that men shulde leaue their children vncircumcised, to defyle their soules with all maner of vnclennesse & abhominacions: that they might so forget the lawe, and chaūge all the holy ordinaunces of God: and that who so euer wolde not do acordynge to the commaundement of kynge Antiochus, shulde suffre death. In like maner commaunded he thorow out all his realme, and sett rulers ouer the people, for to compell them to do these thynges, commaunding the cities of Iuda to do sacrifice vnto Idols.

Then wente the people vnto the Heithen by heapes, forsoke the lawe of the LORDE, and committed moch euell in the londe: yee and chaced out the secrete Israelites, which had hyd them selues in corners and preuy places. The xv. daye of the moneth Casleu, in the Cxlv. yeaere, set kynge Antiochus an abhominable Idol of desolacion vpon the altare of God, and they buylded altares thorow out all the cities of Iuda on euery syde, before the dores of the houses, and in the stretes: where they brent incense, and dyd sacrifice. And as for the bokes of the lawe of God, they brent them in the fyre,⁴ and rente them in peces. What so euer he was that had a boke of the Testament of the LORDE founde by hym, yee who so euer endeouered himself to kepe the lawe of the LORDE, the kynges commaundement was, y^e they shulde put him to death. And thorow his auctorite they executed these thinges euery moneth, vpon the people of Israel that were founde in the cities.

The fyue and twentye daye of the moneth,⁴ what tyme as they dyd sacrifice vpon the altare (which stode in the steade of the altare of the LORDE) accordinge to the commaundement of kynge Antiochus, they put certayne women to death, which had caused their children to be circumcised: Not only that, but they hanged vp the children by the neckes thorow out all their houses, and slewe the circumcisers of them.

Yet were there many of the people of Israel, which determed in them selues, that they wolde not eate vnclene thynges: but chose rather to suffre death, then to be defyled with vnclene meates. So because they wolde not breake the blessed lawe of God, they were cruelly slayne. And this greate tyranny increased very sore vpon the people of Israel.

The ij. Chapter.

I^N those dayes there dyd stōde vp one Matathias the sonne of Symeon the prest (out of the kynred of Ioaris) frō Ierusalem, and dwelt vpon the mount of Modin, and had v. sonnes: Ithō called Gaddis: Symon, called Thasi: Iudas, other wyse called Machabeus: Eleazer, other wyse called Abaron: and Ionathas, whose surname was Apphus. strucciō of the holy cite : ⁊ thus to syt so styll, it beyng deluyered in to the hondes of the enemies, "Hir Sanctuary is come in to the power of straungers, hir temple is, as it were a man ⁊ hath lost his good name. Hir precious ornamentes are caried awaye captiue, hir olde men are slayne in the stretes, and hir yonge men are fallen thorow the swearde of the enemies.

What people is it, that hath not some possession in hir kyngdome? Or who hath not gotten some of hir spoyle? All hir glory is taken awaye. She was a Quene, and now she is become an handmayde. Beholde our Sanctuary, oure bewtye and honoure is waisted awaye, and defyled by the Gentiles. What helpeth it vs then to lyue? And Matathias rente his clothes, he and his sonnes, and put sackcloth vpon them, ⁊ mourned very sore.

Then came the men thither which were sent of kynge Antiochus, to compell such as were fled in to the cite of Modin, for to do sacrifice and to burne incense vnto Idols, and to forsake the lawe of God. So, many of the people of Israel consented and enclnyed vnto them, but Matathias and his sonnes remayned stedfast. Then spake the commissioners of kynge Antiochus, ⁊ sayde vnto Matathias: Thou art a noble man, of hye reputacion and greate in this cite, hauinge fayre children and brethren. Come thou therfore first, and fulfill the kynges commaundemēt, like as all the Heithen haue done, yee and ⁊ men of Iuda, and soch as remayne at Ierusalem: so shalt thou and thy children be in ⁊ kynges fauoure, and enriched with golde, syluer and greate rewardes.

Matathias answered, and spake with a loud voice: Though all nacions obeye the kynge Antiochus, and fall awaie euery man frō keepyng ⁊ lawe of their fathers: though they consente to his commaundementes, yet wil I ⁊ my sonnes and my brethren, not fall from the lawe of oure fathers. God forbyd we shulde: that were not good for vs, that we shulde forsake the lawe and ordinaunces of God,^a and to agre vnto the commaundement of kynge Antiochus. Therefore we will do no soch sacrifice, nether breake the statutes of oure lawe, to go another waye. And whē he had spoken these wordes,^c there came one of the Lewes, which openly in the sight of all, dyd sacrifice vnto the Idols vpon the alter in the cite of Modin, accordinge to the kynges commaundement.

When Matathias sawe this, it greued him at the herte, so that his raynes shoke withall, and his wrath kindled for very zele of the lawe. With that he gaue a skippie forth, and kyled the lewe besyde the alter: Yee and slewe ⁊ kynges commissioner, that cōpelled him to do sacrifice, ⁊ destroyed the alter at the same time: soch a zele had he vnto the lawe of God, like as "Phinees dyd vnto Zambri the sonne of Salomi. And Matathias cried with a loud voice thorow ⁊ cite, sayenge: Who so is feruent in the lawe, ⁊ wil kepe ⁊ couenaunt, let him folowe me. So he and his sonnes fled in to the mountaynes^d and left all that euer they had in ⁊ cite. Many other godly men also departed in to the wyldernes with their children, their wyues and their catell, and remayned there: for the tyranny increased so sore vpon them.

Now when the kynges seruantes and the hoost, which was at Ierusalem in the cite of Dauid herde, that certayne mē had broken the kynges commaundement and were gone their waye to the wyldernes in to secrete places, and that there were many departed after them: they folowed vpon them to fight agaynst them in the Sabbath daye, and sayde: Wyl ye yet rebell? Get you hence ⁊ do the commaundement of kynge Antiochus, and ye shal lyue. They answered: We wil not go forth, nether wil we do the kinges cōmaundement, to defyle ⁊ Sabbath daye.^f Then beganne they to fight agaynst them neuerthelesse they gaue them none other answer, nether cast they one stone at them, ner made fast their preuy places, but sayde: We wil dye all in our innocency, heauen ⁊ earth shal testifie with vs, that ye put vs to death wrongeously. Thus they fought agaynst them vpon the Sabbath, ⁊ slewe both men and catell, their wyues and their children, to the nombre of a thousande people.

When Matathias and his frendes herde this, they mourned for them right sore, and sayde one to another: Yf so be that we all do as oure brethrē haue done, and fight not for oure lyues ⁊ for oure lawes agaynst the Heithen: then shall they the sooner rote vs out of the earth. So they cōclused amonge theselues at the same tyme, sayenge: What soeuer he be that cometh to make battayll with vs vpon the Sabbath daye, we wyll fight agaynst him, & not dye all, as oure brethren y were murdered so haynously. Vpō this came the Synagoge of the Lewes vnto thē: stronge men of Israel, all such as were feruent in the lawe. And all they that were fled for persecucion, came to helpe them, and to stonde by them: In so moch that they gathered an hoost of men, and slewe the wicked doers in their gelousy, and the vngodly men in their wrath. Some of the wicked fled vnto the Heithen, and escaped.

Thus Matathias and his frendes wente aboute, and destroyed the altuers, and circumcided the children, that had not yet receaued circumcision: as many as they founde within y coostes of Israel: and folowed mightely vpon the children of pryde, and this acte prospered in their hondes: In so moch, that they kepte the lawe agaynst the power of the Gentiles and the kynges, and gaue not ouer their dominion vnto wicked doers.

After this when the tyme drew on fast, that Matathias shulde dye, he sayde vnto his sonnes: Now is pryde and persecucion increased, now is the tyme of destruccion and wrathfull displeasure: Wherefore (o my sonnes) be ye feruent in the lawe, and ioperde youre lyues for the Testament of the fathers: call to remembraunce what actes oure fathers dyd in their tyme, so shall ye receaue greate honoure and an euerlastinge name.

Remembre Abraham,^a was not he founde faithfull in tentacion, and it was reckened vnto him for righteousnesse? Joseph in tyme of his trouble kepte the commaundement, and was made a lorde of Egipte. Phinees oure father was so feruent for the honoure of God, that he^b optayned the couenañt of an euerlastinge presthode. Iosue for fulfillinge the worde of God, was made the captayne of Israel. Caleb bare recorde before the cōgre-gacion, and receaued an heretage. Dauid also in his mercifull kyndnesse, optayned the trone of an euerlastinge kyngdome. Elias beyng gelous and feruent in the lawe, was taken vp in to heauē. Hananias, Asarias and Misael remayned stedfast in faith, and were delyuered out of the fyre. In like maner Daniel beyng vngiltie, was saued from the mouth of the Lyons.

And thus ye maye conside thorow out all ages sens the worlde beganne,^c that who so euer put their trust in God, were not ouer come. Feare not ye then the wordes of an vngodly man, for his glory is but donge and wormes: to daye is he set vp, and to morow is he gone: for he is turned in to earth, and his memoriall is come to naught. Wherefore (o my sonnes) take good hertes vnto you, and quyte youre selues like men in the lawe: for yf ye do the thinges that are commaunded you in the lawe of the LORDE youre God, ye shal obtaine greate honoure therein.

And beholde, I knowe that youre brother Symon is a man of wysdome: se that ye geue eare vnto him allwaye, he shall be a father vnto you. As for Iudas Machabeus, he hath euer bene mightie and strōge from his youth vp: let him be youre captayne, and ordre the battayll of y people: Thus shall ye bryng vnto you all those that fauoure the lawe, and se that ye auege the wronge of youre people, and recompence the Heithen agayne, and applie youre selues whole to the commaundement of the lawe. So he gaue them his blessinge, and was layed by his fathers: and dyed in the Cxlvj. yeare at Modin, where his sonnes buried him in his fathers sepulcre, & all Israel made greate lamentacion for him.

The iij. Chapter.

THEN stode vp Iudas Machabeus in his fathers steade,^d and all his brethrē helped him: and so dyd all they that helde with his father, and fought with cherefulness for Israel. So Iudas gat his people greate honoure: He put on a brest plate as a gaunte, and arayed him self with his harnesse, and defended the hoost with his swearde. In his actes he was like a lyon, & as a lyons whelp roaringe at his praye. He was an enemie to the wicked,^e and hūted them out: and brent vp those, that vexed his people: So that his enemies fled for feare of him, and all the workers of vngodlynnes were put to trouble:

soch lucke and prosperite was in his honde. This greued dyuerse kynges, but Iacob was greatly reioysed thorow his actes, and he gat him self a greate name for euer.

He wente thorow the cities of Iuda, destroyenge the vngodly out of them, turnynge awaye the wrath from Israel, and receauynge soch as were oppressed: and the fame of him wente vnto the vtmost parte of y^e earth. Then Appollonius (a prynce of Syria) gathered a mightie greate hoost of the Heithen & out of Samaria, to fight agaynst Israel. Which when Iudas perceaued, he wente forth to mete him, fought with him, slewe him, and a greate multitude with him: the remnaunte fled, and he toke their substaunce. Iudas also toke Appollonius owne swearde, and fought with it all his life longe.

B Now when Seron (another prynce of Siria) herde saye, that Iudas had gathered vnto him the congregacion and church of the faithfull, he sayde: I will get me a name and a prayse thorow out the realme: for I will go fight with Iudas and them that are with him, as many as haue despised the kynges commaundement. So he made him ready, and there wente with him a greate mightie hoost of the vngodly, to stonde by him, and to be auenged of the childre of Israel. And when they came nye vnto Bethoron, Iudas wente forth agaynst them with a small company. And when his people sawe such a greate hoost before the, they sayde vnto Iudas: How are we able (beynge so fewe) to fight agaynst so greate a multitude and so stronge? seinge we be so weery, and haue fasted all this daye?

C But Iudas sayde: ^a It is a small matter for many to be ouer come with fewe: Yee there is no difference to the God of heauen, to de-lyuer by a greate multitude or by a small company: ^b for the victory of the battell stonde-eth not in the multitude of the hoost, but the strength commeth from heauen. Beholde, they come agaynst vs with a presumptuous and proude multitude: to destroye vs, oure wyues and oure children, and to robbe vs. But we will fight for oure lyues and for oure lawes, and the LORDE himself shall destroye the before oure face: therefore be not ye afraied of them.

As soone as he had spoken these wordes, he leapte sodenly vpon the. Thus was Seron smytten, and his hoost put to flight, and Iudas folowed vpon them beyonde Bethoron vnto the playne felde: where there were slayne eight hundred men of them, and the residue fled in to the londe of the Philistynes. Then all the Heithen on euery syde were afraied for Iudas and his brethren: so y^e rumoure of him came vnto the kynges eares, for all the Gentiles coude tell of the warres of Iudas.

D So whan kynge Antiochus herde these tidinges, he was angrie in his mynde: wherefore he sente forth and gathered an hoost of his whole realme, very stronge armies: and opened his treasury, and gaue his hoost a yeaeres wagies in honde, commaundyng them to be ready at all tymes.

Neuerthelesse when he sawe, that there was not moneye ynough in his treasuries, and that thorow the discorde and persecucion, which he made in y^e londe (to put downe y^e lawes that had bene of olde tyme) his customes and tributes of the londe were mynisched: he feared that he was not able for to beare the costes and charges eny lenger, ner to haue soch giftes, to geue so liberally as he dyd a fore, more then the kynges that were before him.

Wherefore he was heuy in his mynde, and thought to go in to Persides, for to take tributes of y^e londe, and so to gather moch moneye. So he left Lysias (a noble man of the kynges bloude) to ouersee the kynges busynesses, from the water Euphrates vnto the borders of Egipte: and to kepe well his sonne Antiochus, till he came agayne.

E Morouer, he gaue him half of his hoost and elephantes, committed vnto him euery thinge of his mynde, concernynge those which dwelt in Iuda, and Ierusalem: that he shulde sende out an army agaynst them, to destroye and to rote out the power of Israel and the remnaunt of Ierusalem: to put out their memoriall from that place, to set straungers for to inhabit all their quarters, and to parte their londe amoge them. ^f Thus the kynge toke the other parte of the hoost, and departed from Antioch (a cite of his realme) ouer the water of Euphrates, in the hundreth and xlvij. yeaer, and wente thorow the hye countrees.

^g And Lysias chose vnto him Ptolomy the sonne of Doriminus, Nycanor and Gorgias mightie men, ⁊ the kynges frendes. These he sent with xl. thousande fote men and vij. thousande horsmen, for to go in to þ̄ londe of Iuda, and to destroye it, as the kyng commaunderd. So they wente forth with all their power, and came to Emmaus in to the playne felde. When the marchautes herde the rumoure of them, they and their seruantes toke very moch siluer and golde, for to bye the children of Israel to be their bonde men. There came vnto them also yet moo men of warre on euery syde, out of Syria ⁊ thē from the Palestynes.

¶ Now when Iudas and his brethrē sawe that trouble increased, and that the hoost drew nye vnto their borders : consideringe þ̄ kynges wordes which he commaunderd vnto the people : namely, that they shulde vterly waiste and destroye them : They sayde one to another : Let vs redresse the decaye of oure people, let vs fight for oure folke and for oure Sanctuary. Then the congregacion were soone ready gathered to fight, to praie and to make supplicacion vnto God for mercy and grace.

As for Ierusalem, it laye voyde, and was as it had bene a wyldernes. There wente no man in nor out at it, and the Sanctuary was troden downe. The aleautes kepthe the castell, there was the habitacion of the Heithen. The myrth of Iacob was taken awaye, the pype ⁊ the harpe was gone from amonge them.

The Israelites gathered them together, and came to Maspha before Ierusalem : for in Maspha was the place where they prayed afore tyme. So they fasted that daye, and put sackclothes vpō them, cast aszshes vpon their heades, rente their clothes, and layde forth the bokes of the lawe (wherout þ̄ Heithen sought the licknesse of their ymages) and brought the prestes ornamentes, the firstlinges and the Tythes. They set there also the absteyners (which had fulfilled their dayes) before God, and cried with a loude voyce towarde heauen, sayenge : what shal we do with these ? and whither shall we cary them awaye ?

¶ For thy Sanctuary is troden downe and defyled, thy prestes are come to heynesesse and dishonoure : and beholde, the Heithen are come together for to destroye vs. Thou knowest what thiges they ymagyn against vs. How maye we stonde before them, excepte thou (o God) be oure helpe ?

They blewe out the trompettes also with a loude voyce. Then Iudas ordened captaynes ouer the people : ouer thousandes, ouer hundredes, ouer fiftie, and ouer ten. But as for soch as buylded them houses, married wyues, planted them vynyardes, and those that were fearfull : he commaunderd them euery man to go home, acordinge to þ̄ lawe. So the hoost removed, and pitched vpon the South syde of Emmaus.

And Iudas sayde : Arme youre selues, be stronge (o my children) make you ready agaynst tomorow in the mornynge, that ye maye fight with these people, which are agreed together to destroye vs ⁊ oure Sanctuary. Better is it for vs to dye in battayll, then to se oure people and oure Sanctuary in such a miserable case. Neuerthelesse, as þ̄ will is in heauen, so be it.

Chap. iiii. Chapter.

THEN toke Gorgias fyue thousande men of fote, and a thousande of the best horsmen : and remoued by night, to come nye where þ̄ Iewes hoost laye, and so to slaye them sodenly. Now the men that kepthe the castell, were the cōueyers of them. Then arose Iudas to smyte the chefe and pryncipall of the kinges hoost at Emmaus, for the army was not yet come together. In the meane season came Gorgias by night in to Iudas tentes : ⁊ when he founde no man there, he sought them in the moūtaynes, and thought they had bene fled awaye because of him. But whē it was daie, Iudas shewed himself in þ̄ felde with thre thousande men only, which had nether harnesse ner sweardes to their myndes.

But on the other syde, they sawe that the Heithen were mightie and wel harnessed, and their horsmen aboute them, and all these wel experte in fettes of warre. Then sayde Iudas to þ̄ men that were with him : Feare not ye the multitude of them, be not afayed of their violente runnyng : remembre how oure fathers were deluyered in the reed see, when Pharao threatned them with a greate hoost. ^aEuen so let vs also crie now towarde heauen: and the LORDE shall haue mercy vpon vs, and remembre the couenaunt of oure fathers, yee and destroye this hoost before oure face this daye: And all Heithen shal knowe, that it is God himself, which delyuereth and saueth Israel.

B Then the Heithen lift vp their eyes: and when they sawe that they were commynge agaynst them, they wente out of their tentes in to the battayll: and they that were with Iudas, blewv vp the trompettes. So they ^bbuckled together, and the Heithen were discomfited, and fled ouer the playne felde: but the hymnost of them were slayne. For they folowed vpon them vnto Assaremoth, and in to the feldes of Idumea towarde Azot and Iamnia: so that there were slayne of them vpon a thre thousande men. So Iudas turned agayne with his hoost, and sayde vnto the people: Be not gredy of ^cƿ spoyle, we haue yet a battayll to fight: for Gorgias ^cƿ his hoost are here by vs in the mountaynes, but stonde ye fast agaynst oure enemies, and ouercome them: then maye ye safely take the spoyle.

C As Iudas was speakynge these wordes, there apered one parte of them vpon the mount. But when Gorgias sawe that they of his partie were fled, and the tentes brent vp (for by the smoke they might vnderstonde what was done) they perceauynge this, were very sore afraied: and when they sawe also that Iudas and his hoost were in ^cƿ felde ready to stryke battayll, they fled euerychone in to the londe of the Heithen.

So Iudas turned agayne to spoyle the tentes, where they gat moch golde and syluer, precious stones, purple ^cƿ greate riches. Thus they wente home, and sunge a Psalme of thankesgeuyng and ^cƿ prayed God in heauen: for he is gracious, and his mercy endureth for euer: And so Israel had a greate victory in that daye.

Now all the Heithen that escaped, came and tolde Lysias euery thinge as it happened. Wherefore Lysias was sore afraied and greued in his mynde, because Israel had not gottē soch mysfortune as he wolde they shulde, nether as the kynge ^acommaunded. The nexte yere folowinge, gathered Lysias thre score thousande chosen men of fote, and fyue thousande horsmen, to fight agaynst them.

So they came in to Iewry, and pitched their tentes at Bethoron, where Iudas came agaynst them with ten thousande men. And when he sawe so greate mightie an hoost, he made his prayer and sayde: Blessed be thou (o sauoure of Israel) which diddest ^c destroye the violent power of the giaunte, in the honde of thy seruauant Dauid, and gauest the hoost of the Heithē in to the honde of Ionathas (the sonne of ^c Saul) and of his weapen bearer.

Put this hoost now in to the honde of thy people of Israel, and let them be confounded in their multitude and horsmen. Make them afraied, ^cƿ discomforth the boldnes of their strength, ^cƿ they maye be moued thorow their destruccion. Cast them downe thorow the swearde of thy louers, then shal all they that knowe thy name, prayse the with thankesgeuyng.

So they stroke the batell, and there were slayne of Lysias hoost, fyue thousande men. Then Lysias seynge the discomfytynge of his men, and the manlynesse of the Iewes, how they were ready, ether to lyue or to dye like men: He wente vnto Antioche and chose out men of warre: that when they were gathered together, they might come agayne in to Iewry. Then sayde Iudas and his brethren: beholde, oure enemies are discomfited: Let vs now go vp, to clēse and to repayre the Sanctuary.

Vpon this, all the hoost gathered them together, and wente vp vnto mount Sion. Now when they sawe the ^c Sanctuary laied waist, the aluter defyled, the dores brent vp, the shrubbes growinge in the courtes, like as in a wod or vpon mountaynes, yee and that the prestes Celles were broken downe: They rente their clothes, made greate lamentacion, cast aszshes vpon their heades, fell downe flat to the grounde, made a greate noyse with the trompettes, and cried towarde heauen.

Then Iudas apoynted certayne men to fight against those which were in the castel, till they had clensed the Sanctuary. So he chose prestes ^cƿ were vndefyled, such as had pleasure in the lawe of God: and they clensed the Sanctuary, ^cƿ bare out the defyled stones in to an vncleane place. And for so much as the altar of burntofferings was vnhalowed, he toke aduysment, what he might do withall: so he thought it was best to destroye it (lest it shulde happen to do them eny shame) for the Heithen had defyled it, & therfore they brake it downe. As for the stones, they layed them vp vpon the mountayne by the house in a conuenient place: till there came a prophet to shewe, what shulde be done with them.

¶ So they toke whole stones accordinge to the lawe,^a and buylded a new altar such one as was before, and made vp the Sanctuary within and without, and halowed the courtes. They made new ornamentes, & brought f̃ candilstickes, the altar of incense, and the table in to the temple. The incense layed they vpon the altar, & lighted the lampes which were vpon the candilstickes, that they might burne in the temple. They set the shewbred vpon the table, and hanged vp the vail, and set vp f̃ temple, as it was afore. ^aAnd vpon the xxv. daye of the ix. moneth (which is called the moneth of Casleu) in the C.xlvij. yeare: they rose vp by tymes in the mornynge for to do sacrifice (accordinge to the lawe) vpon the new burnt offrynge altar, that they had made: after the tyme and season that f̃ Heithen had defyled it. The same daye was it set vp agayne, with songes pipes, harpes and cymbales.

¶ And all the people fell vpon their faces, worshippyng and thankyng the God of heauen, which had geuen them the victory. ^cSo they kepte the dedication of the altar viij. dayes, offerynge burnt sacrifices and thankofferings with gladnesse. They deckte the temple also with crownes and shyldes of golde, and halowed the portes and celles, and hanged dores vpon them. Thus was there very greate gladnes amonge the people, because the blasphemy of the Heithē was put awaye.

So Iudas and his brethren with the whole cōgregation of Israel, ordered, that the tyme of the dedicacō^d of f̃ altar shulde be kepte in his season from yeare to yeare, by the space of viij. dayes, from the xxv. daye of the moneth Casleu: yee and that with myrth and gladnesse.

And at the same tyme buylded they vp f̃ mount Sion with hye walles and stronge towres rounde aboute: lest f̃ Gentiles shulde come and treade it downe, as they dyd afore. ^eTherfore Iudas set men of warre in it, to kepe it: and made it stronge, for to defende Bethsura: that the people might haue a refuge agaynst the Edomites.

The 6. Chapter.

¶ It happened also that when f̃ Heithen ^hrounde aboute herde, how that the altar and the Sanctuary were set vp in their olde estate: it displeased them very sore, wherfore they thought to destroye the generacion of Iacob that was amonge them: In so much that they beganne to slaye and to persecute certayne of f̃ people. ⁱThen Iudas fought against the children of Esau in Idumea, and agaynst those which were at Arabathane^j (for they dwelt rounde aboute f̃ Israelites) where he slewe & spoyled a greate multitude of thē. He thought also vpon the malice and vnfaithfulness of the children of Bean, how they were a snare and stoppe vnto f̃ people, and how they layed waite for them in the hie waye: wherfore he shut them vp in to towers, and came vnto them, condemned them, and brent vp their towres, with all that were in them.

Afterwarde wente he agaynst the children of Ammon, wherof he founde a mightie power and a greate multitude of people, with Timothy their captayne. So he stroke many battayls with them, which were destroyed before him. And when he had slayne them, he wanne Gazer the cite, with the townes belonginge therto, and so turned agayne in to Iewry. The Heithen also in Galaad gathered them together, agaynst the Israelites that were in their quarters, to slaye them: but they fled to the castel of Datheman, and sent letters vnto Iudas and his brethren, sayenge: ^kThe Heithen are gathered agaynst vs on euery syde, to destroye vs, and now they make thē for to come and laye sege to f̃ castel, whervnto we are fled, & Timothy is the captayne of their hoost: come therfore, and delyuer vs out of their hondes: for there is a greate multitude of vs slayne all ready. men) and their wyues, their children and their goodes haue the enemies led awaye captiue.

Whyلة these letters were yet a readinge, beholde, there came other messaügers from Galilee, with rente clothes: which tolde euen the same tydings, and sayde, that they of Ptolomais, of Tirus and of Sidon were gathered agaynst them, and that all Galilee was fylled with enemies to destroye Israel. When Iudas and ȝ people herde this, they came together (a greate congregacion) ^ato deuyse, what they might do for their brethren, that were in trouble and beseged of their enemies. And Iudas sayde vnto Symon his brother: chose ȝ out certayne men, and go deluyuer thy brethren in Galilee: As for me and my brother Ionathas, we wyl go in to Galaadithim. So he left Iosephus ȝ sonne of Zachary, and Asarias, to be captaynes of the people and to kepe the remnaunt of the hoost in Iewry, ȝ commaunded them, sayenge: Take the ouersight of this people, and se that ye make no warre agaynst the Heithen, vntill the tyme that we come agayne. And vnto Simon he gaue thre thousande men for to go in to Galilee, but Iudas himself had eight thousande in to Galaadithim.

Then wente Symon in to Galilee, and stroke dyuerse batels with the Heithen: whom he discomfited, and folowed vpon them vnto the porte of Ptolomais. And there were slayne of the Heithen almost iij. thousande men. So he toke the spoyles of them, and caried awaye the Israelites (that were in Galilee and Arbatis) with their wyues, their children and all that they had, and brought them in to Iewry with greate gladnesse. Iudas Machabeus also and his brother Ionathas, wente ouer Iordane, and traualyed iij. dayes iourney in the wyldernes: Where the Nebuthees met them, and receaued them loungly, and tolde the euery thinge that had happened vnto their brethren in Galaadithim, and how that many of them were beseged in Barasa, Bosor, Alimis, Casphor, Mageth and Carnaim (all these are stronge walled and mightie greate cities) and ȝ they were kepte in other cities of Galaad also: and tomorrow they are apoynted to brynge their hoost vnto these cities, to take them and to wynde them in one daye.

^a 2 Mac. 8. c.

So Iudas and his hoost turned in all the haist in the wilderness toward Bosor, and wanne the cite, slewe all the males with the swearde, toke all their goodes, and set fyre vpon the cite. And in the night they toke their iourneye from thence, and came to the castell. And by tymes in the mornynge when they loked vp, beholde, there was an innumerable people bearynge laders and other instrumetes of warre, to take the castell and to ouer come them.

When Iudas sawe that the battayll beganne, and that the noyse therof wente vp and range in to the Heauen, and that there was so greate a crie in the cite: He sayde vnto his hoost: fight this daye for youre brethren. And so came behynde their enemies in thre companies, and blew v the trompettes, and cried in their prayer to God.

But as soone as Tymothis hoost perceaued that Machabeus was there, they fled from him, and ȝ other slewe them downe right sore: so that there were kyllod of them that same daye, almost eight thousande men. Then departed Iudas vnto Maspha, layed sege vnto it and wanne it, slewe all the males in it, spoyled it, and set fyre vpon it. From thence wente he and toke Casbon, Mageth, Bosor and the other cities in Galaad.

After this gathered Timothy another hoost, which pitched their tentes before Raphon^b beyonde the water. Iudas sent to spye the hoost, and they brought him worde againe, sayenge: All the Heithen that be rounde aboute vs, are gathered vnto him, and the hoost is very greate: Yee they haue hyred the Arabians to helpe them, ȝ haue pitched their tentes beyonde the water, and are ready to come and fight agaynst the. So Iudas wente on to mete them.

And Timothy sayde vnto the captaynes of his hoost: when Iudas and his hoost come nye the ryuer: yf he go ouer first, we shall not be able to withstonde him: for why, he wil be to stronge for vs. But yf he darre not come ouer, so that he pitch his tente beyonde the water: then will we go ouer, for we shalbe stronge ynough agaynst him. Now as soone as Iudas came to the ryuer, he apoynted certayne scribes of the people, and commaunded them, sayenge: se that ye leaue none behynde vpon this syde of ȝ ryuer, but let euery man come to the battayll. So he wente first ouer vnto them, and his people after him.

And all the Heithen were discomfited before him, and let their weapens fall, and ranne in to the temple that was at Carnaim. Which cite Iudas wanne, and brent the temple with all ^f that were in it: So was Carnaim subdued, and might not withstode Iudas. Then Iudas gathered all the Israelites that were in Galaadithim, from ^f leest vnto the most, with their wyues and their children (a very greate hoost) for to come in to the londe of Iuda.

Wherefore Iudas commanded a proclamacion to be made thorow out the hoost, that euery man shulde kepe his ordre: and so they dyd their best like valeaunt men.

And Iudas beseged the cite all that daie and all that night, and so wanne it: where they slewe as many as were males, and destroyed the cite, and spoyled it, and wete thorow all the cite ouer them that were slayne. Then wente they ouer Iordane in to the playne felde before Bethsan. And Iudas helped those forwarde that came behynde, and gaue the people good exortacion all ^f waye thorow, till they were come in to the londe of Iuda. Thus they wente vp vnto the mount Sion, where they offred with myrth and thankesgeuyng:^c because there were none of them tyme, but came home agayne peaceably.

Now what tyme as Iudas and Ionathas were in the londe of Galaad, and Symon their brother in Galilee before Ptolomais: Then Iosephus the sonne of Zachary and Asarias the captaynes, hearinge of the actes that were done and of the battels that were stroken, sayde: Let vs get vs a name also, and go fight agaynst the Heithen that are rounde aboute vs.

So they gaue their hoost a commande-^fment, and wente towarde Iamnia. Then came Gorgias and his men out of the cite, to fight agaynst them: Iosephus also and Asarias were chased vnto ^f borders of Iewry, ^f there were slayne ^f daye of ^f people of Israel ij. M. men: so ^f there was a greate misery amōge ^f people, ^f all because they were not obediēt vnto Iudas ^f his brethren, but ^f thought they shulde quyte them selues manfully. Neuertheles they came not of the sede of these men, by whom Israel was helped. But the men that were with Iudas, were greatly commended in the sight of all Israel and all Heithen, where so euer their name was herde vpō, and the people came vnto them byddinge them welcome.

After this wente Iudas forth with his brethren, and fought agaynst the children of Esau, in the londe ^f lieth toward the south where he wanne the cite of Hebron and the townes that lye besyde it: and as for the walles and towres rounde aboute it, he brent them vp. Then remoued he to go in to the lōde of the Philistines, and wente thorow Samaria. At the same tyme were there many prestes slaine in ^f battayll, which wilfully ^f without advysement wente out for to fight to get them honoure. And when Iudas came to Azot in the Philistynes londe, he brake downe their altares,^d brent the ymages of their Idols, spoyled the cities, and came agayne in to the londe of Iuda.

The vi. Chapter.

^a NOW when kyng Antiochus trauallyd thorow the hye countrees,^e he herde that Elymas in Persia was a noble and plenteous cite in siluer and golde, ^f that there was in it a very rich temple: where as were clothes, cote armoures and shyldes of golde, which Alexander the sonne of Philippe kyng of Macedonia had left behynde him. Wherefore he wente aboute to take the cite and to spoyle it, but he was not able: for ^f citisēs were warned of it, ^f fought with him. And so he fled, and departed with greate heuynesse, ^f came agayne in to Babilon. Morouer there came one which brought him tidinges in Perside,^a ⁊ his hostes which were in the londe of Iuda, were dryuen awaye, and how that Lisias wente forth first with a greate power, and was dryuen awaye of the Iewes: how they had wonne the victory, and gotten greate goodes out of the hostes that perished: how they had broken downe the abhominacion, which he set vp vpon the altare at Ierusalem,^b and fenced the Sanctuary with hye walles, like as it was afore: yee and Bethsura his cite also.

33 So it chaunced, that when the kinge had herde these wordes, he was afraied and greued very sore. Wherefore he layed him downe vpon his bed, and fell sicke for very sorowe: and all because it had not happened as he had deysed. And there continued he longe, for his grefe was euer more and more, so ⁊ he sawe he must nedes dye. Therfore he sent for his frendes, ⁊ sayde vnto them: ⁊ slepe is gone fro mine eyes, for ⁊ very sorowe and vexacio of herte ⁊ I haue. For when I cōsidre in my mynde ⁊ greate aduersitie ⁊ I am come vnto and the floudes of heuynesse which I am in, where as afore tyme I was so mery, and so greatly set by (by reason of my power) Againe, cōsideringe ⁊ euell ⁊ I haue done at Ierusalē, from whence I toke all ⁊ riches of golde and syluer ⁊ were in it, ⁊ sent to fetch awaye the inhabitours of Iewry without eny reason why: I knowe, ⁊ these troubles are come vpon me for the same cause. And beholde, I must dye with greate sorow in a straunge londe.

Then called he for one Philippe a frende of his, whom he made ruler of all his realme and gaue him the crowne, his robe and his rynge: that he shulde take his sonne Antiochus vnto him and brynge him vp, till he might raigne himself. ^c So the kyng Antiochus dyed there, 34 in the Cxlix. yere. When Lysias knewe that the kyng was deed,^d he ordered Antiochus his sonne (whom he had brought vp) to raigne in his fathers steade, and called him Eupator. Now they that were in the castel (at Ierusalem) kepte in the Iewes rounde aboute the Sactuary, and sought euer styll to do them harme, for the strengthenyng of the Heithen.

Wherefore Iudas thought to destroye them, and called all the people together, ⁊ they might laye sege vnto them. So they came together in the Cl. yere, and beseged the layenge forth their ordinaunce and instrumentes of warre. Then certayne of them ⁊ were beseged wente forth (vnto whom some vngodly men of Israel ioyned the selues also) and wente vnto the kyng, sayēge: How longe wil it be, or thou punysh and avenge oure brethren? We haue bene euer mynded to do thy father seruyce, to walke in his statutes, and to obeye his commaundementes: Therfore oure people fell from vs, and where so euer they founde eny of vs, they slewe them: and they haue not only medled with vs, but with all oure countrees: and beholde, this daye are they beseginge the castell at Ierusalem, and haue made vp the stronge holde in Bethsura: And yf thou doest not preuente them right soone, they wil do more then these, and thou shalt not be able to ouercome them.

When the kyng herde this, he was very angrie,^e and called all his frendes, the captaynes of his fote men and of all his horse men together. He hyred men of warre also out of other realmes and out of the Iles of the see, which came vnto him. And the nombre of his hoost was an hundreth thousande fote men, and twentye thousande horsmē, ⁊ xxxij. Elephantes wel exercised to battayll. ^f These came thorow Idumea vnto Bethsura, and beseged it a longe season, and made dyuerse instrumentes of warre agaynst it. But the Iewes came out and brent them, and fought like men. Then departed Iudas from the castell at Ierusalem, and remoued ⁊ hoost towarde Bethzacarā ouer agaynst the kynges armye.

So the kyng arose before the daye, and brought the power of his hoost in to ⁊ waie to Bethzacaran, where the hostes made them to the battayll, blowyng the trompettes. ^g And to prouoke the Elephantes for to fight, they shewed them the sappe of reed grapes and molberies. And deuyded the Elephantes amonge the hoost: so that by euery Elephante there stode a M. men wel harnesssed, and helmettes of stele vpon their heades: Yee vnto euery one of the Elephantes also, were ordered v. C. horsmen of the best, which waited of the Elephante, goinge where so euer he wente, and departed not from him. Euery Elephante was couered with a ströge tower of wod, where vpon were xxxij. va-leaunt men with weapens to fight, & within it was a man of Inde to rule the beest.

As for the remnaunt of the horsmen, he set them vpon both the sydes in two partes with trompettes, to prouoke the hoost, and to stere vp soch as were slowe in the armye. And when the Sonne shone vpon their shyldes of golde and stele, the mountaynes glistered agayne at them, & were as bright as the creszhettes of fyre. The kynges hoost also was deuyded, one parte vpon the hie mountaynes, the other lowe beneth: so they wente on, takynge good hede, and kepinge their ordre. And all they that dwelt in the londe, were afrayed at the noyse of their hoost, when the multitude wente forth, and when the weapens smote together, for the hoost was both greate & mightie. Iudas also and his hoost entred in to the battayll, and slewe vj. C. men of the kynges armye.

Now when Eleasar the Sonne of Saura dyd se one of ʒ Elephantes deckte with the kynges badge, and was a more goodly beest the other: He thought ʒ kyng shulde be vpō him, and ioperde himself to delyuer his people, and to get him a perpetuall name.

Wherefore he ranne with a corage vnto the Elephante in the myddest of the hoost, smytynge them downe of both the sydes, and slewe many aboute him. So wente he to the Elephantes fete, and gat him vnder him, and slewe him: then fell the Elephante downe vpon him, and there he dyed. Iudas also and his men seinge the power of the kyng and the mightie violence of his hoost, departed from them. And the kynges armye wente vp agaynst them towarde Ierusalem, and pitched their tentes in Lewry besyde mount Sion. Morouer the kyng toke truce with them that were in Bethsura.^a

But when they came out of the cite^b (because they had no vytales within, and the londe laye vntylled) the kyng toke Bethsura, and set men to kepe it, & turned his hoost to the place of the Sanctuary, and layed sege to it a greate whyle. Where he made all maner ordinaunce: handbowes, fyrie dartes, rackettes to cast stones, scorpions to shute arowes, and slynges. The Iewes also made ordinaunce agaynst theirs, and fought a longe season.

But in the cite there were no vytayles, for it was the seuenth yeare of the warres, and those Heithen that remayned in Lewry had eaten vp all their stoare. And in the Sanctuary were few men left, for the hunger came so vpon them, that they were scatered abroad euery man to his owne place.

So when Lysias herde, that Philippe^c (whom Antiochus the kyng whyle he was yet lyuinge, had ordered to bringe vp Antiochus his sonne, that he might be kyng) was come agayne out of Persia and Media with the kynges hoost, and thought to optayne the kyngdome: He gat him to the kyng in all the haist and to the captaynes of the hoost, and sayde: we decrease daylie, and oure vytales are but small: Agayne, the place that we laye sege vnto, is very stronge, and it were oure parte to se for the realme. Let vs agre with these men and take truce with them, and with all their people, and graunte them to lyue after their lawe, as they dyd afore. For they be greued and do all these thinges agaynst vs, because we haue despyred their lawe. So the kyng and the prynces were content, and sent vnto them to make peace, and they receaued it. Now whē the kyng and the prynces had made an ooth vnto them, they came out of the castel, and the kyng wēte vp to mount Sion. But when he sawe that ʒ place was wel fenced, he brake the ooth that he had made, and commaunded to destroye the wall rounde aboute. Then departed he in all the haist, and returned vnto Antioche, where he founde Philippe hauynge dominion of the cite. So he fought agaynst him, and toke the cite agayne in to his hondes.

The viij. Chapter.

IN the Clj. yeare came^d Demetrius ʒ sonne^e of Seleucus from ʒ cite of Rome with a small company of men, vnto a cite of the see coast, and there he bare rule. And it chaunced, that when he came to Antioch the cite of his Progenitours, his hoost toke Antiochus and Lysias, to bringe them vnto him. But when it was tolde him, he saide: let me not se their faces. So the hoost put them to death. Now when Demetrius was set vpon the trone of his kyngdome, there came vnto him wicked and vngodly men of Israel: whose captayne was Alcimus, that wolde haue bene made hye prest. These men accused the people of Israel vnto the kyng, sayenge: Iudas and his brethren haue slayne thy frendes, and dryuen vs out of oure owne londe. Wherefore sende now some man (to whom thou geuest credence) that he maye go and se all the destruction, which he hath done vnto vs and to the kynges londe, and let him be punished with all his frēdes and fauourers.

Then the kyng chose Bachides a frende of his, which was a man of greates power in the realme (beyond the greates water) and faithfull vnto the kyng: and sent him to se the destruction that Iudas had done. And as for that wicked Alcimus, he made him hye Prest, and commaunded him to be auenged of the children of Israel. So they stode vp, and came with a greates hoost in to the londe of Iuda, sendinge messaūgers to Iudas and his brethren, speakinge vnto them with peaceable wordes: but vnder disceate. Therefore Iudas and his people beleued not their saūge,^a for they sawe they were come with a greates hoost.

After this came the scribes together vnto Alcimus and Bachides, trustinge the best vnto them. And first, the Assideans requyred peace of them, sayenge: Alcimus thy prest is come of the sede of Aarō, how can he disceauē vs? So they gaue them louige wordes, and swore vnto them, and sayde: we wil do you no harme, nether youre frendes: and they beleued them. But the very same daye toke they lx. men of them, and slewe the: accordinge to the wordes they are writtē: They haue cast thy flesh of thy sanctes, and shed their bloude rōūde aboute Ierusalē,^b and there was nomā they wolde bury the.

So there came a greates feare and drede amonge the people, sayenge: there is nether treuth nor righteousnesse in them, for they haue brokē the appoyntment and ooth that they made. And Bachides remoued his hoost from Ierusalem, and pitched his tente at Bethzecha: where he sent forth, and toke many of them that had forsaken him: He slewe many of the people also, and cast them in to a greates pytt. Then committed he the londe vnto Alcimus, and left men of warre with him to helpe him, and Bachides himself wente vnto the kyng. And thus Alcimus defended his hie presthode, and all such as vexed Israel, resorted vnto him: In so much that they optayned the lōde of Iuda, and dyd moch euell vnto the Israelites.

Now when Iudas sawe all the myschefe that Alcimus and his company had done (yee more then the Heithē them selues) vnto the Israelites: He wente forth rōūde aboute all the borders of Lewry, and punyshed those vnfaithfull rennagates, so that they came no more out in to the countre. So whē Alcimus sawe, that Iudas and his people had gotten the vpperhande, and that he was not able to abyde them: he wente agayne to the kyng, and sayde all the worst of them that he coude. Then the kyng sent Nicanor, one of his chefe prynces (which bare euell wyl vnto Israel) and commaunded him, that he shulde vtterly destroye the people.

So Nicanor came to Ierusalem with a greates hoost,^c and sent vnto Iudas and his brethren with frendly wordes (but vnder disceate) sayenge: there shal be no warre betwixte me and you: I wil come with a few men, to se how ye do, with frenshipe. Vpon this he came vnto Iudas, and they saluted one another peaceably: but the enemies were appoynted to take Iudas by violence. Neuertheles it was tolde Iudas, they came vnto him but vnder disceate: wherefore he gat him awaie from him, and wolde se his face nomore. When Nicanor perceaued thes his counsell was bewrayed, he wente out to fight agaynst Iudas, besyde Capharsalama: Where there were slayne of Nicanors hoost, v. M. men: the residue fled vnto the castell of Dauid.

After this came Nicanor vp vnto moūt Sion: and the prestes with the elders of the people wente forth to salute him peaceably, and to shewe him the burnt sacrifices they were offered for the kyng. But he laughed the to scorne, mocked the, defyled their offeringes, and spake diszdainedly, yee and swore in his wroth, sayenge: Yf Iudas and his hoost be not deluyered now in to my hondes, as soone as euer I come agayne (and fayre well) I shal burne vp this house. With that, wente he out in a greates anger. Then the prestes came in, and stode before the aluter of the tēple, wepinge and sayenge: For so moch as thou (o LORDE) hast chosen this house, that thy name might be called vpon therein, and they it shulde be an house of praier and petition^a vn to thy people: Be avenged of this mā t̄ his hoost, and let them be slayne with ſ̄ ſwearde: remembre the blasphemies of them, t̄ ſuffre them not to continue eny longer.

When Nicanor was gone from Ierusalem, he pitched his tente at Bethoron, and there an hoost met hi out of Siria. And Iudas came to Adarsa with iij. M. mē, t̄ made his prayer vnto God, sayenge: O LORDE, because the messaugers of kynge Senacherib blasphemed the, the angel wente forth, and slewe an Clxxxv. thousande of them: 'Euen so destroye thou this hoost before vs to daie that other people maye knowe, how that he hath blasphemed thy Sanctuary: and punysh him, accordinge to his maliciounesse.

f And so the hostes stroke the felde, the thirteinte daye of the moneth Adar: and Nicanors hoost was discomfited, and he himself was first slayne in the battayll. 'When Nicanors men of warre sawe that he was kylled, they cast awaye their weapens and fled: but the Iewes folowed vpon them an whole dayes iourney, from Adazer vnto Gazara, blowinge with the trompettes, and makinge tokens after them. So the Iewes came forth of all the townes there aboute, and blew out their hornes vpon them, and turned agaynst them: Thus were they all slayne, and not one of them lefte.

Then they toke their substaunce for a pray, and smote of Nicanors heade t̄ his right honde ('which he helde vp so proudly) and brought it with them, and haged it vp afore Ierusalem. Wherefore the people were exceedingly reioysed, and passed ouer that daye in greate gladnesse. And Iudas ordered, that ſ̄ same daye (namely the xij. daye of ſ̄ moneth Adar) shulde be kepte in myrth euery yeare. Thus the londe of Iuda was in rest a litle while.

The viij. Chapter.

IUDAS herde also the fame of the Romanes, that they were mightie and valeaunt men, agreeable to all thinges that are requyred of them, t̄ make peace with all men, which come vnto them, and how they were doughty men of strength. Besydes that, it was tolde him of their battayls t̄ noble actes which they dyd in Galacia, how they had conquered them and brought them vnder tribute: and what greate thinges they had done in Spayne, how that with their wysdome and sober behauioure they had wonne the Mynes of syluer and golde that are there, and optayned all the londe, with other places farre from thē: how they had discomfited and slayne downe the kynges that came vpon them from the vttemost parte of the earth, and how other people geue them tribute euery yeare: How they had slayne and ouercome Philippe and Perses kynge of Cethim and other mo (in battayll,) which had brought their ordinaunce agaynst them: how they discomfited greate Antiochus kynge of Asia (that wolde nedes fight with them) hauynge an hundreth and xx. Elephanes, with horsmen, charettes, and a very greate hoost: how they toke him self alyue, and ordered him (with such as shulde raigne after him) to paye thē a greate trybute, 'yee and to fynde thē good suerties and plege: Besydes all this, how they had takē from him India, Media and Lydia (his best londes) and geuen them to kynge Eumenus. Agayne, how they perceauynge ſ̄ the Grekes were cōmynge to vexen them: sent against thē a captaine of an hoost which gaue thē battayll, slewe many of thē, led awaye ther wyues and children captiue, spoyled thē, toke possession of their londe, destroyed their stronge holdes, and subdued thē to be their bonde men vnto this daye: Morouer, how ſ̄ as for other kyngdomes t̄ Iles, which somtyme withstode thē, they destroyed them, and brought them vnder their dominion: But helped euer their owne frendes and those ſ̄ were confederate with them, t̄ conquered kyngdomes both farre t̄ nye: t̄ ſ̄ who so euer herde of their renouwe, was afraied of them: for whom they wolde helpe to their kyngdomes, those raigned: and whō it lyked not them to raigne, they put him downe: And how they were come to greate preeminence: hauynge no kynge amonge thē, nether eny man clothed in purple, to be magnified there thorow: but had ordered the selues a parlament, where in there sat iij. naunce of all their londe: to whom euery man was obedient, and y^e there was nether euell will ner discencion amonge them.

Then Iudas chose Eupolemus the sonne of Ihon the sonne of Iacob, and Iason the sonne of Eleazar, and sent the^m vnto Rome for to make frenshepe and a bonde of loue with them: y^e they might take fro^m them the bondage of y^e Grekes, for y^e Iewes sawe y^e the Grekes wolde subdue the kyngdome of Israel. So they wete vnto Rome (a very greate iourney) and came in to y^e Perlamēt, and saide: Iudas Machabeus with his brethrē and the people of y^e Iewes hath sent vs vnto you, to make a bonde of frendshipe and peace with you, and ye to note vs as youre louers and frendes. And y^e matter pleased y^e Romaines right well, wherfore it was writte vp: of y^e which y^e Romaynes made a wrytinge in tables of Latō and sent it to Ierusalē: y^e they might haue by thē a memoriall of y^e same peace and bōde of frēdshipe, after this maner: God saue y^e Romaines and y^e people of the Iewes both by see and by lōde, and kepe y^e swearde and enemy fro^m thē for euermore. Yf there come first eny warre vpoⁿ y^e Romaynes or eny of their frēdes thorow out all their domynō y^e people of y^e Iewes shal helpe thē (as y^e tyme requireth) and y^e with all their hertes. Also they shal nether geue nor sēde vnto their enemies vitales, weapens, money ner shippes: but fulfil this charge at the Romaynes pleasure, and take nothinge from them therefore. Againe yf the people of the Iewes happē first to haue warre, the Romaynes shal stonde by thē with a good wil, accordinge as the tyme wil suffice: Nether shal they geue vnto the Iewes enemies, vytales, weapens, money ner shippes. Thus are the Romaynes content to do, and shal fulfill their charge without eny disceate.

Accordinge to these articles, the Romaynes made the bonde with the Iewes. Now after these articles (sayde they) yf eny of the parties wyll put to them, or take eny thinge from them: they shal do it with the consente of both: and what so euer they adde then vnto them or take from them, it shall stonde fast. And as touchinge the euell that Demetrius hath done vnto the Iewes, we haue wrytten vnto him, sayenge: Wherefore layest thou thy heuy yocke vpon the Iewes oure frendes and louers? Yf they make eny complaynte of the agayne vnto vs, we shall defende them, and fight with the by see and by londe.

The ix. Chapter.

In y^e meane season^a when Demetrius herde that Nicanor and his hoost was slayne in the felde, he proceded further to sende Bachides and Alcimus againe in to Iewry, and those that were in the right wyng of his hoost, with them. So they wete forth by the waye that ledeth vnto Galgala, and pitched their tentes before Mesaloth which is in Arbellis, and wanne the cite, and slewe moche people. In y^e first moneth of the Clij. yeare, they brought their hoost to Ierusalem, and rose vp and came to Berea, with xx. M. fote men, and ij. M. horsmen.

Now Iudas had pitched his tente at Laissa, with thre thousande chosen men. And when they sawe the multitude of the other army y^e it was so greate, they were sore afrayed, and many conveyed them selues out of the hoost. In so moche y^e there abode no mo of them but viij. C. men. When Iudas sawe that his hoost fayled him, and that he must nedes fight: it brake his herte, y^e he had no tyme to gather them together: wherfore the man was in extreme trouble. Neuerthelesse he sayde vnto them, y^e remayned with him: Vp, let vs go agaynst oure enemies, peraduanture we shal be able to fight with them. But they wolde haue stopped him, sayenge: we shall not be able, therefore let vs now saue oure lyues, and turne agayne to oure brethren, and then wil we fight agaynst thē, for we are here but fewe. And Iudas sayde: God forbyd, that we shulde fle from them. Wherfore yf oure tyme be come, let vs dye manfully for oure brethren, and let vs not stayne oure honoure. Then the hoost remoued out of the tentes, and stode agaynst them. The horsmen were deuyded in two partes: the slyngers casters and the archers wente before the hoost, and all the mightie men were foremost in the felde. Bachides himself was in the right wyng of the batell, and the hoost drewe nye in two partes, and blew the trompettes. They of Iudas syde blew y^e trompettes also, and the earth shoke at the noyse of the hoostes, and they stroke a felde from the morow till night. And when Iudas sawe y^e Bachides hoost was strongest of the right syde, he toke with him all the hardy mē, and brake the right wyng of their ordre, and folowed vpon them vnto the mount Azot.

Now when they which were of the lefte wyng, sawe that the right side was discomfited, they persecuted Iudas and them that were with him. Then was there a sore battayll, for many were slayne and wounded of both the parties, Iudas also himself was kylled, and the remnaunt fled. So Ionathas and Symō toke Iudas their brother, and buried him in his fathers sepulchre in the cite of Modin. And all the people of Israel made greate lamentacion for him, and mourned longe, sayenge: Alas, that this worthy shulde be slayne, which delyuered y^e people of Israel. As for other thinges pertayninge to y^e battayls of Iudas, the noble actes that he did and of his worthynesse: they are not writtē, for they were very many.

And after the death of Iudas, wicked mē came vp in all the coastes of Israel,^a and there arose all such as worke vngodlynesse. In those dayes was there a greate derth in the londe, and all the countre gaue ouer them selues & theirs vnto Bachides. So Bachides chose wicked men, and made them lordes in the londe. These sought out and made search for Iudas frendes, and brought them vnto Bachides: which auenged himself vpon thē with greate despite. And there came so greate trouble in Israel, as was not sens the time that no prophet was sene there.

Then came all Iudas frendes together, and sayde vnto Ionathas: For so moch as thy brother Iudas is deed, there is none like him to go forth agaynst oure enemies, agaynst Bachides, and such as are aduersaries vnto oure people. Wherefore this daye we chose the for him, to be oure prynce and captayne to ordre oure batell. And Ionathas toke the gouernaunce vpon him at the same tyme, and ruled in steade of his brother Iudas. When Bachides gat knowlege therof, he sought for to slaye him: But Ionathas and Symon his brother, perceauynge that, fled in to y^e wilderness of Thecua with all their company, and pitched their tētes by the water pole of Asphar.

Which when Bachides vnderstode, he came ouer Iordane with all his hoost vpon y^e Sabbath daye. Now had Ionathas sent his brother Ihon (a captayne of the people) to praye his frendes the Nabuthites, y^e they wolde lende them their ordinance, for they had moch. So the children of Iambry came out of Madaba, & toke Ihon & all y^e he had, & wente their waye withall. Then came worde vnto Ionathas & Symon his brother, y^e his children of Iambri made a greate mariage, & brought y^e bryde from Madaba with greate pompe: for she was doughter to one of the noblest prynces of Canaan. Wherefore they remembred the bloude of Ihon their brother, and wente vp, and hyd them selues vnder the shadowe of the mountayne.

So they lift vp their eyes, and loked: and beholde, there was moch a doo, & greate repayre: for the brydegrome came forth, & his frēdes and his brethren met them with tympanys, instrumentes of musick, and many weapēs. Then Ionathas and they that were with him, rose out of their skoukinge places agaynst them, and slewe many of them. As for the remnaunt, they fled in to y^e mountaynes, and they toke all their substaunce. Thus the mariage was turned to mournynge, and y^e noyse of their melody in to lamentacion. And so when they had auenged the bloude of their brother, they turned agayne vnto Iordane.

Bachides hearinge this, came vnto y^e very border of Iordane with a greate power vpon the Sabbath daye. And Ionathas sayde to his company: let vs get vp, & fyght agaynst oure enemies: for it stondesth not with vs to daye, as in tymes past: Beholde, oure enemies are in oure waye, y^e water of Iordane vpon the one syde of vs, with banckes, fennes and woddes of y^e other syde, so y^e there is no place for vs to departe vnto. ^b Wherefore crie now vnto heauen, that ye maye be deluyered from the power of youre enemies. So they stroke the batell. And Ionathas stretched out his honde to smyte Bachides, but he fled bacwarde. Then Ionathas and they y^e were with him leapte in to Iordane, & swymmed ouer Iordane vnto him, & there were slayne of Bachides syde that daye, a thousande men.

Therefore Bachides with his hoost turned againe to Ierusalem, & buylte vp^c castels & stronge holdes that were in Iewry, Iericho, Emaus, Bethoron, Bethel, Thānata, Phara & Thopo, with hye walles, with portes & with lockes: & set men to kepe them, y^e they might use their malice vpon Israel. He walled vp Bethsura, Gazara & the castell at Ierusalē also, & prouydeth them with men & vytales: He toke also the chefest mens sonnes in the countre for pledges, and put them in the castel at Ierusalem to be kepte.

Afterwarde in the Clij. yeaere in the seconde moneth, Alcimus comaunded, that f̃ walles of the ynnmost Sanctuary shulde be destroyed, & the buyldinges of f̃ prophetes also. And when he beganne to destroye thē, f̃ thinges f̃ he wēte aboute, were hyndered: f̃ for he was smytten with a palsey, & his mouth shutt, so f̃ he coude nomore speake ner comaunde any of his house cōcerninge his busynesse. Thus dyed Alcimus in greate misery at the same tyme. And whē Bachides sawe f̃ Alcimus was deed, he turned agayne to f̃ kynge, & so the londe was in rest ij. yeaeres. Then all the vngodly men helde a councell, sayenge: Beholde, Ionathas and his cōpany are at ease, & dwell without care. Wherefore let vs brynge Bachides hither, & he shall take them all in one night.

So they wēte & gaue Bachides this councell, which arose to come with a greate hoost, & sent letters priuily to his adherentes which were in Iewry, to take Ionathas & those f̃ were with him: but they might not, for the other had gotten knowledge of their deuyce. And Ionathas toke L. men of the countre (which were the ryngleders of them) & slewe them. Then Ionathas and Symon with their cōpany departed vnto the cite Bethbessen, which lieth in the wyldernes, and repayed the decaye therof, & made it stronge. When Bachides knewe this, he gathered all his hoost, and sent worde to them that were of Iewry. Thē came he and layed sege to Bethbessen, and fought against it a longe season, and made instrumentes of warre. Now Ionathas left his brother Symon in the cite, and wente forth himself in to the countre, and came with a certayne nombre, and slewe Odares and his brethren and the children of Phaseron in their tentes: so f̃ he beganne to be stronge, & to increase in power.

As for Symon and his company, they wente out of the cite, and brēt vp the instrumentes of warre, and fought agaynst Bachides, and discofited him. And Bachides was sore vexed, because his councell and trauayle was in vayne. Wherefore he was wroth at f̃ wicked men (that gaue him counsell to come in to their londe) and slew many of them. Then purposed he with his company to go awaye in to his owne countre: wherof whē Ionathas had knowledge, he sent embassitours vnto him, for to make peace with him, & f̃ he shulde deliuer him his prisoners againe. To the which Bachides cōsented gladly, and dyd accordinge to his desyre: yee and made an ooth, that he shulde neuer do him harme all the dayes of his life. So he restored vnto him all the prisoners that he had taken out of the londe of Iuda, and thē turned and wente his waye in to his owne londe, nether proceeded he eny further to come vnto f̃ borders of Iuda. Thus Israel had no more warre. And Ionathas dwelt at Machmas, and beganne there to gouerne the people, and destroyed the vngodly men out of Israel.

The x. Chapter.

IN the C.lx. yeaere came Alexander f̃ sonne of noble Antiochus, and toke Ptolomais, whose citisens receaued him, and there he reigned. When Demetrius herde therof, he gathered an exceeding greate hoost, and wēte forth agaynst him to fight. Wherefore Demetrius sent letters vnto Ionathas with louynge wordes, and praysed him greatly. For he sayde: we wyll first make peace with him, before he bynde him selfe with Alexander agaynst vs: els he shall remembre the euell that we haue done against him, his brother & his people. And so he gaue Ionathas leue to gather an hoost, to make weapons, and to be confederate with him, and comaunded the pledges that were in the castell, to be deliuered vnto him.

Then came Ionathas to Ierusalem, and red the letters in the audience of all the people, and of them that were in f̃ castell. And therfore were they sore afraied, because they herde, that the kynge had geuē him licence to gather an hoost. Thus were the pledges deliuered vnto Ionathas, which restored them to their elders. Ionathas also dwelt at Ierusalem, and begāne to buylde vp and to repayre the cite: comaunding the worke men, to wall it, and the mount Sion rounde aboute with fre stone, to be a stronge holde, and so they dyd. As for the Heithen that were in ꝑ castels which Bachides had made vp, they fled: so that euery man left the place, and wete in to his owne cowntre. Onely at Bethsura remainyd certayne of the Iewes, which had forsaken the lawe and cōmaundementes of God, for Bethsura was their refuge.

Now when kynge Alexander herde of ꝑ promises ꝑ Demetrius had made vnto Ionathas, and when it was tolde him of ꝑ batels and noble actes, which he and his brethren had done, and of the greate trauayles that they had taken: he saide: where shal we fynde such a man? wel, we will make him oure frende, & be confederate with him. Vpon this he wrote a lettre vnto him, with these wordes: kinge Alexāder saluteth his brother Ionathas. We haue herde of the, ꝑ thou art a valeant man, & mete to be oure frende: wherfore this daye we ordene the to be the hye prest of thy people, and to be called the kynges frende. (Vpon this, he sente him a purple clothinge & a crowne of golde) ꝑ thou mayest conside what is for oure profit, & kepe friendshipe towardes vs.

So in the vij. moneth of the C. lx. yeaere vpon the solemne feast daye of the tabernacles, Ionathas put the holy rayment vpon him. Then gathered he an hoost, & made many weapēs. Which when Demetrius herde, he was maruelous sory, & sayde: Alas, what haue we done, ꝑ Alexander hath preuented vs in gettinge the friendship of the Iewes, for his owne defence? Yet wil I wryte louingly vnto them also, yee & promise them dignities & rewardes, ꝑ they maye be of my syde. Whervpon he wrote vnto the these wordes: Kinge Demetrius sendeth gretinge vnto ꝑ people of the Iewes. Where as ye haue kepte youre cōuenant towardes vs, & cōtinued in oure friendship, not enclinyng to oure enemies we were glad, when we herde therof. Wherfore remayne still & be faithfull to vs: & we shal wel recōpense you for the thinges, ꝑ ye haue done on oure partie: we shall release you of many charges, and geue you rewardes.

And now I discharge you & all ꝑ Iewes from tributes, I forgeue you the customes of salt, and release you of the crowne taxes, of the thirde parte of sede, and half of the frute of trees, which is myne owne dewty. These I leaue for you, from this daye forth: so that they shall not be taken of the londe of Iuda ner of the thre cities which are added ther vnto out of Samaria and Galilee, from this daye forth for euermore. Ierusalē also with all thinges belōginge therto, shal be holy and fre, yee ꝑ tithes & tributes shal pertayne vnto it. As for the power of ꝑ castell which is at Ierusalem, I remytte & geue it vnto the hye prest, that he maye set in it soch men, as he shall chose to kepe it. I frely delyuer all the Iewes that are presoners thorow out all my realme: so that euery one of them shalbe fre from payenge eny tribute, yee euen of their catell.

All the solēpne feastes, Sabbathes, New mones, the dayes appoynted, the thre daies before and after the feast shal be fre for all the Iewes in my realme: so that in them no man shal haue power to do eny thinge, or to moue eny busynesse agaynst eny of them in eny maner of cause. There shal xxx. M. also of the Iewes be written vp in the kynges hoost, and haue their wages payed, as all other men of warre of the kynges shulde haue: and of them shalbe ordered certayne, to kepe the kynges stronge holdes: yee and some of them shalbe set ouer the kynges busynesse, that they maye faithfully deale with the same. The Iewes also shal haue prynces of their owne, & walke in their owne lawes, as the kynge hath commaunded in the londe of Iuda.

And the thre cities that are fallen vnto Iewry from the cowntre of Samaria and Galilee: shalbe taken as Iewry, and be vnder one: nether be subiecte to eny straunge lorde, but to the hye preste. As for Ptolomais and the londe pertayninge therto, I geue it vnto the Sanctuary at Ierusalem, for the necessary expēces of the holy thinges. Morouer, I will geue euery yeaere xv. M. Sycles of syluer out of ꝑ kynges checker (which pertayneth vnto me) to the worke of the temple: yee & loke what remaineth (which they ꝑ had oure matters in honde in tymes past, haue not payed) that same shal they geue vnto them also. And besydes all this, the v. M. sycles which they toke yearly of the rētes of the Sanctuary, shal belōnge vnto the prestes that do seruyce.

Item, who so euer they be that fle vnto the temple at Ierusalem or within the liberties therof, where as they are fallen in to the kynges daunger for eny maner of busynesse, they shall be pardoned, and all the goodes that they haue in my realme, shalbe fre. For the buyldinge also & repayinge of the worke of the Sanctuary, expenses shalbe geuen out of the kynges Checker: Yee and for the makinge of the walles rounde aboute Ierusalem, for the breakinge downe of the olde, and for the settinge vp of the stronge holdes in Iewry, shal þy costes and charges be geuen out of the kynges Checker.

But when Ionathas and the people herde these wordes, they gaue no credence vnto them, nether receaued them: for they remembred the greate wickednesse that he had done vnto Israel, and how sore he had vexed them. Wherefore they agreed vnto Alexander, for he was a prynce that had dealete frendly with them, and so they stode by him allwaye. The gathered kynge Alexander a greate hoost, and brought his armye agaynst Demetrius. So þy two kynges stroke battayll together,^a but Demetrius hoost fled, and Alexander folowed after and vpon them. A mightie sore felde was it, continuynge till the Sonne wente downe, and Demetrius was slayne the same daye.

¶ And Alexander sente embassitours vnto Ptolomy the kynge of Egipte with these wordes, sayenge: For so much as I am come agayne to my realme, and am set in the trone of my progenitours, and haue gotten the dominion, ouer come Demetrius, conquered the londe, and striken a felde with him, so that we haue discomfited both him and his hoost, and syt in the trone of his kyngdome: Let vs now make frendshipe together, geue me thy daughter to wife: so shall I be thy sonne in lawe, and both geue the rewardes, and hir greate dignite. Ptolomy the kynge gaue answer, sayenge: Happy be the daye wherein thou art come agayne to the londe of thy progenitours, and set in the trone of their kyngdome. And now will I fulfill thy writynge: but mete me at Ptolomais, þy we maye se one another, and that I maye mary my daughter vnto the acordinge to thy desyre. So Ptolomy wete out of Egipte with his daughter Cleopatra, & came vnto Ptolomais in þy Clxij. yere: where kynge Alexander met him, & he gaue Alexander his daughter Cleopatra, and married them at Ptolomais with greate worshippe, like as the maner of kynges is to be.

Then wrote kynge Alexander vnto Ionathas, that he shulde come and mete him. So he wente honorably vnto Ptolomais, & there he met the two kynges, and gaue them greate presentes of golde and syluer, & founde fauoure in their sight. And there came together agaynst Ionathas certayne wicked men and vngracious personnes of Israel, makynge complaintes of him, but the kynge regarded them not. As for Ionathas, the kynge commaunded to take of his garmentes, and to clothe him in purple: and so they dyd. Then the kynge appoynted him to syt by him, and sayde vnto his prynces: Go with him in to the myddest of the cite, and make a proclamacion, that no man complayne agaynst him of eny matter, and that no man trouble him for eny maner of cause.

So it happened that when his accusers sawe the worshippe which was proclaimed of him, & þy he was clothed in purple: they fled euerychone. And the kynge made moch of him, wrote him amonge his chefe frendes, made him a duke, and partaker of his dominion. Thus Ionathas wente agayne to Ierusalem with peace and gladnesse. In the Clxv. yere came Demetrius the sonne of Demetrius from Creta in to his fathers londe: wherof when Alexander herde tell, he was right sory, and returned vnto Antioche. And Demetrius chose Appollonius (which had the gouernaunce of Celosyria) to be his captayne.

So he gathered a greate hoost and came vnto Iamnia, and sende worde vnto Ionathas the hye prest, sayenge: Darrest thou withstonde vs thy self alone? As for me, I am but laughed to scorne and shamed, because thou prouest thy strength agaynst vs in the mountaynes. Now therfore, yf thou trustest in thyne owne strength, come downe to vs in to the playne felde, and there let vs proue oure strength together: thou shalt fynde, that I haue valeaunt men of warre with me: and shalt knowe who I am, & the other that stonde by me.

¶ Which saye, that youre fote is not able to stonde before oure face, for thy fathers haue bene twyse chaced in to their owne londe. And now, how wylt thou be able to abyde so greate an hoost of horsmen and fotemen in the felde, where as is nether rocke, stone ner place to fle vnto?

^c Iosephus cap. 6. lib. 13. Antiq.^d 1 Mac. 3. a.

When Ionathas herde the wordes of Appollonius, he was moued in his mynde: wherefore he chose x. thousande men and wente out of Ierusalem, and Symon his brother met him for to helpe him: And they pitched their tentes at Ioppa, but the cite kepte him forth, for Ioppa was an holde of Appollonius. Then Ionathas layed sege to it, and they that were in the cite, for very feare let him in: and so Ionathas wanne Ioppa. Appollonius hearinge of this, toke thre thousande horsmen, with a greate hoost of fote, and wente as though he wolde go to Azotus, & came immediatly in to the playne felde: because he had so many horsmē, and put his trust in thē. So Ionathas folowed vpon him to Azotus, & there they stroke the battayll. Now had Appollonius left a M. horsmen behynde them pruely in the tētes. And when Ionathas knewe that soch waite was layed behynde them, they wēte rounde aboute the enemies hoost, and shot dartes at the people from the mornyng to the euenyng. As for Ionathas people, they kepte their ordre as he had commaunded them, & the enemies horses were euer labouringe.

Then brought Symon forth his hoost, and set them agaynst the fote men. For the horsmē were weery already. So he discomfited them, and they fled. And they that were scatred in the felde, gat them to Azotus, and came in to the temple of Dagon their Idol, & they might there saue their lyues. But Ionathas set fyre vpon Azotus and all the cities rounde aboute it, & toke their goodes, and brēt vp the temple of Dagon with all them that were fled in to it.

Thus were slayne and brēt well nye viij. thousande men. So Ionathas remoued the hoost from thence, and brought them to Ascalon: where & men of the cite came forth, and met him with greate worshipec. After this wente Ionathas and his hoost agayne to Ierusalem, with greate substance of good. And when kynge Alexander herde these thinges, he thought to do Ionathas more worshipec, & sent him a colar of golde, as the vse is to be geuen vnto such as are of the kynges nexte bloude. He gaue him also & cite of Accaron (with the londes belongynge therto) in possession.

The xi. Chapter.

AND & kynge of Egipte gathered an hoost, ^a (like the sonde & lieth vpon the see shore) and many shippes: and wente aboute thorow disceate to optayne & kingdom of Alexander, & to ioyne it vnto his owne realme. Vpon this he toke his iourneys in to Syria, & was letten in to the cities, and mē came forth to mete him: for kinge Alexander had cōmaunded them so to do, because he was his father in lawe. Now when Ptolomy entred in to eny cite, he lefte mē of warre to kepe it, and this he dyd thorow out all & cities. And when he came to Azotus, they shewed him the temple of Dagon and Azotus^b that was brent vp, with the other thinges which were destroyed, the deed bodies cast abrode, and & graues that they had made by the waye syde, for soch as were slayne in the felde: And tolde the kynge that Ionathas had done all these thinges, to the intēt they might get him euell will. But the kynge sayde not a worde therto.

And Ionathas met the kynge with greate honoure at Ioppa, where they saluted one another, and toke their rest. So when Ionathas had gone with & kynge, vnto the water that was called Eleutherus, he turned agayne to Ierusalem. Now Ptolomy had gotten the dominion of the cities vnto Seleucia vpon the see coast, ymaginyng wicked counsels agaynst Alexander, & sent embassitours vnto Demetrius, sayenge: Come, let vs make a bonde betwixe vs, so shall I geue the my daughter that Alexander hath, and thou shalt raigne in thy fathers kyngdome. I repente that I gaue Alexander my daughter, for he goeth aboute to slaye me. And thus he slaudred Alexander, because he wolde haue had his realme.

Thus he toke his daughter from him, gaue her vnto Demetrius, and forsoke Alexander, so that his malice was openly knowne. And Ptolomy came to Antioche, where he set two crownes vpon his owne heade: the crowne of Egipte and of Asia. In the meane season was kynge Alexander in Cilicia, for they that dwelt in those places, had rebelled agaynst him. But when Alexander herde of this, he came to warre agaynst him. So kinge Ptolomy brought forth his hoost and met him with a mightie power, and chaced him awaye. Then fled Alexander in to Araby, there to be defended, and kynge Ptolomys honoure increased. And Zabdiel the Arabian smote of Alexanders heade, and sent it vnto

^a 1 Mac. 11. a. ^b Iosephus cap. 7. libro 13. ^c 1 Mac. 10. i.

Ptolomy. But the thirde daye after, died kynge Ptolomy himself: and they whom he had set in the stronge holdes, were slayne of those that were within f cities. And Demetrius raigned in f hundreth and seuen and sixtie yeaere.

C At the same tyme gathered Ionathas them that were in Iewry to laye sege vnto the castell which was at Ierusalem, and so they made many instrumentes of warre agaynst it. Then wente there certayne vngodly personnes (which hated their owne people) vnto kynge Demetrius, and tolde him, that Ionathas beseged f castell. So when he herde it, he was angrie, and immediatly came to Ptolomais, and wrote vnto Ionathas, that he shulde not laye sege to the castell, but come and speake with him in all the haist. Neuerthelesse when Ionathas herde this he commaunded to besege it. He chose also certayne of the elders and prestes of Israel, and put him self in the parell, and toke with him golde, syluer, clothinge and diuerse presentes: and wente to Ptolomais vnto the kynge, and founde him gracious.

And though certayne vngodly men of his owne people made complayntes vpon him, yet the kynge intreated him,^a like as his predecessours had done before: and promoted him in the sight of all his frendes, confirmed him in the hye presthode with all the worships f he had afore, and made him his chefe frende. Ionathas also desyred the kynge that he wolde make Iewry fre, with the thre head cities of Samaria^b and the londes pertayninge therto: vpon this dyd Ionathas promyse him thre C. talentes. Where vnto the kynge consented, and gaue Ionathas wrytinge of the same, conteyninge these wordes: kynge Demetrius sendeth gretinge vnto his brother Ionathas and to the people of f Iewes. We sende you here a copy of the lettre which we dyd wryte vnto oure elder Lasthenus, concerninge you, that ye shulde knowe it.

D Kynge Demetrius sendeth gretinge vnto Lasthenus his elder. For the faithfulness that oure frendes the people of the Iewes kepe vnto vs, and for the louynge kyndnesse which they beare towards vs: we are determed to do them good. Wherefore we ordene all f coostes of Iewry with the thre cities, Lyda and Ramatha (which are added vnto Iewry from Samaria) t all f lodes pertayninge there vnto, to be frely separated for such as do sacrifice in Ierusalem: both concernynge the paymētes which the kynge toke yearly afore tyme, t f frutes also of the earth t trees. As for other tithes t tributes f belonged vnto vs, we discharge the therof from this tyme forth. In like maner we graūte vnto the all the customes of salt and crowne taxes, which were brought vnto vs. And this fredome shal they haue firme t stedfast, frō this tyme forth for euermore. Therefore se f ye make a copy of these oure letters, and delyuer it vnto Ionathas: that it maye be kepte vpon f holy mount in a cōuenient place.

After this, when Demetrius the kynge sawe that his londe was in rest, and that no resistance was made him: he sent awaye all his hoost euery man to his owne place, excepte an armye of straungers, whom he brought from the Iles of the Heithen, wherefore all his fathers hoost had euell wyll at him. Now was there one Triphon^c (that had bene of Alexanders parte afore) which when he sawe that all the hoost murmured agaynst Demetrius: he wente to Emalcuel the Arabian (that brought vp Antiochus the sonne of Alexander) and laye sore vpon him, to delyuer him this yonge Antiochus: that he might raigne in his fathers steade. He tolde him also what greate euell Demetrius had done, t how his mē of warre loued him not: t so remayned there a lōge season.

And Ionathas sent vnto kynge Demetrius, to druye them out which were in the castell at Ierusalem and in the other refugies, for they dyd Israel greate harme. So Demetrius sent worde vnto Ionathas, sayenge: I wil not only do these thinges for the and thy people, but at tyme conueniēt I wil do both the t thy people greate worships. But now thou shalt do me a pleasure, yf thou wilt sende me men to helpe me: for all myne armye is gone fro me. So Ionathas sent him iij. M. stronge men vnto Antioche, and they came vnto the kynge, wherefore the kynge was very glad at their commynge. But they that were of the cite (euen an Cxx. thousande mē) gathered them together, t wolde haue slayne the kynge, which fled in to his courte: t the cītesyns kepte the stretes of the cite, and beganne to fight.

Then the kynge called for the Iewes helpe, which came vnto him all together, & wente abrode thorow the cite, and slewe the same daye an C. M. men: set fyre vpon the cite, gat many spoyles in that daye, and delyuered y kyng. So when the citesyns sawe that the Iewes had gotten their wyll of the cite, and they them selues dyspoynted of their purpose: they made their supplicacion vnto the kynge, sayenge: Graunte vs peace, and let the Iewes cease from troublinge vs and the cite, and vpon this they cast awaye their weapens. Thus they made peace, and y Iewes gat greate worshippe in the sight of the kynge, and in the sight of all that were in his realme, and were spoken of thorow out the kyngdome: and so they came agayne to Ierusalem with greate goodes.

So the kynge Demetrius sat in the trone of his kyngdome, and had peace in his lode. Neuertheles he dyssembled in all that euer he spake, & with drewe himself from Ionathas, nether rewarded him acordinge to the benefites which he had done for him, but troubled him very sore. After this came Triphon agayne with yonge Antiochus, which reigned & was crowned kynge. Then there gathered vnto him all y men of warre, whō Demetrius had put awaye: these fought agaynst Demetrius, which fled & turned his backe. So Triphon toke the Elephantes, & wanne Antioche. And yōge Antiochus wrote vnto Ionathas, sayenge: I confirme the in thy presthode, & make y ruler of iij. countrees, y thou mayest be a frende of y kings.

Vpon this he sent him golden vessel to be serued in, and gaue him leue to drynke in golde, to be clothed in purple, and to weere a colar of golde. He made his brother Symon also captayne, from the coostes of Tyrus vnto the borders of Egipte. Then Ionathas toke his iourney, & wente thorow y cities beyōde the water (of Iordane) and all the men of warre of Syria gathered thē vnto him for to helpe him. So he came vnto Ascalon, and they of the cite receaued him honorably: & from thence wente he vnto Gaza, but they wolde not let him in: wherefore he layed sege vnto it, burnynge vp and spoylinge the places that were aboute the cite.

And the citesyns of Gaza submytted thē selues vnto Ionathas, which made peace with them, but toke of their sonnes to pledge, sent thē to Ierusalē, & wente thorow the countree vnto Damascus. Now when Ionathas herde that Demetrius princes were come in to Cades (which is in Galilee) with a greate hoost, purposinge to put Demetrius out from medlinge in the realme: he came agaynst them, and lefte Symon his brother in the londe: which came to Bethsura, and layed sege to it a longe season, and discomfited them. So they desyred to haue peace with him, which he graunted them, & afterwarde put them out from thence, toke the cite, and set mē to kepe it. And Ionathas with his hoost came to the water of Genesar, & by tymes in the mornynge gat them to the playne felde of Azor.

And beholde, the hoostes of the Heithen met thē in the felde, & layed watch for thē in the mountaynes: so y when Ionathas came agaynst thē, the other (which were layed to watch) rose out of their places, & fought, & they that were of Ionathas syde, fled euery man: & there was not one of thē lefte, excepte Matathias the sonne of Absalomus, and Iudas the sonne of Calphi the captayne of the hoost. Thē Ionathas rente his clothes, layed earth vpō his heade, made his prayer, & turned againe to thē in y felde: where they fought together, and he put them to flight. Now when his owne mē y were fled, sawe this: they turned agayne vnto him, & helped him to folowe vpon all their enemies vnto their tentes at Cades. So there were slayne of the Heithen the same daye, iij. M. men, & Ionathas turned agayne to Ierusalem.

The xij. Chapter.

IONATHAS seyng that y tyme was mete for him, chose certayne men and sent them vnto Rome for to establish & to renewe the frendshipe with thē. "He sent lettres also vnto Sparta, and to other places in like maner. So they wēt vnto Rome and entred in to y counsell, & sayde: Ionathas y hye prest & the people of the Iewes sent vs vnto you, for to renewe y olde frēdshipe and bonde of loue. Vpō this y Romaynes gaue thē fre pasportes, y mē shulde lede thē home in to y lode of Iuda peaceably. And this is y copy of the lettres that Ionathas wrote vnto the Sparcians:

Ionathas y hye prest with y elders, prestes, & the other people of y Iewes, sende gretinge vnto þ̄ Sparciās their brethrē. There were lettres sente lōge ago vnto Onias þ̄ hye prest, from Arius which than raigned amonge you: that ye are oure brethren, as the wrytinge made thervpon specifieth. And Onias intreated the embassitoure that was sent, honorably, and receaued þ̄ lettres: wherin there was mencion made of the bonde of loue & frendshipe. But as for vs, we nede no soch wrytinges: for why, we haue the holy bokes of scripture in oure hondes to oure comforte. Neuerthelesse we had rather sende vnto you, for the renuyng of þ̄ brotherhode and frendshipe: lest we shulde be straunge vnto you, for it is longe, sens þ̄ tyme þ̄ ye sent worde vnto vs. Wherefore in þ̄ sacrifices þ̄ we offere & other ceremonies vpon þ̄ hye solempne dayes and other we allwaye remembre you without ceasyng (like as reason is, and as it becometh vs to thynke vpon oure brethren) yee and are right glad of youre prosperous honoure.

And though we haue had greate troubles and warres, so that the kynges aboute vs haue foughten agaynst vs: yet wolde we not be greuous vnto you ner to other of oure louers and frendes in these warres. For we haue had helpe frō heauē, so that we are delyuered, and oure enemies subdued. Wherefore we chose Numenius the sonne of Antiochus and Antipater the sonne of Iason, and sente them vnto the Romaines, for to renue the olde bonde of frendshipe and loue with them. We commaunded them also to come vnto you, to salute you, and to delyuer you oure lettres, concerninge the renouacion of oure brotherhode. And now ye shal do right wel, to geue vs an answere there vnto.

And this is the copy of the wrytinge, which Arius the kyng of Sparta sente vnto Onias: Arius kinge of the Sparcians sendeth gretyng vnto Onias the hye prest. It is founde in wrytyng, that the Sparcians and Iewes are brethren, and come of the generacion of Abraham. And now for so moch as this is come to oure knowledge, ye shal do wel, to wryte vnto vs of youre prosperite. As for vs, we haue wrytten oure mynde vnto you: Oure catell and goodes are yours and yours, ours. These thinges haue we cōmaunded to be shewed vnto you.

Ierusalem, & met thē in the lōde of Hemath, for he gaue them not space to come in to his owne cōntre. And he sent spyes vnto their tentes, which came agayne and tolde him, that they were appoynted to come vpō him in the night season. Wherefore when the Sōne was gone downe, Ionathas cōmaunded his men to watch all þ̄ night, & to be ready with weapons for to fight: and set watchmen rounde aboute the hoost. But when the aduersaries herde that Ionathas was ready with his men to the battayll, they feared & were afrayed in their hertes, & kyndled fyres in their tentes, brake vp, and gat them awaye. Neuertheles Ionathas and his company knewe it not till the morninge, for they sawe the fyres burnyng.

Then Ionathas folowed vpon thē, but he might not ouertake them, for they were gone ouer the water Eleutherus. So Ionathas departed vnto þ̄ Arabiās (which were called Zabadei) slewe them, & toke their goodes. He proceded furthur also, and came vnto Damascus, & wente thorow all that cōntre. But Simon his brother toke his journey and came to Ascalon and to the nexte stronge holdes: departinge vnto Ioppa, and wanne it. For he herde, that they wolde stonde of Demetrius partie: wherefore he sent mē of warre in the cite, to kepe it. After this came Ionathas home agayne, & called the elders of the people together: and deuysed with thē for to buylde vp the strōge holdes in Iewry, and the walles of Ierusalem, to set vp an hye wall betwixte the castell and þ̄ cite, for to separate it from the cite, that it might be alone, and that men shulde nether bye nor sell in it.

Vpō this they came together for to buylde vp the cite: and for so moch as the wall vpō the broke of the west syde (called Caphetheta) was fallen downe, they repayred it. And Symon set vp Adiada in Sephela, and made it stronge, settinge portes & lockes vpō it. Now when Triphon purposed to raigne in Asia, to be crowned, and to slaye the kyng Antiochus: he was afrayed that Ionathas wolde not suffre him, but fight against him. Wherefore he wente aboute to take Ionathas, and to kyll him.

So he departed, and came vnto Bethsan. Then wente Ionathas forth against him to the battayll with fourty thousande chosen men, and came vnto Bethsan also. But whē Triphon sawe that Ionathas came with so greate an hoost to destroye him, he was afrayed: and therefore he receaued him honorably, commended him vnto all his frendes, gaue him rewardes, and commaunded his men of warre to be as obediēt vnto him as to himself.

And saide vnto Ionathas: why hast thou caused this people to take soch trauayle, seynge there is no warre betwixte vs? Therfore sende them home agayne, & chose certaine mē to waite vpon the, & come thou with me to Ptolomais: for I wil geue it the, with the other strōge holdes, men of warre and their officers: As for me, I must departe, this is only ŷ cause of my cōmynge. Ionathas beleued him, & dyd as he sayde, puttinge awaye his hoost, which wente in to ŷ londe of Iuda. He kep̄te but iij. M. by him, wherof he sente ij. M. in to Galilee, & one M. wente with himself.

Now as soone as Ionathas entred in to Ptolomais, the citesyns sparred the gates of the cite, and toke him, and slewe all them with the swerde, that came in with him. Then sent Triphon an hoost of fote mē and horsmen in to Galilee and in to the greate playne felde, to destroye all Ionathas company. But when they knew that Ionathas was taken, and all they slayne that wayted vpon him: they toke councell together, and came forth ready to the battayll. So when they which folowed vpon them, sawe, that it was a matter of life, they turned backe agayne. As for the other, they wente in to ŷ londe of Iuda peaceably, & bewayled Ionathas, & them that were with him right sore. And Israel made greate lamentacion. Thē all the Heithen ŷ were rounde aboute them, sought to destroye thē. For they sayde: now haue they no captayne, nor eny man to helpe them. Therefore let vs ouercome them, and rote out their name from amonge men.

The xiiij. Chapter.

NOW when Symon heade that Triphon gathered a greate hoost, to come in to ŷ londe of Iuda, and to destroye it: and sawe ŷ the people was in greate fearfulness and care: He came vp to Ierusalem, and gathered the people together, & gaue thē exortacion, sayenge: Ye knowe what greate battayls I and my brethren & my fathers house haue stryken for the lawe & the Sāctuary, and what maner of troubles we haue sene: thorow occasion wherof, all my brethren are slayne for Israels sake, and I am left alone." And now let not me spare myne owne life in eny maner of trouble, for I am no better then my brethren: but wil avenge my people and the Sanctuary, oure children and oure wyues: for all the Heithen are gathered together, to destroye vs of very malice.

At these wordes the hartes of the people were kyndled together, so that they cried with a loude voyce, sayenge: Thou shalt be oure captayne in steade of Iudas & Ionathas thy brethren, ordre thou oure batell, & what so euer thou commaundest vs, we shall do it. So he gathered all the men of warre, makinge haist to fynish all the walles of Ierusalem, which he made stronge rounde aboute. Then sent he Ionathas the sonne of Absalomus with a fresh hoost vnto Ioppa, which droue them out ŷ were in the castell, and remayned there himself. Triphon also remoued from Ptolomais with a greate armye, to come in to the londe of Iuda, and Ionathas with him in warde. And Simon pitched his tentes at Addus before the playne felde.

But when Triphon knewe that Symon stode vp in steade of his brother Ionathas, and that he wolde warre agaynst him: he sent messaungers vnto him, sayenge: Where as we haue kep̄te Ionathas thy brother, it is for money that he is owynge in the kynges accompte, concernynge the busynesse ŷ he had in honde. Wherefore sende now an C. talētes of syluer and his two sonnes for suertie, that when he is lettē forth he shal not forsake vs: and we shal sende him agayne. Neuerthelesse Symon knewe, that he dyssembled in his wordes: yet commaunded he the money & children to be delyuered vnto him: lest he shulde be the greater enemye agaynst ŷ people of Israel, and saye: because he sent him not the money and the children, therefore is Ionathas deed.

So Symon sent him the children and an hundreth talentes, but he dyssembled, & wolde not let Ionathas go. Afterwarde came Triphon in to the londe, to destroye it, and wente rounde aboute by the waye, ŷ ledeth vnto Ador. But where so euer they wente, thither wente Symon and his hoost also. Now they that were in the castell, sent messaungers vnto Triphon, that he shulde make haist to come by the wyldernesse, and to sende them vytales: And Triphon made ready all his horsmen to come that same night. Neuerthelesse it was a very greate snowe, so that he came not in Galaadithim. And whē he drewe nye Baschama, he slewe Ionathas and his sonnnes there, and then turned for to go home in to his owne londe.

The sente Symon for to fet his brothers deed coarse, and buried it in Modin his fathers cite. So all Israel bewayled him with greate lamentacion, and mourned for him very longe. And Symon made vpon the sepulchre of his father and his brethrē a buyldynge hye to loke vnto of fre stone behynde and before: and set vp seuē pylers, one agaynst another (for his father, his mother and foure brethren) and set greate pilers rōude aboute, with armes vpon them for a perpetuall memory, and carued shippes besyde the armes: y they might be sene of mē saylinge in the see. This sepulchre which he made at Modin, stondeth yet vnto this daye.

¶ Now as Triphō wente forth to walke with y yōge kyng Antiochus, he slewe him trayerously, and raigned in his steade, crowned himself kyng of Asia, and dyd moch euell in the londe. Symon also buylte vp the castels in Iewry, makynge them stronge with hye towres, greate walles, portes and lockes, and layed vp vytales in the stronge holdes. And Symon chose certayne men, and sente them to kyng Demetrius: to desyre him, y he wolde discharge the londe from all bondage, for Triphon had spoyled it very sore. Where vpon Demetrius the kyng answered him, ¶ wrote vnto him after this maner:

Demetrius y kige sendeth gretinge vnto Symon the hye prest his frende, with the elders and people of the Iewes. The golden crowne and precious stone y ye sente vnto vs, haue we receaued: and are ready to make a stedfast peace with you, yee and to wryte vnto oure officers, for to release you, concernynge the thinges wherin we made you fre: and the appointment y we make with you, shalbe firme and stable. The stronge holdes which ye haue buylded, shalbe youre owne. As for eny ouer sight or fawte committed vnto this daye, we forgeue it, and the crowne taxe that ye ought vs also. And where as was eny other tribute in Ierusalem, it shal now be no tribute: and loke who are mete amonge you to be in oure courte, let them be written vp, that there maye be peace betwixte vs.

Thus the yock of the Heithen was taken from Israel, in the hundreth and seuentie yeare. And the peple of the Iewes beganne to write in their lettres and actes on this maner: ¶ In y first yeare of Symon the hye prest, and pryncē of the Iewes.

In those dayes wente Symon vnto Gaza, and beseged it rounde aboute, where he set vp ordinaunce of warre. And wanne a towre, which he toke. So they that gat in to the towre leapte into the cite, which was in a greate feare: In so moch that the people of the cite rente their clothes, and clymmed vp vpon the walles with their wyues and children, besekynge Symon to be at one with them, sayenge:

O rewarde vs not after oure wickednes, but be gracious vnto vs, and we shal do y seruyce. ¶ Then Symon for very pite, wolde fight no more agaynst them, but put them out of the cite, and caused the houses (wherin the ymages were) to be censed: and so entred the cite with Psalmes of prayse, geuinge thanks vnto the LORDE. So when he had cast all abhominaciōs out of the cite, he set soch men in it as kepte the lawe of God, and made the cite stronge, and builded a dwellinge place for himself.

Now when they in the castell at Ierusalem were kepte so strately, that they coude not come forth ner in to countre, and might nether bye ner sell: they were very hungrie, and many of them famished to death: In so moch that they besought Symon to be at one with them, which he graunted them. So he put them out from thence, and censed the castell from fylthynesse. And vpon the xxiiij. daye of the seconde moneth in the Clxxj. yeare they entred in to it with thankesgeuyng and branches of palme trees, with harpes, crowdes, cymbals, and lutes, synginge psalmes and songes of prayse vnto God, for that the greate enemy of Israel was ouer come.

And Symon ordered that the same daye shulde be kepte euery yeare in gladnesse, and made stronge the hyl of the temple that was besyde the castell, where he dwelt him self with his company. Symon also perceauynge that Ihon his sonne was a mightie man of armes, made him captayne of all the hoostes, and caused him to dwell at Gaza.

The viiij. Chapter.

IN the Clxxij. yeare gathered kynge Demetrius his hoost, and departed vnto Media, to gett him helpe for to fight agaynst Triphon. Now when Arsaces the kynge of Persia and Media herde, that Demetrius was entred within his borders: he sente one of his prynces to take him alyue, and to brynge him vnto him. So he wente and slewe Demetrius hoost, toke himselfe, brought him to Arsaces, which kepte him in warde. And all the londe of Iuda was in rest, so longe as Symon lyued: for he sought the wealth of his people, therefore were they glad to haue him for their ruler, and to do him worships allwaye.

Symon wanne the cite of Ioppa also for an haufen towne, and made it an inetrance in to the Iles of the see. He enlarged the borders of his people, and cōquered them more londe: He gathered vp many of their people that were presoners: he had the dominiō of Gaza, Bethsura and the castell, which he censed from fylthines, and there was no mā that resisted him: So that euery man tyllid his grounde in peace, the londe of Iuda and the trees gaue their frute and encrease. The elders sat all in iudgment, and toke their deuyce for the wealth of the londe: the yonge men put on worships and harnesse vpon them. He prouydedytayles for the cities, and made goodly stronge holdes of them: so that the fame of his worships was spoken of vnto the ende of y^e worlde. ^a For he made peace thorow out the londe, and Israel was full of myrth and ioye.

Euery mā sat vnder his vyne & fyge trees and there was no man to fraye them awaye. There was none in y^e londe to fight agaynst them, for then the kinges were ouer come. He helped those that were in aduersite amonge his people, he was diligent to se y^e lawe kepte: as for such as were vngodly and wicked he toke thē awaye. He set vp y^e Sanctuary, & encreased the holy vessels of the temple.

^a Leui. 26. a. 3 Reg. 4. b.

When y^e Romaynes and Sparcians had gotten worde, y^e Ionathas was deed, they were right sory. But when they herde y^e Symon his brother was made hye prest in his steade, and how he had wonne the londe agayne with the cities in it: they wrote vnto him in tables of laton, to renue the frendshipe & bonde of loue, which they had made afore with Iudas & Ionathas his brethrē. ^a Which writings were red before the congregacion at Ierusalem.

And this is the copy of the lettres, that the Sparcians sent: The Senatours and citesyns of Sparta sende gretinge vnto Simō y^e greate prest with the elders, prestes, & y^e other people of the Lewes their brethrē: Whē youre embassitours that were sente vnto oure people, certified vs of youre worships, honoure and prosperous wealth: we were glad of their cōminge, and haue written the earande which they spake before the counsell of the people: namely, that Numenius the sonne of Antiochus, and Antipater the sonne of Iason the Iewes embassitours are come vnto vs, for to renue the olde frendshipe with vs. Vpon this the people consented, that the men shulde be honorably intreated, and that the copy of their earande shulde be written in the speciall bokes of the people, for a perpetuall memory vnto the Sparcians: yee and that we shulde sende a copy of the same vnto Symon the greate prest.

After this dyd Symon sende Numenius vnto Rome, with a golden shyld of a thousande pounce weight, to confirme the frendshipe with them: which when the Romaynes vnderstode, they saide: what thākes shal we recompence agayne vnto Symon & his children? For he hath stablished his brethrē, and ouer come the enemies of Israel. Wherefore they graūted him to be fre. And all this wrote the Iewes in tables of laton, and naled it vnto the pilers vpon the mount Sion. The copy of the writinge is this:

The xvij. daye of y^e moneth Elul in the Clxxij. yeare in the thirde yeare of Symon the hye prest, in the greate congregacion of y^e prestes, rulers of the people, and elders of the cōuntre at Asaramel, were these wordes openly declared:

For so much as there was moch warre in oure londe, therefore Symon y^e sonne of MATHIAS (come of the children of Iareb) and his brethren, put them selues in parell, and resisted the enemies of their people: that their Sanctuary and lawe might be manteyned, and dyd their people greate worshipe. Ionathas in like maner, after that he had gouerned his people and bene their hye prest: dyed, and lyeth buried besyde his elders.

After that wolde their enemies haue trodden their holy thinges vnder fote, destroyed their londe, and vtterly waisted their Sanctuary. Then Symon withstode them, and fought for his people, spent moch of his owne money, weapened the valeaunt men of his people, gaue them wages, made stronge y cities of Iuda, with Bethsura that lieth vpon the borders of Iewry, (where the ordinance of their enemies laye somtyme) ⁊ set Iewes there for to kepe it.

f He made fast Ioppa also, which lieth vpon the see, and Gaza that bordreth vpon Azotus, (where the enemies dwelt afore) and there he set Iewes to kepe it: and what so euer was mete for the subduynge of the aduersaries, that layed he therin. Now whē the people sawe the noble actes of Symon, and what worshipe he purposed to do for them, his godly behauoure, and faithfulness which he kepte vnto them, ⁊ how he sought by all waies y wealth of his people, because he dyd all this, therefore they chose him to be their prynce ⁊ hye prest. And in his tyme they prospered wel by him, so y the Heithē were takē out of their londe: ⁊ they also which were in the cite of Dauid at Ierusalē in the castell (where they wente out and defiled all thinges that were aboute the Sanctuary, and did greate harme vnto clenlynes) and Symon put men of the Iewes in it, for the defence of the londe and the cite, and set vp the walles of Ierusalem.

g And kynge Demetrius confirmed him in his hye presthode, made him his frende, and dyd him greate worshipe. For he herde that the Romayns called y Iewes their frendes, louers and brethren: how honorably they receaued Symons embassitours: how y Iewes and prestes consented that he shulde be their prynce and hye prest perpetually (till God raysed vp the true prophet) and that he shulde be their captayne, to care for the Sanctuary, and to set officers vpon the workes therof, ouer the londe, ouer the weapens, ouer the houses of defence, to make prouysion for the holy thynges, and to be obeyed of euery man, and all the wrytynges of y londe to be made in his name: that he shulde be clothed in purple and golde, and that it shulde be lauffull for none of the people nor prestes to breake eny of these thynges, to withstonde his wordes, ner to call eny congregacion in the londe without him: that he shulde be clothed in purple, and weere a colar of golde: And yf there were eny which disobeyed or brake this ordinaunce, that he shulde be punyshed.

So all the people consented to alowe Symon, and to do acordinge to these wordes. Symon also himselfe toke it vpon him, and was contente to be the hye prest, the captayne and prynce of the Iewes and prestes, and to gouerne them all. And they commaunded to make this wrytinge in tables of laton, and to fasten it vnto the compasse of the Sanctuary in an open place: and to laye vp a copy of the same in the treasury, that Symon and his posterite might haue it.

The xv. Chapter.

MOROUER, kynge Antiochus the sonne of Demetrius sente lettres from the Iles of the see, vnto Symon the hye prest and prynce of the Iewes, and to all the people, conteyninge these wordes: Antiochus the kynge sendeth gretinge vnto Symon the hye prest and to the people of the Iewes. For so moch as certayne wicked men haue gotten the kyngdome of oure progenitours, I am purposed to chalenge the realme agayne, and to restore it to the olde estate.

Wherefore I haue gathered a greate hoost and made shyppes of warre: that I maye go thorow the cowntre, and be auenged of them which haue destroyed oure londe, and waysted many cities in my realme. And therfore now I make the fre also from all the tributes, wherof all kynges my progenitours haue discharged the, and from other customes (wher from they haue released the) what so euer they be: Yee I geue the leaue to smyte money of thine owne within thy londe. As for Ierusalem, I wil that it be holy and fre: and all the weapens and houses of defence which thou hast buylded and kepest in thine hondes, shal be thine. Where as eny thinge is or shal be owynge vnto the kynge, I forgeue it the, from this time forth for euermore. And when we haue optayned oure kyngdome, we shal do the, thy people and the temple greate worshipe: so that youre honoure shal be knowne thorow out þ̄ whole worlde.

In the Clxxiii. yeare wente Antiochus in to his fathers londe, and all the men of warre came together vnto him, so that fewe were left with Triphon. So the kyng Antiochus folowed vpon him, but he fled vnto Dora, which lieth by the see syde: for he sawe þ̄ there was myschefe comminge vnto him, and that his hoost had forsaken him. Then came Antiochus vnto Dora with an hūdreth & twenty thousande men of armes vpon fote, and eight thousande horsmen. So he compased the cite rounde aboute, and þ̄ shippes came by the see. Thus they vexed the cite by londe and by water, in so moch that they suffred no man to go in nor out.

“In the meane season came Numenius (¶ they that had bene with him) from the cite of Rome, hauynge lettres written vnto the kynges and prouincies, wherein were conteyned these wordes: C Lucius the Mayre of Rome sendeth gretinge vnto Ptolomy the kyng. The embassitours of the Iewes oure frēdes beinge sent from Symon the hye prest and from the people of the Iewes, came vnto us, for to renue the olde frendshipe and bonde of loue, and brought a shyld of golde weyenge a thousande pounce, which we were contente to receaue of them. Wherefore we thought it good to wryte vnto the kynges & prouincies, to do them no harme, nor to take parte agaynst thē, their cities ner countrees nether to mayntene their enemies agaynst them. Yf there be eny wicked personnes therfore fled from their cowntre vnto you, delyuer them vnto Symon the hye prest, þ̄ he maye punysh them acordinge to their owne lawe.

The same wordes wrote the Romaynes also vnto Demetrius the kyng, to Attalus, Araba, Arsaces and to all regions: as Samsanes, to them of Sparta, Delo, Mido, Sydon, Caria, Samos, Pamphilia, Lycia, Alicarnassum, and to þ̄ Rhodes: to Faselis, Co, Sida, Arado, Gortyna, Gnydum, to Cypros and to Cyren. B And of euery letre they sent a copy to Symon the hye prest and to the people of the Iewes. So Antiochus the kyng brought his host vnto Dora the seconde tyme, to take it: where he made diuerse ordinaūce of warre, and kepte Triphon in, þ̄ he shulde not come forth. Then Symon sent Antiochus two thousande chosen mē to helpe him with golde, syluer and other plenteous geer: Neuerthelesse he wolde not receaue them, but brake all þ̄ couenaunt which he made with Symon afore, & withdrew himself frō him.

He sent Athenobius also a frende of his vnto Symon, for to reason with him, sayenge: Ye witholde fro me Ioppa and Gaza (with the castell that is at Ierusalē) which are cities of my realme, whose borders ye haue destroyed, and done greate euell in the londe, hauynge the dominaciō in many other places of my kyngdome. Wherefore delyuer now E cities which ye haue takē, with þ̄ tributes of þ̄ places þ̄ ye haue rule vpon without the borders of Iewry: Or els geue me fyue hūdreth talentes of syluer, yee and for the harme that ye haue done in the cities and for the tributes of the same, other fyue hundreth talētes. Yf no, we shal come and fight agaynst you.

So Athenobius the kynges frende came to Ierusalē, and when he sawe þ̄ greate worshippe and honoure of Symō in golde, syluer and so greate plenty of ornamentes: he marveled, and tolde Symon as the kyng commaunded him. Then answered Symon and saide vnto him: “As for vs, we haue nether taken other mēs londe, ner witholdē them, but only oure fathers heretage, which oure enemies had vnrighteously in possession a certayne tyme. This heretage of oure fathers haue we challenged in processe of tyme. And where as thou cōplaynest concernynge Ioppa and Gaza, they dyd greate harme to oure people and in oure londe, yet wyll we geue an C. talentes for them.

Neuertheles Athenobius answered him not F one worde, but turned agayne wrothfully vnto þ̄ kyng, and tolde him all these wordes, and the greate dignite of Symon with all that he had sene, and the kinge was very angrie. In the meane tyme fled Triphon by shippe vnto Orthosaida. Then the kyng made Cendebeus captayne of the see coast, & gaue him an hoost of fote men and horsmen, cōmaundinge him to remoue þ̄ hoost towarde Iewry, & to buylde vp the cite of Cedron, to make vp þ̄ portes, & to warre agaynst þ̄ people of the Iewes. As for the kyng him self, he folowed vpon Triphon. So Cendebeus came vnto Iamnia, & beganne to vexe þ̄ people, to treade downe Iewry, to "take the people pre-soners, to slaye the & to buylde vp Cedron:

where he set horsmē & other men of warre, that they might come forth and go thorow the stretes of Iewry, like as the kynge had commaunded him.

The xvi. Chapter.

THEN came Ihon vp from Gaza,^a and tolde Symon his father, what Cendebeus had done amonge their people. Vpon this called Symon two of his eldest sonnes, Iudas & Ihon, and sayde vnto them: I and my brethren & my fathers house, haue euer from oure youth vp vnto this daye, foughten agaynst the enemies of Israel, & God gaue vs good fortune to delyuer Israel oft tymes. And now for so much as I am olde, be ye in steade of me & my brother, to go forth & fight for oure people, & the helpe of God be with you. So he chose xx. M. fightinge men of the cowntre, with horsmen also, which wente forth agaynst Cendebeus and rested at Modin.

In the mornynge they arose, & wete in to y playne felde: and beholde, a mightie greate hoost came agaynst the, both of fote men & horsmen. Now was there a water broke betwixte them, & Ihon remoued the hoost towards them. And when he sawe that the people was afrayed to go ouer y water broke, he wente ouer first him self: and the men
seyng this, folowed him.

Then Ihon set his horsmen & fote men in orde, the one by the other, for their enemies horsmen were very many. But when they blewe vp the prestes trompettes, Cendebeus fled with his hoost, wherof many were slayne, and the remnaunt gat them to their stronge holde. Iudas also Iho's brother whas wouided at y same tyme. And Ihon folowed still vpon y enemies,^b till he came to Cedro which he buylded. The enemies fled also vnto the towres y were in y felde of Azotus, & those dyd Ihon burne vp. Thus there were slayne
ij. M. men of them, & Ihon turned agayne peaceably to Iewry.

And in the felde of Iericho was Ptolomy the sonne of Abobus made captayne: which because he had abundaunce of syluer & golde, (for he had married the daughter of Symon the hye prest) waxed proude in his mynde, & thought to conquere the lode, ymagininge falsed agaynst Symō & his sonnes, to destroye
the. Now as Symon was goynge aboute thorow the cities, y were in y cōtre of Iewry, and carynge for them: he came downe to Iericho, with Matathias & Iudas his sonnes, in the Clxxvij. yeare, in y xj. moneth called Sabat. Then Ptolomy y sonne of Abobus receaued them (but with disceate) in to a stronge house of his called Doch, which he had buylded, where he made them a banquet.

So when Symon & his sonnes were mery & had dronken well, Ptolomy stode vp with his men (whō he had hyd there) & toke their weapens, entred in to the banquet house, & slewe Symon with his two sonnes, & certayne of his seruantes. Soch greate vnfaithfulnesse dyd Ptolomy in Israel, and recōpensed euell for good. Then wrote this Ptolomy y same vnto kynge Antiochus, requyringe him that he shulde sende him an hoost to helpe him: & so shulde he delyuer him the londe, with the cities & tributes of the same. He sent other men also vnto Gaza, for to take Ihon: & wrote vnto the captaynes to come to him, & he shulde geue them syluer, golde and rewardes. And to Ierusalem he sent other, to take it and the Sanctuary.

The ranne there one before, & tolde Ihon in Gaza, that his father & his brethren were slayne, and how that Ptolomy had sent to slaie him also. Whē Ihon herde this, he was sore abaszshed, and layed hōdes of them that were come to destroye him, and slewe them:
for he knewe, that they wente aboute to kyll him.

As for other thinges concernynge Ihon: of his warres, of his noble actes (wherin he behaued him self manfully) of the buyldinge of walles which he made, and other of his dedes: They are written in the cronicles of his presthode, from the tyme forth y he was made hye prest after his father.

The first Chapter.

A THE brethrē of ꝑ Jewes which be at Ierusalem & in the londe of Iewry, wish vnto those brethrē of ꝑ Jewes that are thorow out Egipte: good fortune, health and peace.

God the LORDE be gracious vnto you, & thinke vpon his couenaunt ꝑ he made with Abraham, Isaac & Iacob his faithfull seruantes: and geue you all soch an herte, that ye maye loue and serue him, yee and perfourme his wyll with an whole herte and of a wyllinge mynde: He opē youre hertes in his lawe and in his commaundementes, sende you peace: heare youre prayers, be at one with you, and neuer forsake you in tyme of trouble. This is heare oure prayer for you.

B What tyme as Demetrius reigned, in the Clxix. yere, we Iewes wrote vnto you in ꝑ trouble and violence that came vpon vs. In those yeres after that Iason departed out of the holy londe and kyngdome, they brent vp the portes, and shed innocent bloude. Then made we oure prayer vnto ꝑ LORDE, and were herde: we offred, and lighted the candels, settinge forth cakes and bred. ^b And now come ye vnto the feast of tabernacles in the moneth Casleu.

In the Clxxxvij. yere ꝑ people ꝑ was at Ierusalem and in Iewry, the counsell and Iudas him self, sent this wholsome salutaciō vnto Aristobolus kyng Ptolomys master, which came of the generacion of the anoynted prestes: and to the Iewes that were in Egipte: In so moch as God hath deliuered vs from greates paelis, we thanke him hylie, In that we resisted so mightie a kyng. And why? he brought men out of Persis by heapes, to fight agaynst vs and the holy cite. For as he was in Persis (namely, ꝑ captayne with the greates hoost) he perished in the temple of Naneas, beyng disceaued thorow the deuyce of Naneas prestes. For as he was purposed to haue dwelt there, Antiochus & his frēdes came thither, to receaue moch moneye for a dowry. So whē Naneas prestes had layed forth ꝑ moneye, he entred with a small company in to the compasse of the temple, and so they shut the temple.

C Now when Antiochus entred by openyng the preny inraunce of the temple, ꝑ prestes stoned ꝑ captayne to death, hewed thē in peces that were with him, smote of their heades, and threwe them out. In all thinges God be prayed, which hath deliuered the wicked in to oure hondes.

Where as we now are purposed to kepe the purification of the temple vpon ꝑ xxv. daye of the moneth Casleu, we thought necessary to certifie you therof: that ye also might kepe the tabernacles feast daye, & the daye of the fyre, which was geuen vs when Nehemias offred, after that he had set vp ꝑ temple & the autler. For what tyme as oure fathers were led awaye vnto Persis, ꝑ prestes (which then sought the honoure of God) toke ꝑ fyre priuely from ꝑ autler, & hyd it in a valley, where as was a depe drye pyt: & therein they kepte it, because the place was vnknowne to euery man. Now after many yeres when it pleased God, ꝑ Nehemias shulde be sent from the kyng of Persia: he sent the 'childers children of those prestes (which had hyd the fyre) to seke it. And as they tolde vs, they founde no fyre, but thicke water.

D Thē cōmaunded he them to drawe it vp, & to bryng it him, & ꝑ offerynges withall. Now when ꝑ sacrifices were layed on & ordred, the prest Nehemias commaunded to sprenkle them & the wod with the water. Whē this was done, & the tyme come ꝑ the Sonne shone, which afore was hyd in the cloude: there was a greates fyre kyndled, In so moch ꝑ euery man marueled. Now all the prestes prayed, whyle the sacrifice was a makinge. Ionathas prayed first, and ꝑ other gaue answer.

And Nehemias prayer was after this maner: O LORDE God maker of all thinges, thou fearfull & stronge, thou righteous & mercifull, thou ꝑ art onely a gracious kyng, onely lyberall, onely iust, Allmightie and euerlastinge, thou ꝑ deliuerest Israel from all trouble, thou ꝑ hast chosen the fathers & halowed them: receaue the offeringe for the whole people of Israel, preserue thine owne porcion, & halowe it. Gather those together, ꝑ are scatred abroad from vs: deliuer them ꝑ vnder the Heithē bondage, loke vpon them which are despyed & abhorred, ꝑ the Heithen maie knowe & se, how ꝑ thou art oure God: Punyshe them ꝑ oppresse, and proudly put vs to dishonoure. Set thy people agayne in thy holy place, ^d like as Moses hath spokē.

^a Deut. 30. b.^b Leui. 23. f.^c Leuit. 6. a. 10. a. 16. c.^d Deu. 30. a.

E And the prestes songe Psalmes of thankesgeuyng, so lōge as the sacrifice endured.
Now when the sacrifice was brent, Nehemias commaunded the greate stones to be sprenkled with the ^aresydue of the water. Which when it was done, there was kyndled a flamme of thē also: but it was consumed thorow the light, y shyned from the altar. So whē this matter was knowne, it was tolde the kynge of Persia, that in the place where the prestes (which were led awaye) had hyd fyre, there apared water in steade of fyre, & that Nehemias & his company had purified the sacrifices withall. Then the kynge considerynge & ponderynge y matter diligently, made him a temple, to proue the thinge y was done.
And whē he founde it so in dede, he gaue the prestes many giftes & dyuerse rewardes: yee he toke them with his owne hōde, & gaue thē.
And Nehemias called the same place Nephthar, which is as moch to saye as a clensynge:
but many men call it Nephī.

The ij. Chapter.

IT is founde also in the writings of Jeremy the prophet, y he commaunded them which were caried awaye, to take fyre, as it is sayde afore. ^aHe cōmaūded them also, y they shulde not forget the ^alawe & cōmaūdementes of the LORDE, & y they shulde not erre in their ^amyndes, whē they se ymages of syluer & golde with their ornamentes. These & soch other thinges commaūded he them, & exorted them, that they shulde not lett the lawe of God go out of their hertes.

It is wrytten also, how the prophet (at y commaūdemēt of God) charged them, to take the tabernacle & the arke with them:
& he wente forth vnto the mountaine, where Moses clymmed vp, ^a& sawe y heretage of God. And when Jeremy came there, he founde an open caue, wherin he layed the tabernacle, y arke & the altar of incense, & so stopped the hole. There came certayne men together also folowing him, to mark the place, but they coude not fynde it. Which when Jeremy perceaued, he reproued thē, sayenge: As for that place, it shalbe vn-knowne, vntill y tyme that God gather his people together againe, & receaue thē vnto mercy. Then shal God shewe them these thinges, & the maiesty of the LORDE shal appeare, & the cloude also, like as it was shewed vnto Moses: & like as when Salomon desyred y the place might be ^asanctified, & it was shewed him.

For he beyng a wyse man, handled honorably & wysely: offerynge vnto God in y halowinge of the temple, when it was fynished.
^aAnd like as when Moses prayed vnto the LORDE, the fyre came downe from heauen, & consumed the burnt offeringe: Euen so prayed Salomon also, & the ^afyre came downe from heauen, & cōsumed the burnt offeringe.
And Moses sayde: because the synofferynge was not eaten, therefore it is cōsumed. In like maner Salomon kepte the dedicacion (or halowynge) eight dayes.

In y Annotations & wrytynges of ^aJeremy, C were these thinges put also: & how he made a lybrary, & how he gathered out of all coun-trees the bokes of the prophetes, of David, the epistles of the kynges, and of the presentes. Euen so Iudas also, loke what he lerned by experiece of warre, & soch thinges as hath happened vnto vs, he gathered thē all together, & so we haue them by vs. Yf ye now desyre to haue the same, sende some body to fetch them vnto you. Where as we thē are aboute to celebrate the purificacion, we haue wrytten vnto you. Therefore ye shall do well, yf ye kepe the same dayes. We hope also, that the God (which deluyered his people, & gaue them all y heretage, kyngdome, presthode & ^aSanctuary y he promised them in the lawe) shal shortly haue mercy vpō vs, & gather vs together from vnder the heauē in to his holy place: for he hath sauēd vs frō greate pears, & hath clenēd the place.

As concernynge Iudas Machabeus & his D brethren, the purificacion of the greate temple, the dedicacion of the altar, yee & of the warres y cōcerne noble Antiochus and ^aEup-restored agayne vnto the LORDE, y was so mercifull vnto the.) As touching Iason also of Cyren, we haue vndertakē cōpendiously to brynge in to one boke, the thinges y were cōprehended of him in fyue. For we cōsideringe the multitude of the bookes, and how harde it shulde be for them y wolde medle with stories and actes (and that because of so dyuerse matters) haue vnder taken so to comprehend the stories: that such as are disposed to reade, might haue pleasure and pastyme therin: and that they which are diligent in soch thinges, might the better thinke vpon them: yee and that who so euer red them, might haue profit therby.

Neuerthelesse we oure selues that haue medled with this matter for the shortenynge of it, haue taken no small labour, but greate diligence, watchynges and trauallye. Like as they that make a feast, wolde fayne do other men pleasure: Euen so we also (for many mens sakes) are very wel content to take the labour, where as we maye shortly comprehendē, the thynges that other men haue truly wrytten.

For he y buyldeth an house a new, must prouyde for many thynges to y whole buylde: but he that paynteth it afterwarde, seketh but only what is comly, mete and conuenient to garnysh it withall. Euen so do we also in like maner. And why? He that begynneth to wryte a story for the first, must with his vnderstandinge gather the matter together, set his wordes in ordre, and diligently seke out euery parte: But he that afterwarde wyll shorten it, vseth few wordes, and toucheth not the matter at the largiest. Let this be sufficient for a prologe, now wyll we begynne to shewe the matter: for it is but a foolish thinge to make a longe prologe, and to be shorte in the story it self.

The iij. Chapter

WHAT tyme as the holy cite was inhabited in all peace and wealth, t when the lawes were yet very well kepte. (For so was it ordered by Onias the hye prest and other godly men, that were enemies to wickednesse:) It came therto, that euen the kynges and p rynces the selues dyd the place greate worshipe, and garnished y temple with greate giftes: In so moch that Seleucus kyng of Asia of his owne rentes bare all the costes y belonging to the seruyce of the offerynges. Then Symon of the trybe of Ben Iamin, a ruler of the temple, laboured to worke some myschefe in the cite: but the hye prest resisted him.

Neuerthelesse when he might not ouercome Onias, he gat him to Appolonius the sonne of Thersa (which the was chefe lorde in Celosyria and Phenices) and tolde him, y the treasury in Ierusalem was full of innumerable money, and how that the comons goodes (which belonged not vnto the offerynges) were exceddinge greate also: yee and how it were possible, that all these might come vnder the kynges power.

Now when Appollonius had shewed the kyng of the moneye, as it was tolde him: y kinge called for Heliodorus his stewarde, and sent him with a commaundement, to brynge him the sayde money. Immediatly Heliodorus toke his iourney, but vnder a coloure, as though he wolde go thorow Celosyria and Phenices to vyset the cities, but his purpose was to fulfill the kynges pleasure. So when he came to Ierusalem, and was loungly receaue of the hye prest in to the cite: he tolde what was determed concernynge the moneye, and shewed the cause of his comynge: he axed also, yf it were so in dede. Then the hye prest tolde him, that there was soch money layed vp for the vpholdinge of weddowes and fatherlesse childre, and how that a certayne of it belonged vnto Hyrcanus Tobias a noble man: and that of all the moneye (which that wicked Symon had bewrayed) there were iiij. hundreth talentes of syluer, and ij. hundreth of golde: yee t that it were vnpossible for those mens meaninge to be disceaue, that had layed vp their moneye in the place and temple (which is had in worshipe thorow the whole worlde) for the mayntenaunce and honoure of y same. Whervnto Heliodorus answered, y the kyng had commaunded him in eny wyse, to brynge him the moneye.

So at the daye appoynted, Heliodorus entred in to the temple to ordre this matter. But there was no small feare thorow out the whole cite. The prestes fell downe before the alter in their vestimentes, and called vnto heauen vpon him, which had made a lawe concernynge stuffe geuen to kepe,^a that they shulde be safely preserued, for soch as comitte them vnto kepyng. Then who so had loked the hye prest in the face, it wolde haue greued his herte: For his countenance and the chaunginge of his colour, declared the inwarde sorowe of his mynde. The mā was all in heuynesse, and his body in feare: wherby that loked vpon him, might perceaue the grefe of his herte. The other people also came out of their houses by heapes vnto the comon prayer, because the place was like to come in to confucion. The women came together thorow the stretes, with hayrie clothes aboute their brestes.

D The virgins also that were kepte in, ranne to Onias, some to the walles, other some loked out at the wyndowes: yee they all helde vp their hondes towarde heauē, & prayed. A miserable thinge was it, to loke vpon the comon people, & the hye prest beyng in soch trouble. But they besought Almightye God, that the goodes which were committed vnto thē, might be kepte whole, for those that had deliuered them vnto their kepyng. Neuertheles the thinge that Heliodorus was determed to do, that perfourmed he in the same place, he him self personally beyng aboute the treasury with his men of warre. But the sprete of Almightye God shewed him self openly, so that all they which presumed to obeye Heliodorus, fell thorow y^e power of God in to a greate fearfulnessse & drede. For there apearede vnto them an horse,^b with a terrible man syttinge vpon him, deckte in goodly araye, and the horse smote at Heliodorus with his fore fete. Now he that sat vpon y^e horse, had harnessse of golde vpon him.

E Morouer there apearede ij. fayre and beutifull yonge men in goodly araye, which stode by him, scourged him of both the sydes, & gaue him many stripes without ceasinge. With that, fell Heliodorus sodenly vnto the grounde. So they toke him vp (beyng compassed aboute with greate darcnesse) and bare him out vpō a beare. Thus he that came with so many runners and men of warre in to y^e sayde treasury, was borne out, where as no man might helpe him: and so the power of God was manifest and knowne. He laye still comme also by the power of God, destitute of all hope and life. And they praised the LORDE, that he had shewed his power vpon his place and temple, which a litle afore was full of feare & trouble: and that thorow the reuelacion of the Almightye LORDE it was fylled with ioye and gladnesse.

Thē certaine of Heliodorus frēdes praised Onias, that in all haist he wolde call vpon God, to graunte him his life, which was geuyng vpon the goost. So the hye prest considered the matter, and lest the kyng shulde suspecte that the Iewes had done Heliodorus some euell: he offred an healthofferynge for him. Now whē y^e hye prest had opteyned his petition, the same yonge mē in the same clothinge apearede, & stode besyde Heliodorus, sayenge: Thanke Onias y^e hye prest, for for his sake hath y^e LORDE graunted the thy life:^d therfore seyng y^e God hath scourged y^e, geue^f him prayse & thankes, and shewe euery man his might & power. And whē they had spoken these wordes, they apearede nomore.

So Heliodorus offred vnto God, made greate vowes vnto him which had graūted him his life, thāked Onias, toke his hoost, & wēt agayne to y^e kinge. Thē testified he vnto euery mā, of y^e greate workes of God, y^e he had sene with his eyes. And whē the kyng axed Heliodorus who were mete to be sent yet once agayne to Ierusalem, he sayde: Yf thou hast eny enemy or aduersary vnto thy realme, sende him thither, & thou shalt haue him punished, yf he escape with his life: for in y^e place (no doute) there is a speciall power & workinge of God. For he y^e dwelleth in heauē, vysiteth & defendeth y^e place: & all y^e come to do it harme, he punysheth & plageth thē. This is now y^e matter cōcerninge Heliodorus, & y^e kepyng of y^e treasury at Ierusalē.

The iiii. Chapter.

THIS Symon now (of whom we spake afore) beyng a bewrayer of the money and of his owne naturall countre, reported the worst of Onias: as though he had moued Heliodorus vnto this, and as though he had bene a brynger vp of euell. Thus was he not ashamed to call him an enemy of y^e realme, that was so faithfull an ouerseer & defender of the cite & of his people: yee & so feruent in the lawe of God. But when the malice of Symon increased so farre, y^e thorow his frendes there were certayne manslaughteres comitted: Onias considered the parell \hat{y} might come thorow this strife, and how that Appollonius (namely the chefe lorde in Celosyria and Phenices) was all set vpon tyranny, and Symons malice increased the same: He gat him to the kynge, not as an accuser of the citesyns, but as one that by him self intended the comon wealth of the whole multitude. For he sawe it was not possible to lye in peace, nether Symon to leaue of from his foolishnesse, excepte the kynge dyd loke therto.

^a Exo. 22. b.^b 2 Ma. 10. c. and 11. b.^c 2 Mac. 5. c.^d Act. 27. c.^e 2 Ma. 3. a.

33 But after the death of Seleucus, when Antiochus (which is called the noble) toke \hat{y} kyngdome: Iason the brother of Onias laboured to be hye prest: For he came vnto the kynge, and promised him thre hundredth τ lx. talentes of syluer, τ of the other rētes lxxx. talentes. Besydes this he promised him yet an C. τ L. yf he might haue \hat{y} scole of \hat{y} children, and that he might call them of Ierusalem Antiochians. Which when the kynge had graunted, τ he had gotten the superiorite: he begāne immediatly to drawe his kinsmen to the custome of the Heithen, put downe the thinges, that the Iewes had set vp of loue, by Ihon the father of Eupolemius (which was sent embassitoure vnto Rome, for to make the bonde of frendshippe and loue.) He put downe all the Lawes τ Lyberties of the Iewes, and set vp wicked statutes. He durst make a fightinge scole vnder \hat{y} castell, and set fayre yonge men to lerne the maners of whores and brodels.

C This was now the begynnynge of the Heithenish τ straunge cōuersacion, brought in thorow the vngracious and vnherde wickednesse of Iason (which shulde not be called a prest, but an vngodly personne.) In so moch, that the prestes were now nomore occupide aboute the seruyce of the aulter, but despyed the temple, regarded not the offrynges: yee gaue their diligece to lerne to fight, to wristle, to leape, to daunce, τ to put at \hat{y} stone: not settyng by \hat{y} honoure of \hat{y} fathers, but liked \hat{y} glory of the Grekes best of all: for the which they stroue perlosly, and were gredy to folowe their statutes, yee their lust was in all thinges to be like the, which afore were their enemies τ destroyers. Howbeit to do wickedly agaynst \hat{y} lawe of God, shal not escape vnpunyshed: but of this we shal speake here after.

What tyme as the *Olympiades sportes were played at Tyrus (the kynge him selfe beinge presente) this vngracious Iason sent wicked men, bearinge from them of Ierusalem (which now were called Antiochians) iij. C. drachmas of syluer for an offrynge to Hercules. These had they that caried them, desyred vnder soch a fashiō, as though they shulde not haue bene offred, but bestowed to other vses. Neuertheles he that sent them, sent them to the intent that they shulde be offred vnto Hercules. But because of those that were present, they were geuen as to the makynge of shippes. And Appollonius the sonne of Nesteus was sent in to Egipte, because of the noble men of kynge Ptolomy Philometor. Now when Antiochus perceaued \hat{y} he was put out from medlinge in the realme, he sought his owne profit, departed from thence, came to Ioppa, τ then to Ierusalem: where he was honorably receaued of Iason τ the cite, τ was brought in with torche light and with greate prayse: and so he turned his hoost vnto Phenices.

After iij. yeaere Iason sent Menelaus (the fore sayde Symons brother) ^b to beare the money vnto \hat{y} kynge, τ to bringe him answeere of other necessary matters. But he (when he was prayed of \hat{y} kynge for magnifieng of his power) turned \hat{y} hye presthode vnto him self, layenge vp iij. C. talētes of syluer for Iason. So whē he had gotten cōmaundemētes from \hat{y} kynge, he came, hauinge nothinge \hat{y} becōmeth a prest, but bearinge \hat{y} stomack of a cruell tyraunte, τ the wrath of a wyld brute beest. ^c Then Iason (which had disceaueid his owne brother) seynge \hat{y} he him self was begyled also, was fayne to fle in to \hat{y} lōde of \hat{y} Ammonites, τ Menelaus gat \hat{y} dominiō. But as for \hat{y} moneye \hat{y} he had promised vnto the kynge, he dyd nothinge therin, when Sostratus the ruler of \hat{y} castell requyred it of him. (For Sostratus was the man, \hat{y} gathered \hat{y} customes) wherfore they were both called before the kynge. Thus was Menelaus put out of \hat{y} presthode, τ Lysimachus his brother came in his steade. Sostratus also was made lorde of the Cyprians.

It happened in \hat{y} meane season, \hat{y} \hat{y} Tharsians τ Malloicians made insurreciō, because they were geuen for a present vnto kynge Antiochus concubayne. Then came f kynge in all f haist, to still them agayne and to pacifie the matter, leauynge Andronicus there to be his debyte, as one mete therefore. Now Menelaus supposinge that he had gotten a right convenient tyme, stole certayne vessels of golde out of the temple, and gaue the to Andronicus for a present: and some he solde at Tyrus and in the cities therby.

Which when Onias knewe of a suertye, he reprobued him: but he kepte him in a sanctuary besyde Daphnis, that lyeth by Antioche. Wherefore Menelaus gat him to Andronicus, and prayed him that he wolde slaye Onias. So when he came to Onias, he counceiled him craftely to come out of the sanctuary, geuynge him his honde with an ooth (how be it he suspecte him) and the he slewe Onias, without eny regarde of rightuousnesse. For the which cause not only the Iewes, but other nacions also toke indignacion, and were displeased for the vnrightuous death of so godly a man.

And when the kynge was come agayne from Cilicia, the Iewes and certaine of the Grekes wente vnto him, complaynyng for the vnrightuous death of Onias. Yee Antiochus himself also was sory in his mynde for Onias, so f it pitied him, and he wepte, remembringe his sobrenesse and manerly behauoure. Wherefore he was so kyndled in his mynde, f he comaunded Andronicus to be striped out of his purple clothinge, and so to be led thorow out all the cite, yee and f vngracious man to be slayne in f same place, where he committed his wickednes vpon Onias. Thus f LORDE rewarded him his punishment, as he had deserued. Now when Lysimachus had done many wycked dedes in f temple thorow the counsell of Menelaus, and the voyce came abrode: the multitude gathered the together agaynst Lysimachus, for he had caried out now moch golde.

So when the people arose and were full of displeasure, Lysimachus armed iij. M. vnthriftes to defende him: a certayne tyraunte beyng their captayne, which was growen both in age and woodnesse. But when the people vnderstode the purpose of Lysimachus, some gat stones, some good stronge clubbes, and some cast aszshes vpon Lysimachus. Thus there were many of the wounded, some beyng slayne, and all the other chased awaye. But as for f wicked churchrobber himself, they kylled him besyde the treasury. Of these matters therefore there was kepte a courte agaynst Menelaus.

Now when f kynge came to Tyrus, they made a cōplaynte vnto him of Menelaus, concerninge this busynesse, and f embassitours were there. But Menelaus wente and promysed Ptolomy to geue him moch money, yf he wolde perswade the kynge. So Ptolomy wete to the kynge in to a courte (where as he was set to coole him) and brughte him out of f mynde. In so moch f he discharged Menelaus fro f accusations, f not withstandinge was cause of all myschefe: and those poore men (which yf they had tolde their cause, yee before the Scythians, they shulde haue ben iudged innocēt) the he cōdēned to death. Thus were they soone punyshed, which folowed vpō f matter for f cite, and for f people, and for f holy vessell. Wherefore they of Tyrus toke indignacion, and buried the honorably. And so thorow f covetousnesse of them that were in power, Menelaus remayned still in authorite, increasinge in malyce, to the hurte of the citesyns.

The v. Chapter.

AT f same tyme Antiochus made him ready to go agayne in to Egipte. The were there sene at Ierusalem (xl. dayes lōge) horsmē runnyng to and fro in the ayre, which had rayment of golde, and speares. There were sene also whole hoostes of mē weapened, and horses runnyng in an ordre, how they came together, how they helde forth their shildes, how f harnessed men drew out their sweardes, and shot their dartes. The shyne of f goldē weapēs was sene, and of all maner of armure. Wherefore euery mā prayed, f those tokens might turne to good. Now whē there was gone forth a false rumoure, as though Antiochus had bene deed: Iason toke a M. mē, and came sodely vpō f cite. The citesyns rāne vnto f walles, at f last was f cite taken, and Menelaus fled in to the castell.

As for Iason, he spared not his owne citesyns in the slaughter, nether considered he what greate euell it were, to destroye f prosperite of his owne kynsmen: but dyd as one that had gotten the victory of his enemies, and not of his frendes. For all this gatt he not the superiorite, but at the last receaned confucion for his malice, and "fled agayne like a vagabunde in to the londe of the Ammonites. Fynally (for a rewarde of his wickednesse) he was accused before Aretha the kynge of the Arabians: In so moche that he was fayne to fle from cite to cite, beyng despyed of euery man as a forsaker of the lawes, and an abhominable personne. And at f last (as an open enemy of his owne naturall countre and of the citesyns,) was dryuen in to Egipte.

Thus he f afore put many out of their owne natyue londe, perysht from home him self. He wente to Lacedemon, thinkinge there to haue gotten succoure by reason of kynrede. And he that afore had casten many one out vnburied, was throwen out himself, no man mournynge for him, ner puttinge him in his graue: so that he nether enioyed f buriall of a straunger, nether was he partaker of his fathers sepulchre.

C Now when this was done the kinge suspecte, f the Iewes wolde haue fallen from him: wherfore he came in a greate displeasure out of Egipte, t toke the cite by violence. b He comāunded his men of warre also, that they shulde kyll t not spare, but slaye downe such as with stode them, or clymmed vp vpō f houses. Thus was there a greate slaughter of yonge men, olde men, women, children and virgins. In iij. dayes were there slayne lxxx. M. forty thousande put in preson, t no lesse solde. Yet was he not cōtent with this, but durst go in to the most holy temple (Menelaus that traytoure to f lawes t to his owne naturall countre, beyng his gyde) t with his wicked hondes toke f holy vessell, which other kynges t cities had geuen thither for f garnishinge t honoure of f place: the toke he in his hōdes vnworthely, t defyled them.

D So madd was Antiochus, that he considered not, how that God was a litle wroth for the synnes of them that dwelt in the cite, for the which such confucion came vpon that place. And why? "yf it had not happened them to haue bene lapped in many synnes, this Antiochus (as soone as he had come) had sodenly bene punished, and shot out for his presumpciō: "like as Heliodorus was, whom Seleucus the kynge sente to robbe f treasury. Neuertheles God hath not chosn the people for the places sake, but the place for the peoples sake: and therefore is the place become partaker of the peoples trouble, but afterwarde shall it enioye the wealth of them. And like as it is now forsaken in the wrath of allmighty God, so when the greate God is reconcyled, it shal be set vp in hye worshippe agayne.

So when Antiochus had taken a M. and viij. C. talentes out of the temple, he gat him to Antioche in all the haist, thinkinge in his pryde, that he might make mē sale vpon the drye londe, and to go vpon f see, such an hye mynde had he. He lefte debites there to vexe the people: At Ierusalem left he Philippe a Phrigian, in maners more cruell the himself f set him there: At Garisim he left Andronicus t Menelaus, which were more greuous to the citisyns then other. Now as he was thus set in malyce against f Iewes, he sent Appollonius an hated prynce, c with xxij. M. comāundinge him to slaye all those f were of perfecte age, and to sell the wome, maydes t children. When he came now to Ierusalem, he fained peace, t kepte him still vntill f Sabbath daye. And then he comāunded his men to take them to their weapens (for f Iewes kepte holy daye) and so he slewe all them f were gone forth to the open playe, runninge here and there thorow the cite with his men wapened, and murthered a greate nombre. f But Iudas Machabeus was the tenth, fled in to the wyldernes, led his life there with his company amonge the wylde beestes and vpon the mountaynes: dwellinge there and eatinge grasse, lest they shulde be partakers of the fylthynesse.

The vi. Chapter.

N OT longe after this, sent the kynge a a messaunger of Antioche, c for to compell f Iewes to altre f ordinaunces of f fathers t the lawe of God, to defyle the temple f was at Ierusalem, t to call it the tēple of Iupiter Olimpius: t f they shulde be in Gazarim, as those which dwell at f place of Iupiter the harberous. This wicked sediciō of f vngodly was heuy vpon all f people: For f temple was full of voluptuousnes bebbinge t bollinge of f Heithē, of ribaundes t harlotes together. The womē wente in to f holy place, t bare in that was not lauffull. The aluter also was full of vnlauffull thinges, which f lawe forbyddeth to laye vpō it. The Sabbathes were not kepte, the other solempne feastes of f londe were not regarded. To be plaine, there durst no mā be a knowne that he was a Lewe.

In the daye of the kynges byrth they were compelled perforce to offre: a when f feast of Bachus was kepte, they were cōstrayned to weere garlandes of yven, and so to go aboute for the honoure of Bachus.

³³ Morouer thorow the counsell of Ptolomy, there wente out a commaundement in f nexte cities of the Heithen, f they shulde intreate the Lewes in like maner: namely, to cōpell thē for to do sacrifice after f lawes of f Gentiles: and who so wolde not, to put them to death. "A piteous thinge was it to se. There were ij. women accused to haue circumcided their sonnes, whom when they had led rounde aboute the cite (the babes hanginge at their brestes) they cast them downe headlinges ouer the walles. Some f were crepte in to dennes and had kepte the Sabbath, were accused vnto Philippe, and brent in the fyre: because that for the feare of God they kepte the commaundement so stiffly, and wolde not defende them selues.

^C Now I beseke all those which reade this boke, that they refuse it not for these falles of aduersite: a iudge the thinges (f are happened) for no destruccion, but for a chastenyng of oure people. And why? Whē God suffreth not synners longe to folowe their owne mynde, "but shortly punysheth them, it is a tokē of his greate louynge kyndnes. For this grace haue we of God more then other people, f he suffreth not vs longe to synne vnpunished like other nacions, that when the daye of iudgment commeth, he maye punysh thē in the fulnes of their synnes. Yf we synne, he correcteth vs, but he neuer withdraweth his mercy frō vs: a though he punysh with aduersite, yeth doth he neuer forsake his people. But let this that we haue spokē now with few wordes, be for a warninge a exortaciō of f Heithē. Now wil we come to the declaringe of the matter. Eleazar one of f principall scribes, an aged mā a of a well-fauored cōtenaunce, was cōstrained to gape with opē mouth a to eate synnes flesh." But he desyringe rather to dye gloriously thē to liue with shame, offred himself willingly to f martirdome. Now whē he sawe f he must nedes go to it, he toke it paciety: for he was at a poynte with himself, f he wolde consente to no vnlauffull thyng for eny pleasure of life. They f stode by beyng moued with pyte (but not a right) for f olde frendship of the man, toke him asyde priuely, and prayed him f he wolde let soch flesh be brought him as were lauffull to eate, a thē to make a cōtenaunce as though he had eaten of f flesh of f sacrifice like as the kyng commaunded, for so he might be deliyuered from death: a so for the olde frendship of f man, they shewed him this kindnes. But he beganne to considre his discrete and honorable age, his noble and worshipfull stocke, and how f frō his youth vp he had bene of an honest and good conuersacion, yee a how constantly he had kepte f ordinaunces and lawes commaunded by God, wherfore he gaue them this answer, and sayde:

Yet had I rather first be layed in my graue. "For it becommeth not myne age (sayde he) in eny wyse to dyssemble, wherby many yonge personnes might thinke, that Eleazar beinge lxxx. yere olde and ten, were now gone to a straunge life: and so thorow myne ypocrisy (for a litle tyme of a transitory life) they might be disceaued: by this meanes also shulde I defyle myne age, a make it abhominable. For though I were now deliyuered from the tormentes of men, yet shulde I not escape the "honde of allnightie God, nether alyue ner deed. Wherfore I will dye manfully, a do as it becommeth myne age: Wherby I maie peraduenture leaue an exāple of stedfastnesse for soch as be yonge, yf I with a ready mynde a manfully dye an honest death, for the most worthy and holy lawes.

³⁴ When he had sayde these wordes, immediately he was drawn to the tornēte. Now they that led him and were mylde a litle afore, beganne to take displeasure, because of the wordes f he sayde: for they thought he had spokē them of an hye mynde. But whē he was in his martirdome, he mourned and sayde: Thou (O LORDE) which hast the holy knowlege, knowest openly: that where as I might be deliyuered frō death, I suffre these sore paynes of my body: but in my mynde I am wel contente to suffre them, because I feare the. Thus this man dyed, leauynge ȝ memoriall of his death for an example, not only vnto yonge men, but vnto all ȝ people, to be stedfast and manly.

The vij. Chapter.

AT happened also that there were vij. brethren (with their mother) taken, & compelled by the kyng agaynst the lawe, to eate swynes flesh: namely with scourges and lethren whippes. And one of them which was ȝ chefe, sayde: What sekest thou, and what requyrest thou of vs? As for vs, we are ready rather to suffre death, then to offende the lawes of God and the fathers. Then was the kynge angrie, and bad heate cauldrons and brasen pottes. Which when they were made hote, immediatly he commaunded ȝ tonge of him that spake first, to be cut out, to pull the skynne ouer his heade, to payre of the edges of his handes and fete: yee and that in the sight of his mother and the other of his brethren. Now when he was cleane marred, he commaunded a fyre to be made, & so (whyle there was eny breath in him) to be fryed in the caudron. In the which when he had bene longe payned, the other brethren with their mother exhorted him to dye manfully, sayēge: The LORDE God shal regarde the treuth, and comforte vs, like as Moses testifieth and declareth in his ^osonge, sayenge: and he wyl haue compassion on his seruantes.

J So whē the first was deed after this maner, they brought the seconde to haue him in derision, pulled the skynne with the hayre ouer his heade, and axed him, yf he wolde eate swynes flesh, or he were payned in ȝ other membres also thorow out his body. But he answered boldly, and sayde: I will not do it. And so was he tormented like as ȝ first. And whē he was euē at ȝ geuynge vp of ȝ goost, he sayde: Thou most vngacious persone puttest vs now to death, but the kyng of ȝ worlde shall rayse vs vp (which dye for his lawes) in ȝ resurreccion of euerlasting life.

After him, was the thirde had in derision: and when he was required, he putt out his tonge, and that right soone, holdinge forth his hondes manfully, and spake with a stedfast faith: These haue I of heauē, but now for the lawe of God I despyse them: for my trust is, that I shall receaue them of him agayne. In so moch that the kyng and they which were with him, marueled at the yonge mans boldnesse, that he nothinge regarded the paynes.

Now when he was deed also, they vexed the fourth with tormentes in like maner. So when he was now at his death, he sayde: It is better that we beyng put to death of mē, haue oure hope and trust in God, for he shal rayse vs vp agayne. ^cAs for the, thou shalt haue no resurreccion to life.

And when they had spoken to the fifth, they tormēted him. Then lokēd he vnto ȝ kinge, & sayde: Thou hast power amōge mē (for thou art a mortall man also thy self) to do what thou wilt, but thinke not, ȝ God hath forsaken oure generacion. Abyde the, tary styll a whyle, & thou shalt se the greate power of God, how he wil punysh the & thy sede.

After him they brought the sixte, which beyng at the poynte of death, sayde: Be not disceaue (o kyng) for this we suffre for oure owne sakes, because we haue offended oure God, & therefore marvelous thinges are shewed vpon vs. But thinke not thou (which takest in honde to stryue agaynst God) that thou shalt escape vnpunished.

This excellent mother (worthy to be well reported of, and had in remembrance) sawe hir seuen sonnes dye in one daye, and suffred it paciētly, because of the hope that she had in God: Yee she exhorted euery one of them in especiall, and that boldly and stedfastly, with parfite wysdome, wakyng vp hir wuysh thought with a manly stomacke, and sayde vnto them: I can not tell how ye came in my wombe, for I nether gaue you breth ner soule, no ner life. It is not I ȝ ioyned ȝ mēbres of youre bodies together, but ȝ maker of ȝ worlde, which fashioned ȝ byrth of mā, & begāne all thinges. Euen he also of his owne mercy shall geue you breath and life agayne, like as ye now regarde not youre owne selues for his lawes sake.

Now thought Antiochus that she had despyed him, therefore he let her go with hir reproues, and beganne to exorte the yongest sonne (which yet was left) not only with wordes but swore vnto him with an ooth, [¶] he shulde make him a rich & welthy man (yf he wolde forsake [¶] lawes of his fathers) yee and [¶] he shulde geue him, what so euer were necessary for him. But whē the yonge man wolde not be moued, for all these thinges, he called his mother, & counceled hir to saue hir sonnes life. And when he had exorted her with many wordes, she promised him, that she shulde speake vnto hir sonne. So she turned her vnto him (laughinge [¶] cruell tyraunte to scorne) & spake with a bolde voyce: O my sonne, haue pite vpon me, [¶] bare [¶] ix. monethes in my wombe, that gaue the sucke, norished the and brought the vp vnto this age. I beseke the (my sonne) loke vpon heauen and earth and all that is therin, and conside, that God made them and mans generacion of naught: so shalt thou not feare this hangman, but suffre death stedfastly, like as thy brethren haue done: that I maye receaue the agayne in the same mercy with thy brethren.

Whye she was yet speakyng these wordes, the yonge man sayde: Whom loke ye for? Wherefore do ye tary? I wil not obeye the kynges commaundement, but the lawe that God gaue vs by [¶] Moses. As for the that ymaginest all myschefe agaynst the Iewes, thou shalt not escape the honde of God: for we suffre these thinges, because of oure synnes.

[¶] And though God be angrie with vs a litle whyle (for oure chasteninge & reformation,) yet shal he be at one agayne with his seruantes. But thou. (O shame full & most abhominable personne,) Pryde not thy self thorow wayne hope, in beyng so malicious vpon [¶] seruantes of God: for thou hast not yet escaped the iudgmēt of the God, which is all mighty, & seyth all thinges. My brethren [¶] haue suffred a litle payne, are now vnder the couenaunt of euerlastinge life: but thorow the iudgment of God, thou shalt be punished righteously for thy pryde.

As for me (like as my brethre haue done) I offre my soule & my body for [¶] lawes of oure fathers, callinge vpon God, [¶] he will soone be mercifull vnto oure people: yee & with payne & punishment to make the graunte,^a [¶] he only is God. In me now & in my brethre [¶] wrath of allmighty God is at an ende, which righteously is falle vpon all oure people. Then [¶] kyng beyng kyndled in anger, was more cruell vpon him then vpon all [¶] other, & toke indignaciō, [¶] he was so lightly regarded. So this yonge mā dyed vndefiled, & put his trust stil in [¶] LORDE. Last of all after [¶] sonnes, was [¶] mother put to death also. Let this now be ynough spoken, concernyng [¶] of-fringes, & extreme cruellnesse.

The viii. Chapter.

THEN Iudas Machabeus and they [¶] were with him, wete pruely in to [¶] townes, called their kinsfolkes & frendes together, toke vnto them all soch as contynued yet in the faith and lawe of [¶] Iewes, and brought forth yj. M. men. So they called vpon the LORDE, [¶] he wolde haue an eye vnto his people, which was troddē downe of euery mā: to be gracious vnto [¶] tēple, [¶] was defyled of the vngodly: to haue cōpassion vpon [¶] destruction of the cite, (which was shortly like to be laied waist) to heare [¶] voyce of [¶] bloude [¶] cried vnto him: to remēbre [¶] most vnrighteous deathes of yonge innocent children, the blasphemies also done vnto his name, & to punish thē. Now whē Machabeus had gathered this multitude together, he was to mightie for the Heithen (for [¶] wrath of [¶] LORDE was turned in to mercy) he fell vpon the townes and cities vnawarres, brent them, toke the most cōmodious places, & slewe many of the enemies. But specially he made soch chases by night, in so moch that his manlynesse was spoken of euery where.

So when Philippe sawe that the man increased by litle and litle, and that the matter prospered with him for the most parte: he wrote vnto Ptolomy (which was a captayne in Celosiria & Phenices) to helpe him in [¶] kynges busynes. Thē sent he Nicanor Patrocli (a speciall frende of his) in all [¶] haist,^d & gaue him of [¶] comon sorte of the Heithen no lesse than xx. M. harnessed men, to rote out [¶] whole generacion of the Iewes, hauinge to helpe him one Gorgias a man of warre, which in matters concernyng battayls had greute experience. Nicanor ordered also the tribute (which the Romaynes shulde haue had) to be geuen vnto the kyng, out of the captiuyte of the Iewes, namely, ij. M. talentes. And immediatly he sent to [¶] cities of [¶] see coast, requyringe thē for to bye Iewes to be their seruantes & bonde men, promisyng to sell them lxxx. and ten for one talente: but he considered not the wrath of allmighty God, ſ̄ was to come vpon him.

¶ When Iudas knewe of this, he tolde the Iewes ſ̄ were with him, of Nicanors cōmyng. Now were there some of them fearfull, not trustinge vnto the righteousnes of God and fled their waye. But the other ſ̄ remayned, came together & besought the LORDE, to delyuere thē frō ſ̄ wicked Nicanor, which had solde thē or euer he came nye them: and though he wolde not do it for their sakes, yet for the couenaunt that he made with their fathers, & because they called vpon his holy & glorious name. "And so Machabeus called his men together, namely aboute vi. M. exorting them not to agree vnto their enemies, nether to be afrayed for ſ̄ multitude^a of their aduersaries cōmyng agaynst them vnrighteously: but to fight manly, consideringe ſ̄ reprove that they had done to the holy place without cause, how they had despyed and oppressed the cite, yee and destroyed ſ̄ lawes of the fathers. For they (sayde he) 'trust in their weapens and boldnesse, but oure confidence is in the allmighty LORDE, which in the twinklinge of an eye maye both destroye them that come agaynst vs, and all the worlde.

¶ He exhorted them also to call to remēbraūce the helpe, that God shewed vnto their fathers: "as whē there perished an C. & lxxxv. M. of Sennacheribs people: And of ſ̄ battaill ſ̄ they had in Babilō agaynst ſ̄ Galacians: how ſ̄ all the Macedoniās ſ̄ came to helpe thē, stode in feare; & how they beyng but only vj. M. slewe an C. & xx. M. thorow ſ̄ helpe ſ̄ was geuen them from heauen, wherby they also had receaued many benefites.

Thorow these wordes ſ̄ mē toke good hertes vnto thē, ready to dye for the lawe & the cōtre. So he set vpon euery cōpany a captayne, one of his owne brethren: Simon, Ioseph and Ionathas: geuyng eche one xv. C. men. He caused Esdras also to reade the holy boke vnto them, and to geue them a token of the helpe of God.

Then he himself beinge captaine in ſ̄ fore front of the battaill,^c buckled with Nicanor.

And God was there helpe, in so moch that they slewe aboute ix. M. mē & compelled ſ̄ more parte of Nicanors hoost to fle, they were so wounded and feable. Thus they toke the^{de} money from those that came to bye thē, and folowed vpon them on euery syde. But whē the tyme came vpon them, they returned, for it was the Sabbath, and therefore they folowed nomore vpon them. So they toke their weapens and spoyles & kepte the Sabbath, geuyng thanks vnto the LORDE, which had delyuered them that daye, and shewed them his mercy. After the Sabbath they distributed the spoyles to the sicke,^e to ſ̄ fatherlesse, and to wyddowes, and the residue had they them selues with theirs. Whē this was done, and they all had made a generall prayer: they besought the mercifull LORDE to be at one with his seruantes.

Of those also that were with Timotheus and Bachides, which fought agaynst them, they slewe xx. M. wanne hye and stronge holdes, and deuided moo spoyles: euer geuyng an equal porcion vnto ſ̄ sicke, to ſ̄ fatherles, to wyddowes & to aged persons. And when they had diligently gathered their weapēs together, they layed them all in convenient places, & the remaunt of ſ̄ spoyles brought they to Ierusalem. They slewe Philarches that wicked personne, which was with Timotheus, and had vexed many Iewes. And when they helde the thankesgeuyng to Ierusalem for the victory, they brent those that had set fyre on the portes of the temple: namely Calisthenes, which was fled in to an house: and so they gat a worthy rewarde for their wickednesse. As for that most vngracious Nicanor, which had brought a thousande marchaūtes, to bye the Iewes, he was thorow ſ̄ helpe of the LORDE brought downe, euen of them whom he regarded not: in so moch that he put of his glorious raymēt, fled by see, and came alone to Antioche with greateshame & dishonoure, which he gat thorow the destruction of his hoost. Thus he ſ̄ promysed the Romaynes to paye thē their tribute, when he toke Ierusalem: beganne now to saye planely, that God was ſ̄ defender of the Iewes, & therefore not possible to wounde them, because they folowed ſ̄ lawes which God had made.

The ix. Chapter.

AT the same tyme came Antiochus agayne with *dishonoure out of Persis. For when he came to Persepolis, and vndertoke to robbe the temple and to subdue the cite, the people ranne together and defended them selues, in so moch \bar{y} he and his were fayne to fle with shame. And so after that flight, it happened, that Antiochus came agayne with dishonoure. But when he came to Egbathana, he gat knowlege what was happened vnto Nicanor \bar{a} Timotheus. Now as he was auaucing himself in his wrath, he thought he was able to avenge the iniury that was done to them, vpon the Iewes: and therefore commaunded to make ready his charet, haistinge on his iourney without ceasinge: the iudgmēt of God prouokynge him, because he had spokē so proudly, that he wolde come to Ierusalem, and make it a graue of the Iewes. But the LORDE God of Israel,^b that seith all things, smote him with an invisible plague, which no man coude heale.

B For as soone as he had spoken these wordes, there came vpon him an horrible payne of his bowels, \bar{a} a sore grefe of the tharnes. And \bar{y} was but right: for he had martired other mens bowels with dyuerse and straunge tormentes, how be it he wolde in no wyse cease from his malice. Yee he was yet the prouder, and more malicious agaynst the Iewes: But whyle he was commaunding to make haist in the matter, it happened \bar{y} he fell downe violently from the charet, so \bar{y} it brussed his body, \bar{a} dyd him greate payne.

And so he that thought he might commaunde \bar{y} floudes of the see (so proude was he beyonde the condiciō of man) and to weye the hye mountaynes in a payre of scales, was now brought downe to the grounde, \bar{a} caried vpon an horszlytter, knowlegynge \bar{y} manifest power of God vpon him: so that \bar{y} wicked body of his^c was full of wormes, which in his payne fell quyeck out of his flesh: In so moch \bar{y} his hoost was greued with the smell and styncke of him. Thus he that a litle afore thought he might reach to the starres of heauen, him might no man now abyde ner beare, for the vehemence of styncke.

C Therefore he beyng brought from his greate pryde, begāne for to come to \bar{y} knowlege of him self: for the punyshment of God warned him, \bar{a} his payne increased euer more \bar{a} more. And when he him self might not abyde his owne styncke, he sayde these wordes: It is reason to be obedient vnto God, \bar{a} that a man desyre not to be like vnto him. This wicked personne prayed also vnto the LORDE, of whom he shulde haue obtained no mercy. And as for the cite that he came vnto so haistely, to brynge it downe to the grounde, \bar{a} to make it a graue for deed men: now he desyreth to delyuer it fre. And as touchinge \bar{y} Iewes, whom he had iudged not worthy to be buried, but wolde haue cast thē out for to be deuoured of the foules and wyld beasts, sayenge, that he wolde haue destroyed both olde and yonge: Now he promiseth, to make thē like \bar{y} citesyns of Athens. And where as he had spoyled the holy temple afore, now he maketh promyse to garnish it with greate giftes, to increase the holy ornamētes, and of his owne rentes to beare the costes and charges belonging to the offerynge: yee and that he wolde also become a Iewe him self, to go thorow euery place of the worlde, and to preach the power of God.

But when his paynes wolde not cease, (for the righteous iudgmēt of God was come vpon him) out of a very despayre he wrote vnto the Iewes a lettre of intercession, cōteynynge these wordes: The kynge and prynce Antiochus wyseth vnto the vertuous citesyns of the Iewes, moch health and good prosperite.

Yf ye and youre children fare well, and yf all things go after youre mynde: we geue greate thanks. In my sicknesse also do I remembre you louynge: for as I came out of Persia, and was taken with sore disease: I thought it necessary to care for the comon wealth. Nether despare I in my self, but haue a good hope to escape this sicknes.

But considerynge that my father led an hoost some tyme in \bar{y} hyer places, \bar{a} shewed who shulde raigne after him, that (yf there happened eny cōtrouersy, or eny harde thinge were declared,) they in the londe might knowe their chefe lorde, \bar{y} there shulde be no insurreccion: Agayne, when I pondre by my self, how that all \bar{y} mightie men and neighbours rounde aboute, are layēge waite, and loke but for oportynyte to do harme: I haue ordered that my sonne Antiochus shall raigne after me, whom I oft commended to many of you, when I was in the hyer kyngdomes, and haue wrytten vnto him as it foloweth hereafter. Therefore I praye you and requyre you, to remembre the benefites that I haue done vnto you generally and in especiall. For I hope that he shall be of sober & louynge behauioure, and yf he folowe my deuyce, he shal be indifferent vnto you.

"Thus that murthurer and blasphemor of God was sore smyttē: and like as he had intreated other men, so he dyed a myserable death in a straunge cowntre vpon a mountayne. And his body dyd Philippe (that wete with him) cary awaye: which fearynge the sonne of Philometor, wente in to Egipte to Ptolomy Philometor.

The x. Chapter.

MACHABEUS now & his company^a (thorow the helpe of the LORDE) wanne the temple and the cite agayne, destroyed the altures and chapels that the Heithē had buylded thorow the stretes:^c clensed the temple, made another altur of bricke stone, and after ij. yeares they offered sacrifices, set forth the incense, the lightes and shewe bred. When that was done, they fell downe flat vpon the grounde, and besought the LORDE, that they might come nomore in to soch trouble: but yf they synned eny more agaynst him, he him self to chasten them with mercy, and not to come in the hondes of those aleauntes and blasphemous men.

Now vpon the same daye that y^e straungers poluted the temple, it happened that on the very same daye it was clensed agayne:^d namely, the xxij. daye of the moneth called Casleu. They kepte viij. dayes in gladnesse, like as in the feast of the tabernacles: remembrynge that not longe afore, they helde the feast of y^e tabernacles vpon the mountaynes and in dennes like beastes. And to y^e same token they bare grene bowes, braunches and palmes before him that had geuen them good fortune to clense his place. They agreed also together, and made a statute, y^e euery yeare those dayes shulde be solelymply kepte of all the people of the Iewes.

How Antiochus then (that was called the noble) dyed, it is sufficiently tolde. Now wil we speake of Nicanor the sonne of that wicked Antiochus, how it happened with him: and so with few wordes to comprehend the aduersite that chauned in y^e warres. When he had taken in the kyngdome, he made one Lysias (which had bene captayne of the hoost in Phenices and Syria) ruler ouer the matters of the realme. For Ptolomy that was called Macron, beyng a ruler for the Iewes (and specially, to syt in iudgment for soch wronge as was done vnto them) vndertoke to deale peaceably with them. For the which cause he was accused of the frendes before Eupator: and when he was suspecte to be a traytoure (because he had left Cyper, that Philometor had committed vnto him: and because he departed from noble Antiochus, that he was come vnto) he poisoned himself, and dyed.

Now when Gorgias was gouernoure of the same places, he toke straungers and vndertoke oft tymes to warre with y^e Iewes. Morouer the Idumeans that helde the strōge holdes, receaused those that were dryuen from Ierusalem, and toke in honde to warre also. But they that were with Machabeus, besought and prayed vnto the LORDE,^e that he wolde be their helper: and so they fell in to the stronge holdes of the Idumeans, & wanne many places by strength: Soch as came agaynst them they slew, and kylled no lesse (of all together) then twentye thousande. Neuerthelesse some (no lesse then nyne thousande) were fled in to two stronge towres, hauynge all maner of ordinance to withstonde them.

Then Machabeus leauynge Symon, Iosephus, Zachaus and those that were with them, (which were very many) wente to besege the, and to fight where most nede was. Now they that were with Symon beyng led with couetousnesse, were intreated for money, thorow certayne of those that laye in the towers: toke lxx. M. drachmas, & let some of them escape. But when it was tolde Machabeus what had happened, he called y^e captaynes of the people together, accusynge those personnes, that they had solde the brethern for money, and let their enemies go. So he slewe those traytours, & immediately wente in honde with the ij. towres. And when they had ordred them selues manly with their weapens & hondes, they slewe in y^e two castels moo thē twētie thousande.

^a Dan. 8. c.^b 1 Mac. 4. c.^c Exo. 30. d.^d 1 Mac. 4. f.^e 1 Mac. 5. a.

^a Now Timotheus whom the Iewes had ouercome afore, gathered a multitude of straunge people, brought an hoost also of horsmen of the Asians, to wyne Iewry by strength. But when he drewe nye, Machabeus and they that were with him fell to their prayer,^b sprenched aszshes vpon their heades, beyng gyrded with hayrie cloth aboute their loines, fel downe before y aulter, & besought the LORDE that he wolde be mercifull to them, but an enemye vnto their enemies, and to take parte agaynst their aduersaries, acordinge as it is promised in the lawe. So after the prayer,^c they wente on further from the cite: and when they came nye the enemies, they prepared them selues agaynst them.

And by tymes in the mornynge at y breake of the daye, both the hoostes buckled together. The one parte had the LORDE for their refuge,^d which is the geuer of prosperite, strēth and victory. The other had a māly stomack, which is a captayne of warre.

The battayll now beyng greate, there ^e appeared vnto the enemies from heauen v. men, vpon horszback with brydels of golde, ledinge the Iewes, and two of them hauynge Machabeus betwixte them, y kepte him safe on euery syde with their weapes, but shot darts and lighteninges vpon the enemies, where thorow they were confounded with blyndnesse and so sore afrayed, that they fell downe. There were slayne of fote men twenty thousande and fyue hundreth, and sixe hūdreth horsmen. As for Timotheus him self, he fled vnto Gazar a very strōge holde, wherin Cereas was captayne. But Machabeus and his company layed sege to it cherfully iij. dayes. Now they that were within, trustinge to the strength of the place, cursed & banned exceedingly, and made greate crakynge with wicked wordes. Neuerthelesse vpon the fifth daye in the mornynge, xx. yonge men of Machabeus cōpany, beyng set on fyre in their myndes because of the blasphemy: came manfully vnto the wall, and with bolde stomackes they and their other companyons clymmed vp vpon the towres, vndertakynge to set fyre vpon the portes, & to burne those blasphemous personnes quicke. Two dayes were they destroyenge the castell, which when they founde Timotheus (that was crepte in to a corner) they kylled him, and slewe Cereas his brother in like maner with Appollophanes. When this was done, they sunge Psalmes, with prayes and thankesgeuynge vnto the LORDE, which had done so greate thinges for Israel, & geuen them the victory.

The ri. Chapter.

NOT longe after this, Lysias the kynges steward and a kynsman of his, (which had the gouernance of his matters,) toke sore displeasure for the thinges that had happened: and when he had gathered lxxx. M. men of fote with all the hoost of the horsmen, he came agaynst the Iewes, thinkynge to wyne the cite, to make it an habitation for the Heithen, and the temple wolde he haue to be an house of lucre, like as the other goddes houses of the Heithē are, & to sell y prestes office euery yeare: Not consideringe the power of God, but was wyld in his mynde, trustinge in y multitude of fote mē, ^f in thousandes of horsmē, and in his lxxx. Elephantes.

So he came in to Iewry & then to Bethsura (a castell of defence lyenge in a narrow place, v. furlonges from Ierusalē) and wanne it. Now when Machabeus and his company knew that the stronge holdes were taken, they fell to their prayers^g with wepyng and teares before the LORDE: and all the people in like maner besought him, that he wolde sende a good angell to delyuer Israel. Machabeus him self was the first that made him ready to the battayll, exortynge the other that were with him, to ioperde themselues and to helpe their brethrē. And when they were goyenge forth of Ierusalem together with a ready and wyllynge mynde, there appeared before thē vpon horszbacke a mā in whyte clothinge with harnesse of golde, shakinge his speare. Then they prayed y LORDE all together, which had shewed them mercy, and were comforted in their myndes: in so moch that they were ready, not only to fight with men, but with y most cruell bestes, yee and to runne thorow walles of yron.

Thus they wente on wyllynge hauynge an helper from heauē, and the LORDE mercifull vnto them. They fell mightily vpon their enemies like lyons, brought downe xj. M. fote men, xvj. C. horsmen, put all f̄ other to flight, many of them beyng wounded, and some gat away naked. Yee Lysias himself was fayne to fle shamefully, and so to escape. Neuerthelesse the man was not without vnderstanding, but considered by himself that his power was mynished, and pondred how f̄ Iewes beyng defended by the helpe of Almighty God, were not able to be ouercome: wherefore he sent them worde, and promised, that he wolde consente to all thinges which were reasonable, and to make the kynge their frēde. To the which prayer of Lysias Machabeus agreed, sekyng in all thinges the comon wealth: and what so euer Machabeus wrote vnto Lysias cōcernynge the Iewes, the kynge graunted it. For there were lettres writtē vnto f̄ Iewes from Lysias conteynynge these wordes:

Ⓓ Lysias sendeth gretinge to the people of the Iewes. Ihon and Absalon which were sent from you, deluyered me wrytinges, and requyred me to fulfill the thinges concernynge their earande. Therfore loke what might be graunted, I certified f̄ kynge therof: and what so euer was conuenient, I agreed therto. Yf ye now wyll be faithfull in the matters, I shal endeuer my self hereafter also to do you good. As concernynge other thinges by euery article therof: I haue committed them to youre messaungers, and to those whom I sent vnto you, to comon with you of the same, fare ye well, In the hūdreth and xlvij. yeare, the xxiiij. daye of the moneth Dioscorinthius.

Now the kynges lettre conteyned these wordes: Kyng Antiochus sendeth gretinge vnto his brother Lysias. 'For so moch as oure father is now deed, oure wyll is, that they which are in oure realme, lyue without eny insurreccion, and euery man to be diligent in his owne matters. We vnderstonde also, that the Iewes wolde not consent to oure father, for to be brought vnto the custome of the Gentiles, but stiffly to kepe their owne statutes: for the which cause they requyre of vs also, to let them remayne still by their owne lawes.

Ⓔ Wherefore oure minde is, that this people shalbe in rest: we haue concludē and determed also, to restore them their temple agayne: that they maye lyue acordinge to the vse & custome of their forefathers. Thou shalt do vs a pleasure therfore, yf thou sende vnto them & agre with them: that when they are certified of oure mynde, they maye be of good chere, and loke to their owne wealth.

And this was the lettre, that the kynge wrote vnto the Iewes: Kyng Antiochus sendeth gretinge vnto the counsell and the other people of the Iewes. Yf ye fare well, we haue oure desyre: as for vs, we are in good health. Menelaus came and tolde vs, how f̄ youre desyre was to come downe to youre people, which are with vs.

Wherefore those that wyll come, we geue them fre lyberte, vnto the xxx. daye of the moneth of Aprill, that they maye vse f̄ meates of the Iewes and their owne lawes, like as afore: and none of them by any manner of wayes to haue harme, for thinges done in ignorance. Menelaus whom we haue sent vnto you, shal comon with you at large, fare ye well. In the Cxlvij. yeare, the xv. daye of the moneth of Aprill.

The Romaynes also sent a lettre, conteynynge these wordes: Quintus Mennius & Titus Manilius embassatours of the Romaynes, sende gretinge vnto the people of the Iewes. Loke what Lysias the kynges kynsman hath graunted you, we graunte you the same also. But as concernynge the thinges which he referred vnto the kynge, sende hither some with spede: and pōdre the matter diligētly amonge youre selues, that we maye cast f̄ best to youre profite, for we must departe now vnto Antioche. And therefore wryte shortly agayne, that we maye knowe youre mynde. Fare well. In the hundreth xlvij. yeare, f̄ xv. daye of the moneth of Aprill.

The xij. Chapter.

Ⓐ WHEN these couenauntes were made, Lysias wente vnto the kynge, and f̄ Iewes tyllēd their grounde. But Timotheus, Appollonius the sonne of Gemei, Ierome and Demophon f̄ proude, Nicanor f̄ captayne of Cypers, and they that laye in those places: wolde not let them lyue in rest and peace. They of Ioppa also dyd euen soch a shamefull dede: They prayed f̄ Iewes that dwelt amonge them, to go with their wyues and children in to the shippes which they had prepared, & dyd with them, as though they had ought them no euell wyll. For so moch then as there was gone forth a generall proclamaciō thorow ȝ cite because of peace, they consented therto, and suspecte nothinge: but when they were gone forth in to the depe, they drowned no lesse then ij. C. of them.

Whē Iudas knew of this cruelte shewed vnto his people, he commaunded those that were with him to make them ready, exortinge them to call vpon God the righteous iudge: wēte forth agaynst those murthurers of his brethre, set fyre in ȝ hauen by night, brent vp ȝ shippes, and those that escaped from the fyre, he slewe with the swerde. And when he had done this, he departed as though he wolde come agayne, and rote out all them of Ioppa. But when he had gottē worde that the Iannites were mynded to do in like maner vnto ȝ Iewes which dwelt amonge them, he came vpon the Iannites by night, and set fyre in the hauen with the shippes: so that the light of the fyre was sene at Ierusalem, vpon a ij. C. ȝ xl. furlonges.

Now when they were gone from thence ix. furlonges, in their iourney towarde Timotheus: v. thousande men of fote and v. hundred horsmen of the Arabians fought with him. So when the batell was earnest, and prospered with Iudas thorow the helpe of God: ȝ residue of the Arabians beyng ouercome, besought Iudas to be at one with them, and promised to geue him certayne pastures, ȝ to do him good in other things. Iudas thynkyng that they shulde in dede be profitable concernyng many thynges, promised them peace: whervpon they shoke hondes, and so they departed to their tentes. Iudas wente also vnto a cite, which was very fast kepthe with brydges, fensed rounde aboute with walles, ȝ dyuerse kyndes of people dwellinge therein, called Caspin.

They that were within it, put soch trust in the strength of the walles, ȝ in their stoare of vytales: that they were the slacker in their doynges, cursyng and reuylyng Iudas with blasphemies, and speakyng soch wordes as it becommeth not. But Machabeus callynge vpon the greate pryncce of ȝ worlde (which without eny battayll rammes or ordinance of warre, "dyd cast downe the walles of Iericho, in the tyme of Iosue) fell manfully vpon the walles, toke the cite, and (thorow the helpe of the LORDE) made an exceeding greate slaughter: In so moch that a lake of ij. furlonges brode which laye therby, semed to flowe with the bloude of the slayne.

Then departed they from thence vj. C. and L. furlonges, and came to Taraca vnto ȝ Iewes that are called Tubianei. But as for Timotheus, they coude not get him there: for (not one matter dispatched,) he was departed from thence, and had lefte certayne men in a very stronge holde. But Dositheus and Sosipater which were captaynes with Machabeus, slewe those ȝ Timotheus had lefte in the house of defence, euen x. M. men. And Machabeus prepared him with ȝ vj. M. men ȝ were aboute him, set them in ordre by companies, and wente forth agaynst Timotheus, which had with him an C. and xx. M. men of fote, ij. M. and v. C. horsmē.

When Timotheus had knowlege of Iudas commyng, he sent the women, children and the other baggage vnto a castell called Carnion. (For it coude not be wonne, ȝ was harde to come vnto, the wayes of the same places were so narow) and when Iudas cōpany came first in sight, the enemies were smytten with feare, thorow the presence of God, which seyth all thinges: In so moch ȝ they fleyng one here, another there, were rather discomfited of their owne people,^a ȝ wōided with the strokes of their owne swerdes. Iudas also was very earnest in folowing vpon them and punyshinge those vngodly, and slewe xxx. M. men of them. Timotheus also himself fell in to the hondes of Dositheus ȝ Sosipater, whom he besought with many prayers, to let him go with his life: because he had many of the Iewes fathers and brethren in preson, which (yf they put him to death) might be disapoynted. So when he had promised faithfully to deluyer them agayne according to the condicion made, they let him go without harme, for the health of ȝ brethren. And when Iudas had slayne xxv. M, he wente from Carnion.

Now after ȝ he had chased awaye and slayne his enemies, he remoued the hoost towarde Ephron a strōge cite,^c wherin dwelt many dyuerse people of the Heithen, and ȝ stronge yonge men kepthe the walles, defendinge the mightely. In this cite was moch ordinance, and prouyson of dartes. "But when Iudas and his company had called vpon Allmyghty God, (which with his power breaketh the strength of the enemies) they wanne the cite, and slew xxv. M. of them ȝ were within. From thence wente they to the cite of the Scythians, which lieth vj. C. furlonges from Ierusalem. But when ȝ Iewes which were in the cite testified, that the citesyns deale louyngly with them, yee and intreated them kyndly in ȝ tyme of their aduersite, Iudas and his company gaue them thanks, desyringe them to be frendly still vnto them: "and so they came to Ierusalem the hye feast of the wekes beyng at honde. And after the feast they wete forth agaynst Gorgias the gouernoure of Idumea, with iij. M. men of fote and iiij. C. horsmē. Which when they met together, it chaunced a few of the Iewes to be slayne.

¶ And Dositheus one of the Bachenors a mighty horsmā toke holde of Gorgias, and wolde haue takē him quyke. But an horsmā of Thracia fell vpon him, and smote of his arme, so that Gorgias escaped and fled in to Moresa. When they now that were of Gorgias syde, had foughtē longe and were weery: Iudas called vpon the LORDE that he wolde be their helper, ¶ captayne of the felde: and with that, he beganne with a manly voyce to take vp a songe of prayse, and a crie: In so moch that he made the enemies afrayed, and Gorgias men of warre to take their flight. So Iudas gathered his hoost, and came in to ȝ cite of Odolla. And when the seuenth daye came vpon them, they clensed them selues (as the custome was) ¶ kepte the Sabbath in the same place. And vpon the daye folowinge, Iudas ¶ his company came to take vp the bodies of them that were slayne, and to bury them in ȝ fathers graues. Now vnder ȝ cotes of certayne Iewes which were slayne, they founde Iewels that they had taken out of the temple and from the Idols of the Ianniters: which thinge is ^bforbydden the Iewes by the lawe. Then euery man sawe ȝ this was the cause, wherfore they were slayne.

¶ And so euery man gaue thanks vnto the LORDE for his righteous iudgmēt, which had opened the thinge that was hyd. They fell downe also vnto their prayers, and besought God, that the fawte which was made, might be put out of remembrance. Besydes that, Iudas exorted ȝ people earnestly, to kepe them selues from such synne: for so moch as they sawe before their eyes, ȝ these men were slayne for the same offence. So he gathered of euery one a certayne, in so moch that he brought together* two thousande drachmas of syluer, which he sent vnto Ierusalem, ȝ there might a sacrifice be offred for the mysdede. In the which place he dyd well ¶ right: for he had some cōsideracion ¶ ponderinge of ȝ life ȝ is after this tyme. For yf he had not thought ȝ they, which were slayne, dyd yet lyue, it had bene superfluous and vayne, to make eny vowe or sacrifice, for thē ȝ were deed. But for so moch as he sawe, that they which dye in the fauoure ¶ beleue of God, are in good rest ¶ ioye, he thought it to be good ¶ honorable for a reconcylinge, to do the same for those which were slayne, that the offence might be forgeuen.

The xiiij. Chapter.

¶ IN the Cxlix. yeare gat Iudas knowlege, ^c ȝ Antiochus Eupator was commynge with a greate power in to Iewry, ¶ Lysias the stewarde ¶ ruler of his matters with him: hauynge an C. and x. M. men of fote, v. M. horsmen, xxij. Elephantes, and iij. C. charettes. Menelaus also ioyned him self with them (but with greate disceate) ¶ spake fayre to the kynge, not for eny good of ȝ cōtre, but because he thought to haue bene made some greate man of auctorite. But the kynge of kynges moued Antiochus mynde agaynst this vngodly persone, ¶ Lysias infourmed the kynge, that this Menelaus was the cause of all myschefe: ^dso that ȝ kynge commaunded to take him, and (as ȝ maner of them is) to put him vnto death in the same place.

There was also in the same place a tower of L. cubites hye, heaped with aszshes: but aboute it was so made, that men might lōke downe on euery syde. Where in to the kynge commaunded that shameful person to be cast amonge the aszshes, as one that was cause of all vngraciousnesse. And reason it was, ȝ ȝ vnthrift shulde dye soch a death, and not to be buried: for he had done moch myschefe vnto the alter of God (whose fyre and aszshes were holy) therfore was it right, ȝ he him self also shulde be destroyed with aszshes.

But the kynge was woode in his mynde, & came to shewe him self more cruell vnto the Iewes, then his father was. "Which when Iudas perceaued, he commaunded the people to call vpon the LORDE night and daye: that he wolde now helpe them also, like as he had done allwaye: (For they were afraied to be put from their lawe, from their naturall countre and from f holy temple:) and not to suffre the people (which a litle while afore beganne to recouer) to be subdued agayne of f blasphemous nacions.

C So when they had done this together, and besought the LORDE for mercy, with wepyng and fasting thre dayes longe, flat vpon the grounde: Iudas exhorted them, to make them selues ready. But he and the elders together deuysed, to go forth first with their people, afore the kynge brought his hoost in to Iewry, and afore he beseged the cite, & so to committe the matter vnto God. Wherefore he ascribed the power of all thinges vnto God the maker of f worlde, exortinge his people to fight manfully, (yee euen vnto death) for f lawes, the temple, f cite, their owne natyue countre, & to defende f citesyns: & set his hoost before Modin. He gaue them also f were with him, a token of f victory of God, chosinge out the manlyest yonge men, wente by night in to the kynges paulyon, f slewe of the hoost xiiij. M. men, and the greatest Elephanes, with those that sat vpon them.

D Thus when they had brought a greate feare & rumoure amonge f tentes of their enemies, and all thinges wente prosperously with them, they departed in the breake of f daye, God beyng their helper & defender. Now when the kynge perceaued the manlynesse of the Iewes, he wente aboute to take the stronge places by craft, & remoued his hoost vnto Bethsura, which was a wel kepte house of defence of the Iewes: but they were chased awaye, hurte and discomfited. And Iudas sent vnto them that were in it, such thinges as were necessary. In the Iewes hoost also there was one Rhodocus, which tolde the enemies their secretes: but they sought him out, and when they had gotten him, they put him in preson. After this dyd the kynge comon with them that were in Bethsura, toke truce with them, departed, and stroke a battayll with Iudas, which ouer-came him.

But when he vnderstode, that Philippe E (whom he had left to be ouerseer of his busy-nesses at Antioche) beganne to rebell against him, he was astonied in his mynde: so that he yelded himself to the Iewes, and made them an ooth, to do what so euer they thought right. Now when he was reconcyled with them, he offred, made moch of the temple, gaue greate gyftes vnto it, embraced Machabeus, makinge him captayne and gouernoure from Ptolomais vnto f Gerrenes.

Neuerthesse when he came to Ptolomais, the people of the cite were not content with that bonde of frendshipe: for they were afraied, that he wolde breake the couenaunt. Then wente Lysias vp in to the seate, and enformed the people, shewed f the cause why, and pacified them. So he came agayne to Antioche. This is now the matter concerninge f kynges iourney, and his returne.

The xiiij. Chapter.

AFTER thre yeares was Iudas informed, F how that Demetrius the sonne of Seleucus was come vp with a greate power and shippes, thorow the hauen of Tripolis (to take certayne commodious places and countrees) agaynst Antiochus and his captayne Lysias. Now Alcimus (which had bene hye prest, and wilfully defyled himself, in the tyme of the myxtinge) seyng, that by no meanes he coude be helped, ner haue eny more intrance to the altare: he came to kynge Demetrius in the hundreth and one and fiftie yeare, presentinge vnto him a crowne of golde, a palme and an olyue tre: which (as men thought) belonged to the temple, and that daye he helde his tonge.

But when he had gotten oportunitie for his madnesse, Demetrius called him to coucell, and axed him, what thinges or counsels the Iewes leaned vnto? He answered: The Iewes that be called Assidei (whose captayne is Iudas Machabeus) maynteyne warres, make insurreccions, and wyl not let the realme be in peace.

For I beyng depriued of my fathers B honoure (I meane the hye presthode) am come hither: partly because I was faithfull vnto the kynge, and partly because I sought the profit of the citesyns. And why? all oure people (thorow the wickednesse of them) are not a litle troubled. Wherefore I beseeke the (o kyng) considre all these thinges diligently, and then make some prouysion for the londe and the people, accordinge to the kyndnesse that thou hast offred vnto them. For as longe as Iudas hath the vpper hande, it is not possible that men can lyue in peace.

When he had spoken these wordes, other frendes also hauynge euell will at Iudas, set the kyng Demetrius on fyre agaynst him. Which immediatly sent Nicanor (ruler of ἡ elephantes) a captayne, in to Iewry: commaunding him, to take Iudas himself alyue, but to slaye them that were with him, and to make Alcimus hye prest of the temple.

Then the Heithen which fled out of Iewry from Iudas, came to Nicanor by flockes, thinkynge the harme and decaye of the Iewes to be their welfare. Now whē the Iewes herde of Nicanors commynge, ἔ the gatheringe together of ἡ Heithē: they ᾠ sprēckled them selues with earth, and besought him (which made them his people, and euer defended his owne porcion with euident tokens) that he wolde preserue them still. So at the commaundement of the captayne, they remoued from thence, and came to a towne called Dessasan. And Symon Iudas brother fell in honde with Nicanor, but thorow the sodane ᾠ commynge of the enemies, he was afraied.

Neuertheles Nicanor hearinge the manlynes of them that were with Iudas, and ἡ bolde stomackes that they had to fight for their naturall cowntre, durst not proue the matter with bloudsheddinge. Wherefore he sent Possidonius, Theodocius ἔ Mathias before, to geue and to take peace. So when they had taken longe advysement there vpon, and the captayne shewed it vnto the multitude: they were agreed in one mynde, to haue peace. And they appoynted a daye to syt vpon these matters quyetly amonge them selues, ἡ stoles also were brought and set forth. Neuerthelesse Iudas comaunded certaine men of armes to waite in conueniēt places, lest there shulde sodenly aryse any euell thorow the enemies. And so they commaoned reasonably together.

Nicanor, whyle he abode at Ierusalem, ordred himself not vnreasonably, but sent awaye the people that were gathered together. He loued Iudas euer with his hert, and faoured him. He prayed him also to take a wyfe, and to brynge forth children. So he married, lyued in rest, and they led a comon life. But Alcimus perceauynge the loue that was betwixte them, and how they were agreed together, came to Demetrius, and tolde him that Nicanor had taken straunge matters in honde, and ordered Iudas (an enemy of the realme) to be the kynges successoure. Then the kinge was sore displeased, and thorow the wicked accusations which Alcimus made of Nicanor, he was so prouoked, that he wrote vnto Nicanor, sayenge: that he was very angrie for the frendshipe and agreement, which he had made with Machabeus. Neuertheles he commaunded him in all the haist, that he shulde take Machabeus presoner, and sende him to Antioche.

Which letres when Nicanor had sene, he was at his wittes ende, and sore greued, that he shulde breake the thinges, wherin they had agreed: specially, seyng Machabeus was the man, that neuer dyd him harme. But because he might not withstonde the kyng, he sought oportunitie to fulfil his commaundement. Notwithstondinge when Machabeus sawe that Nicanor beganne to be churlish vnto him, and that he intreated him more roughly then he was wonte, he perceaued that soch vnkyndnes came not of good, and therefore he gathered a few of his men, and withdrewed himself frō Nicanor. Which when he knewe that Machabeus had manfully preuented him, he came in to the greate and most holy temple: and commaunded the prestes (which were doyng their vsuall offeringes) to delyuer him the man. And when they sware that they coude not tell, where the mā was whō he sought, he stretched out his honde, and made an ooth, sayenge: Yf ye wyl not delyuer me Iudas ᾠ captiue, I shall remoue this temple of God in to the playne felde, I shal breake downe the aulter, and consecrate this tēple vnto Bachus. After these wordes he departed.

Then the prestes lift vp their hondes towarde heauen, and besought him that was euer the defender of their people, sayenge:

ᾠ 2 Ma. 10. c.

ᾠ 1 Mac. 7. e.

Thou o LORDE of all, which hast nede of nothinge, woldest that the temple of thy habitation shulde be amonge vs. Therefore now (o most holy LORDE) kepe this house euer vndefyled, which lately was censed. Now was there accused vnto Nicanor, one Razis an Alderman of Ierusalem, a louer of the whole cite, and a man of good reporte: which for the kynde hert that he bare vnto the people, was called a father of y Iewes. This man oft tymes (when the Iewes were mynded to kepe them selues vndefyled) defended and delyuered himself, beyng content stedfastly to spende his body and his life for his people.

So Nicanor wyllinge to declare the hate, that he bare to the Iewes, sent fyue hundred men to take him: for he thought, yf he gat him, he shulde bryng the Iewes in greate decaye. Now when the people beganne to rushe in at his house, to breake the dores, and to set fyre on it: he beyng now taken, wolde haue defended himself with his swearde: chosinge rather to dye manfully, then to yelde himselfe to those wicked doers: and because of his noble stocke, he had rather haue bene put to extreme cruelte.

Notwithstandyng what tyme as he myssed of his stroke for haist, and the multitude fell in violently betwixe the dores: he rane boldly to y wall, & cast himself downe manfully amonge the heape of them, which gaue soone place to his fall, so that he fell vpon his bely. Neuerthelesse whyle there was yet breath within him, he was kyndled in his mynde: and whyle his bloude guszshed out exceedingly (for he was very sore wounded) he ranne thorow the myddest of y people, and gat him to the toppe of a rocke. So when his bloude was now gone, he toke out his owne bowels with both his hondes, and threw them vpon the people: callinge vpon the LORDE of life and sprete, to rewarde him this agayne, and so he dyed.

The xv. Chapter.

NOW when Nicanor knewe that Iudas was in the countre of Samaria, he thought with all his power to strike a felde with him vpon a Sabbath daye. Neuerthelesse the Iewes that were compelled to go with him, sayd: O do not so cruelly and vnkyndly, but halowe y Sabbath daye, and worshipe him that seyth all things. For all this, yet sayed the vngacious personne: Is there a mightie one in heauen, that commaunded the Sabbath daye to be kepte? And when they sayde: yee the Iuyng God, the mightie LORDE in heauen commaunded the seuenth daye to be kepte,^c he sayde: And I am mightie vpon earth, to commaunde them for to arme them selues, and to performe the kynges busynesse. Notwithstandinge he might not haue his purpose.

Nicanor had deuyed with greate pryde to ouercome Iudas, and to bryng away y victory. But Machabeus had euer a fast confidēce and a perfecte hope in God that he wolde helpe him, and exorted his people, not to be afrayed at the commynge of the Heithen: but allwaye to remembre the helpe that had bene shewed vnto them from heauen, yee and to be sure now also, y Allmightie God wolde geue them the victory. He spake vnto them out of the lawe and prophetes, puttinge them in remembrance of the battayls, that they had striken afore, & made them to be of a good corage.

So when their hartes were plucte vp, he shewed them also the disceatfulness of the Heithen, and how they wolde kepe no couenaunt ner ooth. Thus he weapened the not with the armour of shyld and speare, but with wholsome wordes and exhortacions. He shewed them a dreame also, wherthorow he made them all glad, which was this: He thought that he sawe Onias (which had bene hye prest, a vertuous & louyng man, sad, and of honest conuersacion, well spoken, and one that had bene exercised in godlynes fro a childe) holdinge vp his hōdes towarde heauen, and prayenge for his people. After this there appeared vnto him another mā, which was aged, honorable and glorious. And Onias sayde: This is a louer of the brethren, and of the people of Israel. This is he that prayeth moch for the people, and for all the holy cite: Jeremy the prophet of God. He thought also y Jeremy helde out his right hōde, and gaue him (namely vnto Iudas) a swearde of golde, sayenge: Take this holy swearde, a gifte from God, wherwith thou shalt myte downe the enemies of the people of Israel.

And so they were wel comforted thorow the wordes of Iudas, and toke corage vnto the, so that the yonge men were determined in their myndes to fight, & to byde styfly at it: In so moch that in the thynges which they toke in honde, their boldnesse shewed the same, because the holy cite and the temple were in parell: for the which they toke more care, then for their wyues, children, brethre and kynsfolkes. Agayne, they that were in the cite, were most carefull for those which were to fight. Now when they were all in a hope that the iudgment of the matter was at hode, and the enemies drew nye, the hoost beyng set in araye, the Elephantes and horsmē euery one standinge in his place: Machabeus considered the commynge of the multitude, the ordinaunce of dyuerse weapens, the cruelnesse of the beestes, and helde vp his honde towarde heauen, callinge vpon the LORDE that doth wonders, which geueth not the victory after the multitude of weapens and power of the hoost (but to them that please him) accordinge to his owne will. Therfore in his prayer he sayde these wordes:

“O LORDE, thou that diddest sende thine angell in the tyme of Ezechias kynge of Iuda, and in the hoost of Sennacherib slewest an hundredth and fyue and foure score thousande: sende now also thy good angell before vs (o LORDE of heauens) in the fearfulnessse and drede of thy mightie arme, that they which come agaynst thy holy people to blasphemie them, maye be afrayed. And so he made an ende of his wordes. Then Nicanor and they that were with him, drew nye with shawmes and songes: but Iudas and his company with prayer and callinge vpon God.

^a 2 Pa. 14. c. Iudic. 7. b.

With their honde they smote, but with their hertes they prayed vnto the LORDE, and slewe no lesse then xxxv. M. mē: For thorow the present helpe of God they were gloriously comforted.

Now when they left of, and were turninge agayne with ioye, they vnderstode that Nicanor himself was slayne with the other. Then they gaue a greateshout and a crie, prayinge the almighty LORDE with a loude voyce. And Iudas (which was euer ready to spende his body and life for his citesyns) commaunded to smyte of Nicanors heade, with his arme and honde, and to be brought to Ierusalem. When he came there, he called all the people, and the prestes at the aulter with those that were in the castell, and shewed them Nicanors heade, and his wicked honde, which he had presumptuously holden vp agaynst the temple of God. He caused the tonge also of that vngodly Nicanor to be cut in litle peces, and to be cast to the foules, and the cruell mans honde to be hanged vp before the temple.

So euery man gaue thanks vnto the LORDE, saiene: blessed be he, that hath kepte his place vndefyled.

As for Nicanors heade, he hanged it vp vpon the hye castell, for an euydent and playne token of the helpe of God. And so they agreed all together, to kepe that daye holy: namely the xiiij. daye of the moneth Adar, which in the Syriās language is called the nexte daye before Mardocheus daye. Thus was Nicanor slayne, and from that tyme forth the Iewes had the cite in possession: And here wil I now make an ende.

All the generacions from Abrahā to Dauid are fourtene generacions: From Dauid vnto the captiuite of Babylon, are fourtene generacions. From the captiuite of Babylon vnto Christ, are also fourtene generacions.

The byrth of Christ was on thys wyse: C

When his mother Mary was maried to Ioseph *before they came together, she was foude with chylde by ŷ holy goost. But Ioseph her huszbande was a perfect man, and wolde not bringe her to shame, but was mynded to put her awaie secretly. Neuertheles whyle he thus thought, beholde, the angell of the LORDE appered vnto him in a dreame, saynge: Ioseph thou sonne of Dauid, feare not to take vnto the Mary thy wyfe. For that which is cōceaued in her, is of ŷ holy goost. She shall brynge forth a sonne, and thou shalt call his name Iesus.^r For he shall saue his people from their synnes.

Now when Ioseph awoke out of slepe he did as the angell of y LORDE bade hym, and toke his wyfe vnto hym, and knewe her not, tyll she had brought forth hir fyrst borne sonne,^a and called his name Iesus.

The ij. Chapter.

WHEN Iesus was borne at Bethleē in Iury, in the tyme of Herode the kyng, Beholde, there came wyse men from the east to Ierusalē, saynge: Where is the new borne kyng of the Iues? We haue sene his starre in the east, and are come to worship him.

When Herode y kyng had herde thys, he was troubled, t all Ierusalē with hym, and he gathered all the hye Prestes and Scribes of y people, and axed of them, where Christ shulde be borne. And they sayde vnto hym: at Bethleem in Iury. For thus it is written by the Prophet: ^b And thou Bethleem in the londe of Iury, art not the leest amonge the Princes of Iuda. ^c For out of y shall come vnto me the captayne, that shall gouerne my people Israel.

33 Then Herod preuely called the wyse men, and dyligently enquired of them, what tyme the starre appered, and sent them to Bethleem, sainge: Go, and searche dyligently for the chylde. And when ye haue founde hym, bringe me worde agayne, that I maye come and worshippe hym also.

When they had heard the kyng, they departed: and lo, the starre which they sawe in the east, went before them, tyll it came, and stode ouer the place where the chylde was. When they sawe the starre, they were maruelously glad: and went into the house, and found the chylde with Mary his mother, and kneled downe and worshipped hym,^d t opened ther treasures, and offred vnto hym gyftes: gold, frackynsence and myrre. And after they were warned of God in a dreame, that they shuld not go ageine to Herod, they returned into their awne countre another waye.

C When they were departed: beholde, the angell of the LORDE appered to Ioseph in a dreame, saynge: aryse, and take the chylde and his mother, and flye into Egypte, and abyde there tyll I brynge the worde. For Herod wyl seke the chylde to destroye hym. Thē he arose, and toke the chylde and his mother by night, and departed into Egypte, and was there vnto y deeth of Herod, that the thinge might be fulfilled which was spokē of the LORDE, by the Prophet, which sayeth: ^e out of Egypte haue I called my sonne.

Then Herod perceauynge y he was deceaued of the wyse men, was excedynge wroth, and sent forth, and slue all the chyl dren that were in Bethleem, and in all the coastes there of, as many as were two yere olde and vnder, accordynge to the tyme which he had dyligently searched out of the wyse men.

Then was y fulfilled which was spoken by y Prophet Jeremy saynge: ^f On y hilles was a voyce herde, greate mournynge, wepyng, t lamentacion: Rachel wepyng for her chyl dren, and wolde not be confortēd, because they were not.

When Herode was deed: beholde, an angell 34 of the LORDE appered in a dreame to Ioseph in Egypte, saynge: arise and take the chylde and his mother, and go in to y londe of Israel. For they are deed, which sought the chylde's life. And he arose vp, and toke y chylde and his mother, t came into the londe of Israel. But whē he herde that Archelaus did raygne in Iury, in y rowme of his father Herode, he was afraide to go thither. Notwithstandinge after he was warned of God in a dreame, he turned asyde into the parties of Galile, and went and dwelt in a cite called Nazareth,^g to fulfill y which was spoken by the Prophetes: he shalbe called a Nazarite.

The iij. Chapter.

IN those dayes Ihon the Baptyst came and preached in the wildernes of Iury, saynge: Amēde youre selues, the kyngdome of heuen is at honde.^h This is he, of whom it is spokē by y Prophet Esay, which sayeth: The voyce of a cryer in y wyldernes, prepare the LORDES waye, and make his pathes straight.

This Ihon had his garment of camels heer, and a lethrē gerdell aboute his loynes.ⁱ Hys meate was locustes and wyldē hony. Then went out to hym Ierusalem, and all Iury, and all the region rounde aboute Iordan, and were baptised of him in Iordan, cōfessynge their synnes.

Now when he sawe many of the Pharises and of ³ Saduces come to hys baptim, he sayde vnto them: ye generaciō of vipers, who hath certified you, that ye shal escape ⁴ vengeance to come? Bewarre, brynge forth due frutes of penance. Thinke not now, to saye in your selues, we haue Abraham to oure father. For I saye vnto you, that God is able of these stones to rayse vp chyldren vnto Abraham. Euen now is the axe put vnto ⁵ rote of the trees: therfore ⁶ euery tre which bringeth not forth good frute, shalbe hewē downe, and cast into the fyre.

³³ I baptise you with water to repentance: but he that cometh after me, is myghtier the I,⁴ whose shues I am not worthy to beare. He shall baptise you with ⁷ holy goost & with fyre: which hath also his fan in his hand, and will pource his floore, and gadre the wheet into his garner, & will burne ⁸ chaffe with vnquencheable fyre.⁴

Then came Iesus from Galile to Iordan,⁴ vnto Ihon, to be baptised of hym. But Iho forbade hym, saynge: I haue nede to be baptysed of the: and comest thou to me? Iesus answered & sayd vnto hym: Let it be so now. For thus it be cometh vs to fulfill all righteousnes. Then he suffred hym. And Iesus assone as he was baptised, came straight out of the water. And lo, heuē was opē ouer hym: and Ihon sawe the spirite of God descende lyke a doue, and lyght vpon hym. And lo, there came a voyce frō heuē sayng: ⁹Thys ys that my beloued sonne, in whom is my delyte.

The iiii. Chapter.

¹ THEN was Iesus ledd awaye of the spirite in to wildernes, to be tempted of the deuyll. And when he had fasted fortye dayes and fortye nightes, he was afterward an hungred. And the tēpter came to him and sayde: yf thou be the sonne of God, commaunde, that these stones be made breed. He answered & sayde: yt is wryttē: ²Man shall not lyue by bred onely, but by euery word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God.

Then the deuyll toke hym vp into the holy cite, and set hym on a pynacle of the temple, and sayde vnto hym: yf thou be ³ sonne of God, cast thy sylfe downe. ⁴For it is wrytten: he shall geue his angels charge ouer the and with their handes they shal holde the vp, that thou dashe not thy fote agaynst a stone. And Iesus sayde vnto hym: it ys wrytten also: ⁵Thou shalt not tempte thy LORDE God.

Agayne, the deuyll toke hym vp and led hym in to an excedynge hye mountayne, and shewed hym all the kyngdomes of the worlde, and all the glorie of them, and sayde vnto hym: all these wil I geue the, yf thou wilt fall downe and worship me. ⁶Then sayde Iesus vnto hym: Auoyde Satā. For it ys wryttē: thou shalt worship the LORDE thy God and hym onely shalt thou serue.

Then the deuell left hym, and beholde, the angels came and ministred vnto hym.

When Iesus had herde that Ihon was taken, he departed into Galile and left Nazareth, and went and dwelt in Capernaum, which is a cite upon the see, in the coastes of zabulon and Neptalim, ⁷ the thinge might be fulfilled which was spoken by Essay the Prophet, saynge: ⁸The londe of zabulon and Neptalim, the waye of the see beyonde Iordan, and Galile of the Gentyls, the people which sat in darknes, sawe a greate lyght, & to them which sat in the region ⁹ shadowe of deeth, lyght is begōne to shyne.

From that tyme forth beganne Iesus to preach, and to saye: Amende youre selues, ¹⁰ kyngdome of heauen is at honde.

As Iesus walked by the see of Galile, he sawe two brethren: Simon which was called Peter, & Andrew his brother, castynge a net into ¹¹ see, for they were fiszhers, and he sayde vnto them: folowe me, & I will make you fiszhers of mē.¹² And they strayght waye lefte their nettes, and folowed hym.

And whan he wēt forth from thence, he sawe other two brethren, Iames the sonne of zebede, and Ihon his brother, in the ship with zebede their father, mendynge their nettes, and called them. ¹³And they without tarynge lefte ¹⁴ shyp and their father, and folowed hym.

And Iesus went aboute all Galile,¹⁵ teachyng in their synagoges, and preachynge the gospel of the kyngdome, and healed all maner of siknes, & all maner diseases amonge the people. And his fame spred abrode through out all Siria. And they brought vnto hym all sick people, that were taken with diuers diseases and gripinges, and theſe y were possessed with deuils, & those which were lunatyke, and those that had the palsie: & he healed the. And ther folowed hym a greate nombre of people, from Galile, & from the ten cities,* and from Ierusalem, and from the regions that lye beyonde Iordan.

The 6. Chapter.

WHEN he sawe the people, he went vp into a mountayne: and when he was set, his disciples came to hym, and he opened his mouth, and taught them, sayinge: ^aBlessed are the poore in sprete: for theirs is the kyngdome of heuē. ^bBlessed are they that mourne: for they shalbe cōforted. ^cBlessed are the meke: for they shall inheret the erth. ^dBlessed are they which hunger & thyrst for rightewesnes: for they shalbe filled. ^eBlessed are the mercifull: for they shall obteyne mercy. ^fBlessed are the pure in herte: for they shall se God. ^gBlessed are the peacemakers: for they shalbe called the chyldren of God. ^hBlessed are they which suffre persecution for rightwesnes sake: for theirs is the kyngdome of heuen. ⁱBlessed are ye when men reuyle you, and persecute you, and falsly say all manner of yuell saynges against you for my sake. ^jReioyce and be glad, for greate is youre rewarde in heuē.

For so persecuted they the Prophetes which were before youre dayes.

Ye are y salt of the earth, but and yf the salt haue lost his saltnes, ^kwhat can be salted therwith? It is thence forth good for nothyng, but to be cast out, and to be trodden vnder fote of men. Ye are the light of the worlde. A cite that is set on an hill, can not be hid: nether do men lyght a candell, and put it vnder a busshell, but on a candlestick, and it lighteth all that are in the house. Let your light so shyne before men,^l that they maye se youre good workes, and glorify youre father which is in heauen.

Thinke not, that I am come to destroye the lawe, or the Prophetes:^m no, I am not come to destroye them, but to fulfill them. For truly I saye vnto you: till heauen and earth periszhe, one iott or one tytle of the lawe shall not escape, tyll all be fulfilled.

ⁿWhosoever breaketh one of these least cōmaundmentes, and teacheth mē so, he shalbe called the leest in the kyngdome of heauen. But whosoever obserueth and teacheth the same shalbe called greate in the kyngdome of heauen.

For I saye vnto you: excepte youre rightewesnes excede the rightewesnes of the Scribes and Pharises, ye can not entre in to the kyngdome of heauen.

Ye haue herde, how it was sayde to thē of the olde tyme: ^o'Thou shalt not kyll. For whosoever killeth, shall be in daunger of iudgement. But I saye vnto you: whosoever is angrie with his brother, is in daunger of the iudgement. Whosoever sayeth vnto his brother: Racha, is in daunger of y couell. But whosoever sayeth: thou foole, is in daunger of hell fyre.

^pTherefore when thou offrest thy gift at the altare, and there remembreth that thy brother hath ought agaynst the: leaue there thyne offryng before the altare, and go thy waye first, and reconcyle thy selfe to thy brother, & then come and offre thy gyfte.

Ye haue herde, how it was sayde to them of olde tyme: ^r'Thou shalt not committe aduoutrie. But I saye vnto you, that whosoever loketh on a wife lustinge after her, hath committed aduoutrie with hir already in his hert.

The vi. Chapter.

TAKE hede to youre almes, that ye geue it not in the syght of men, to the intent that ye wolde be sene of them : or els, ye get no rewarde of youre father which is in heauen. When soeuer therefore thou gueest thine almes, thou shalt not make a trompet to be blown before the, as the ypcrites do in the synagoges and in the stretes, for to be prayسد of mē. ypocrytes are. For they disfigure their faces, that they myght be sene of men to fast. Verely I saye vnto you: they haue their rewarde. But thou, whē thou fastest, annoynthe thyne heed, and wash thy face, that it appeare not vnto men, that thou fastest: but vnto thy father which is in secrete: and thy father which seyth in secrete, shal rewarde the openly.

C Se that ye gather you not treasure vpon the earth,^a where rust and mothes corrupte, and where theues breake through and steale. But gather you treasure together in heauen, where nether rust nor mothes corrupte, and where theues nether breake vp nor yet steale. For where youre treasure is, there is youre herte also.

^b The eye is the light of the body. Yf thyne eye then be syngle, all thy body shal be ful of light: But and yf thyne eye be wycked, all thy body shalbe full of darkenes: Wherefore yf the light that is in the, be darkenes, how greate then shall that darkenes be?

No mā can serue two masters. For ether he shall hate the one and loue the other:^c or els he shall leane to the one, and despise the other: ^d Ye can not serue God and mammon. Therefore I saye vnto you: be not ye carefull for youre lyfe, what ye shall eate, or what ye shall drinke: nor yet for youre body, what ye shal put on. Ys not the lyfe more worth thē meate, and the body more of value then raymēt? Beholde the foules of ȝ ayer: for they sowe not, nether reepe, nor yet cary in to the barnes: and yet youre heauēly father fedeth thē. Are ye not moch better thē they?

D Which of you (though he toke thought therfore) coulde put one cubit vnto his stature? why care ye then for rayment? Considre the lylies of the felde, how they growe. They laboure not, nether spynne. And yet for all that I saye vnto you, that euen Salomon in all his royaltie was not arayed lyke vnto one of these. Wherefore yf God so cloth the grasse, which is to daye in the felde, and to morowe shalbe cast in to the fornice: shal he not moch more do the same vnto you, o ye of lyle fayth?

Therefore take no thought, sayinge: what shall we eate, or what shall we drinke? or where with shall we be clothed? After all soch thynges do the heithen seke. For youre heauenly father knoweth, that ye haue nede of all these thynges. ^e Seke ye fyrst the kyngdome of heauen and the righteounes therof, so shal all these thynges be ministred vnto you.

Care not then for the morow, for the morow shall care for it self: Euery daye hath ynough of his owne trauayll.

The viij. Chapter.

IUDGE not, that ye be not iudged: ^f For as ye iudge, so shal ye be iudged. And with what measure ye meete, with the same shall it be measured to you agayne. Why seist thou a moate in thy brothers eye, and perceapest not the beame ȝ is yn thine awne eye? Or why saiest thou to thy brother: holde, I wil plucke the moate out of thyne eye, and beholde, a beame is in thyne awne eye. Ypocryte, fyrst cast out the beame out of thyne awne eye,^g and then shalt thou se clearly, to plucke out the moate out of thy brothers eye.

Geue not that which is holy, to dogges: nether cast ye youre pearles before swyne,^h lest they treade them vnder their fete, and the other turne agayne and all to rente you.

ⁱ Axe, and it shalbe geuen you: Seke, and ye shall fynde: knocke, and it shalbe opened vnto you. For whosoever axeth, receaueth: and he that seketh, fyndeth:^k and to hym ȝ knocketh, it shalbe opened. Ys there eny man amonge you, which yf his sonne axed hym bred, wolde offer him a stone? Or yf he axed fyszhe, wolde he proffer hym a serpent? yf ye then which are euell,^l can geue youre chyldren good gyftes: how moche more shall youre father which is in heauen, geue good thynges to them that axe hym?

^m Therefore what soeuer ye wolde that me shulde do to you, euē so do ye to them. This ys the lawe and the Prophetes.

Enter in at the straye gate: for wyde is the gate,ⁿ and broad is the waye, that leadeth to destruccion: and many there be, which go in therat. But straye is the gate, and narrow ys the waye, which leadeth vnto lyfe, and fewe there be that fynde it.

^a Beware of false Prophetes, which come to you in shēpes clothinge, but inwardly they are rauenyng woules, Ye shall knowe them by their frutes. Do men gather grapes of thornes? or figges of thistles? Euen so euery good tree bryngeth forth good frute. But a corrupte tree, bryngeth forth euyl frute, ^b A good tree can not bryng forth bad frute: nother can a rotten tre bringe forth good frute. ^c Euery tre that bryngeth not forth good frute, shalbe hewen downe, and cast into the fyre. Wherefore by their frutes ye shall knowe them.

^d Not all they that saye vnto me, LORDE LORDE, shall enter in to the kyngdome of heauen: but he that doth the will of my father which ys in heauen.

^e Many shall saye to me in that daye: LORDE, LORDE: haue we not prophecied in thy name? Haue we not cast out deuyls in thy name? Haue we not done many greate dedes in thy name? And then will I knowlege vnto them: ^f I neuer knewe you, Departe from me, ye workers of iniquite.

C Whosoever therfore heareth of me these sayinges,^g and doeth the same, I wyll lyckē hym vnto a wyse man, which buylt hys house vpon a rocke: Now whan abudaunce of rayne descended, and the wyndes blew and bet vpon that same house, it fel not, because it was grounded on the rocke. And who soeuer heareth of me these sayinges, ^h and doth thē not, shalbe lyckened vnto a folysh mā, which buylt his house apon the sonde: ⁱ Now whan abudaunce of rayne descēded, and the wyndes blew,^j and bet vpon ^k hys house, it fell, and great was the fall of it.

^l And it came to passe, that when Iesus had had ended these saynges, the people were astonnyed at hys doctryne. For he taught them as one hauynge power, and not as the Scribes.

The viij. Chapter.

A ^m WHEN he was come downe to the mountayne,ⁿ moch people folowed him. And lo, there came a leper, and worshiped him, sayinge: LORDE, yf thou wylt, thou canst make me cleane. And Iesus put forth hys honde, and touched him, sayinge: I wyl, be thou cleane: and immediatly his leprosie was clensed? And Iesus sayde vnto him: Se thou tell no mā, but go and shew thy selfe to the preste, and offer the gyfte that Moses cōmaunded,^o in witnes to them.

When Iesus was entred into Capernaum,^p there came vnto him a Captayne, and besought hym, sayinge: Syr, my seruauent lyeth sicke at home of the palsye, and ys greuously payned. Iesus sayd vnto hym: I wil come and heale him. The Captayne answered and sayde: Syr, I am not worthy, that thou shuldest come vnder my rofe, but speake the worde only,^q and my seruauent shalbe healed. For I my selfe also am a mā subiect to ^r auctorite of another, and haue souldiers vnder me. Yet whā I saye to one: go, he goeth, and to another: come, he cometh: ^s and to my seruauent: do this, he doeth it. When Iesus hearde that, he marueled, and sayde to them that folowed hym: Verely I say vnto you: I haue not founde so greate fayth: no not in Israel. But I say vnto you: ^t Many shall come from the east and west, and shall rest with Abraham, Isaac and Iacob in the kyngdome of heauen: and the chyldren of the kyngdome shalbe cast out in to vtter darknes: there shal be wepinge, and gnaszhing of teth. And Iesus sayd vnto ^u Captayne: go thy waye, and as thou beleuest, so be it vnto the. And his seruauent was healed the same houre.

^v And Iesus went in to Peters house, and sawe hys wyues mother lyeing sicke of a feuer: so he touched her hande, and the feuer left hir: and she arose, and ministred vnto them.

^w When the euen was come, they brought vnto him many that were possessed with deuyls. And he cast out ^x spirites with a worde, and healed all that were sicke, that ^y thinge might be fulfilled, which was spoken by Esay the Prophet, sayinge: ^z He toke on him oure infirmities, and bare oure sicknesses.

haue nestes, but ꝑ sonne of mā hath not wheron to rest his heede.^a Another that was one of his disciples, sayde vnto hym: Syr, geue me leue fyrst, to go & burye my father. But Iesus sayde vnto him: folowe thou me, and let the deed burie their deed.

^bAnd he entred in to a shyppe, & his disciples folowed him. And beholde, there arose a greate tempest in the see, in so moch that the shippe was couered with wawes, & he was a slepe. And his disciples came vnto him, and awoke hym, sayinge: LORDE, saue vs, we perishe. And he sayde vnto them: why are ye fearfull, o ye of lytell faithe? Then he arose, and rebuked the wyndes and the see,^c & there folowed a greate calme. And the men marueyled and sayde: what mā is this, that both wyndes and see obey hym?

^dAnd when he was come to ꝑ other syde, in to the cowntre of the Gergesites, there met him two possessed of deuyls,^e which came out of the graues, and were out of measure fearde, so that no man myght go by that waye. And beholde, they cryed out sayinge: Oh Iesu thou sonne of God, what haue we to do with the? Art thou come hyther to tormēt vs, before the tyme be come? And there was a good waye of from them a greate heerd of swyne fedinge. ^fThen the deuyles besought him, sayinge: yf thou cast vs out, suffice vs to go oure waye in to the heerd of swyne. And he sayde vnto them: go youre wayes. Then went they out, and departed in to the heerd of swyne. And beholde, ꝑ whoale heerd of swyne was caryed with violēce headlinge in to the see, and perished in the water. Thē the heerdmen fled and wente their ways in to the cyte, and tolde euery thinge, & what had fortunēd vnto the possessed of the deuyls. And beholde, all the cyte came out and met Iesus. And when they sawe hym,^g they besought hym, for to departe out of their coostes.

The ix. Chapter.

^hTHEN entred he in to a shipp, and passed ouer and came in to his awne cite. And lo, they brought vnto him a man sick of ꝑ palsie, lyinge in his bed. ⁱAnd when Iesus sawe the faith of thē, he sayde to the sick of ꝑ palsie: my sonne, be of good cheare, thy sinnes are forgeuē the. And beholde, certeyne of the scribes sayde in them selues: this man blasphemeth. But when Iesus sawe their thoughtes, he sayde: wherfore thinke ye euill in youre hertes? Whether ys it easier to saye: thy synnes be forgeuē ꝑ, or to saie: arise and walke? But that ye maye knowe, that the sonne of man hath power to forgeue sinnes in earth, thē sayde he vnto the sick of ꝑ palsie: arise, take vp thy bed, and go home. And he arose and wente home. When ꝑ people sawe it, they marueyled, & glorified God, which had geuē soch power vnto men.

^jAnd as Iesus passed forth from thence, he sawe a man syt a receyvinge of custome, named Mathew, & sayde vnto him: folowe me. And he arose, and folowed him. And it came to passe as he sat at meate in the house: beholde, many publicans and synners came and sat downe also with Iesus and his disciples.

When the Pharises sawe that, they sayde to his disciples: why eateth youre master with publicans and synners? When Iesus herde that, he sayde vnto them: The whole nede not ꝑ phisiciō, but they that are sick. Go and learne, what that meaneth: I haue pleasure in mercy, and not in offeringe.^k For I am not come to call the righteous, but ꝑ synners to repentance.

^lThen came the disciples of Ihon to hym sayinge: why do we & ꝑ Pharises fast so oft: and thy disciples fast not? And Iesus sayde vnto thē: Can the weddyng chylde mourne as lōge as the bridegrome is with them? The tyme will come, when the bridegrome shalbe taken from them, and thē shall they fast. No man peceth an olde garment with a pece of newe clothe. For then taketh he awaye the pece agayne from the garment, & the rent ys made greater. ^mNether do men put new wyne in to olde vessels, for then the vessels breake, and the wyne runneth out, & ꝑ vessels peryshe, But they poure newe wyne in to newe vessels, and so are both saued together.

Whye he thus spake vnto them, beholde there came a certayne ruler,ⁿ and worshipped him, sayinge: My doughter is euē now deceased, but come and lay thy honde on her, and she shall liue. Iesus arose and folowed hym with his disciples.^o And beholde, a woman which was diseased with an yssue of bloude xij. yeres, came behynde hym, and touched the hem of hys vesture. For she sayde in her silfe: yf I maye touche but euen his vesture only, I shalbe safe. Then Iesus turned him aboute, and behelde her, sayinge: Doughter be of good conforte, thy faith hath made y safe. And she was made whole, euen that same houre.

^aAnd when Iesus came into the rulers house, and sawe the minstrels and the people raginge, he sayde vnto them: Get you hēce, for y mayde is not deed, but slepeth.^b And they laughed hym to scorne. But whan the people were put forth, he went in, and toke her by the honde, and the mayde arose. And this was noysed through out all that londe.

And as Iesus departed thence, two blynde mē folowed hym, cryinge and sayinge: O thou sonne of Dauid, haue mercy vpon vs. And when he was come home, the blynde came to hym, And Iesus sayde vnto them Beleue ye, that I am able to do thys? And they sayde vnto hym: yee, LORDE. Then touched he their eyes, sayinge: acordinge to youre fayth, be it vnto you.^c And their eyes were opened. And Iesus charged thē, sayinge: Se that no mā knowe of it. But they departed, & spred abroad his name through out all the londe.

Whan these were gone out,^d beholde, they brought to hym a domme man possessed of a deuyll. And whan the deuyll was cast out, the domme spake: And the people merueled sayinge: it was neuer so sene in Israel. But y Pharises sayde: 'he casteth out deuyls, thorow the chefe deuyll.

^eAnd Iesus wente aboute in all cities and townes, teachinge in their synagoges & preachyng y gospel of y kyngdome, & healinge all maner sicknes & all maner disease amōge the people. ^fAnd when he sawe the people, he had compassion on thē, because they were pyned awaye, and scattered abroad, euen as shepe hauinge no shepherd.

Then sayde he to hys disciples: y heruest is greate, but y laborers are fewe. Wherefore praye the LORDE of the haruest,^g to sende forth laborers into hys haruest.

The i. Chapter.

AND he called his xii. disciples vnto hym, & 'gaue them power ouer vnclane sprete, to cast them out, & to heale all maner of sicknesses, and all maner of diseases.

The names of the xii. Apostels are these: The fyrst, Simon called Peter: & Andrew his brother. Iames the sonne of Zebede, and Ihon his brother. Philip and Bartlemew. Thomas, and Mathew the Publican. Iames the sonne of Alphe, and Lebbeus otherwyse called Taddeus. Simon of Cane, and Iudas Iscarioth, which also betrayed hym.

These twolue sent Iesus, and commaunded them, sayinge:^a Go not in to the wayes y leade to the Heithen, and in to the cities of the Samaritās enter ye not. But go rather to the lost shepe of the housse of Israel. ^bGo and preach, sayinge: The kyngdome of heuē is at hande. Heale the sicke, cense the lepers rayse the deed, cast out the deuils. ^cFrely ye haue receaued, frely geue againe. Posses not golde, nor siluer, nor brasse yn youre gerdels, nor yet scrip towards your iorney: nether two cotes, nether shues, nor yet a staffe. For ^dthe workman is worthy of his meate. In to what soeuer cite or towne ye shall come, enqyre in it, who is mete for you, and there abyde, tyll ye go thence.

And whē ye come in to an house, salute y same. And yf the housse be mete for you, youre peace shal come vpō it. But yf it be not mete for you, youre peace shal turne to you againe.

And yf no man wil receaue you, ner heare youre preachinge, departe out of that house or that cite, and shake the dust of youre fete. Truly I saye vnto you: 'it shall be easier for y londe of Sodoma and Gomorra in y daye of iudgment, then for that cite.

Beholde, I sende you forth as shepe amōge wolues. Be ye therfore wyse as serpentēs, and innocent as doves. ^eBeware of men, for they shall deliuer you vp to the cōsels, and shal scourge you in their synagoges. And ye shall be brought before prynces and kynges for my sake, in wites to them and to the gentyls.

He y receaueth a righteous man in the name of a righteous man, shal receaue a righteous mans rewarde: "And who soeuer geueth vnto one of the least of these a cuppe of colde water onely to drinke, in y name of a disciple, verely I saie vnto you: he shal not lose his rewarde.

AND it came to passe, whā Iesus had made an ende of cōmaundinge his twolue disciples, he departed thence, to teach and to preach in their cities.

Whan Ihon beinge in preson^r herde of the workes of Christ, he sent two of his disciples, and sayde vnto him: Art thou he y shal come, or shal we loke for another? Or what are ye gone out for to se? Wolde ye se a man clothed in soft rayment? Beholde, they that weare soft clothinge, are in kinges houses, But what are ye gone out for to se? A prophet? It is like vnto childrē which syt in the market, and call vnto their felowes, & saye: we haue pyped vnto you, and ye wolde not daunce: We haue morned vnto you, & ye wolde not wepe. For Ihon came nether eatinge nor drynkinge, & they saye: he hath the deuyll. The sonne of man came eatinge and drynkinge, & they saye: lo what a glutton and wyne bebbor this mā is, and a companyon of publicans & synners? And wisdome is iustified of hir children.

Then beganne he to vpbrade the cities, in the which most of his miracles were done, "because they amended not. Wo vnto the Chorasin, Wo vnto the Bethsaida: for yf the miracles which haue bene shewed amōge you, had bene done in Tyre and Sidon, they had repented longe agoo in sackcloth and aszhes. Neuertheles I saye vnto you: It shalbe easier for Tyre and Sidon in the daye of iudgment, then for you. And thou Capernaum which art lift vp vnto heauen, shalt be brought downe vnto hel. For yf the miracles which haue bene done in the, had bene shewed in Sodom, they had remained vnto this daye. Neuertheles I saye vnto you: It shalbe easier for the londe of Sodome in the daye of iudgment, thē for the.

At y same tyme Iesus answered, and sayde: "I praye the (O father and LORDE of heauen and earth) that thou hast hid these thinges from the wyse and prudent, and opened thē vnto babes. Euen so father, for so it pleased the. "All thinges are geuen ouer vnto me of my father: and no mā knoweth the sonne, but the father: nether knoweth eny man the father, saue the sonne, and he to whom the sonne wil open it. Come vnto me all ye that laboure and are laden, and I wil ease you.^d Take my yock vpon you, and lerne of me, for I am meke and lowlye of hert, & ye shal fynde rest vnto youre soules: ^efor my yock is easy, and my burden is light.

The xij. Chapter.

At the same tyme wēte Iesus thorow the A corne vpon the Sabbath,^f and his disciples were hongrie, and beganne to plucke of the eares of the corne, and to eate. When y Pharises sawe that, they sayde vnto him: Beholde, thy disciples do that, which is not lauffull to do vpon the Sabbath. He sayde vnto them: haue ye not red what Dauid did, whan he was hongrie, & they also y were with him? How he entred in to the house of God, & ^gate the shew bredes which were not lauffull for him to eate, nether for thē y were with him, but only for the prestes? Or haue ye not red in the lawe how that the prestes in the temple breake the Sabbath, and yet are blamelesse? But I saye vnto you: y here is one greater then the temple. ^hBut yf ye wist what this were (I haue pleasure in mercy, and not in offeringe) ye wolde not haue condemned innocentes: For the sonne of man is LORDE euen ouer the Sabbath.

And he departed thence, and wente in to their synagoge: and beholde,ⁱ there was a mā which had his hāde dried vp. And they axed him, sayenge: Is it lauffull to heale, vpon the Sabbath?^j because they might accuse him. But he sayde vnto thē: Which of you is it, yf he had a shepe fallē in to a pytte vpon the Sabbath, that wolde not take him,^k and lift him out? And how moch is a man better then a shepe? Therefore it is leffull to do good vpon the Sabbath. Then sayde he to the mā: Stretch forth thine hande. And he stretched it forth: and it was whole agayne like vnto the other.

Then wente the Pharises out,^l and helde a counsell agaynst him, how they might destroye him. But whā Iesus knew therof, he departed thence, & moch people folowed him: and he healed them all, and charged them, [¶] they shulde not make him knowne: that the thinge might be fulfilled, which was spoken by Esay the prophet, which sayeth: "Beholde, this is my seruaut, whom I haue chosen: and my beloued, in whom my soule delyteth: I wil put my sprete vpon hi, and he shal shewe iudgment vnto the Heithē. He shal not stryue, ner crye, nether shal eny man heare his voyce in the stretes. A brosed rede shal he not breake, and flax that beginneth to burne shal he not quench, tyll he sende forth iudgment vnto victory. And in his name shal the Heithen trust.

^C Then was there brought vnto him one possessed^b (of a deuell) the which was blynde and domne, and he healed him: in so moch [¶] [¶] blynde and domne both spake and sawe. And all the people were amased, and sayde: Is not this the sonne of David? "But whan the Pharises herde that, they sayde: He dryueth the deuyls out none other wyse, but thorow Beelzebub the chefe of the deuyls. Neuertheles Iesus knew their thoughtes, and sayde vnto them: Euery kyngdome deuyded within it self, shalbe desolate: and every cite or house deuyded in it self, maye not contynue. So yf one Sathan cast out another, thē is he at variaunce within him self: how maye then his kyngdome endure? But yf I cast out deuils thorow Beelzebub, thorow whom do youre childrē cast them out? Therefore shal they be youre iudges. But yf I cast out the deuyls by the sprete of God then is the kyngdome of God come vpon you. Or how cā a man entre in to a stronge mans house, "and violently take awaye his goodes, excepte he first bynde the stronge mā, & thē spoyle his house? He that is not with me, is agaynst me: & he [¶] gathereth not with me, scattereth abroad. Therefore I saye vnto you: "All synne and blasphemy shalbe forgeuen vnto men, but the blasphemy agaynst the sprete shal not be forgeuen vnto men: And whosoever speaketh a worde agaynst the sonne of man,^f it shalbe forgeuē him. But whosoever speaketh agaynst the holy goost it shal not be forgeuen him, nether in this worlde, ner in the worlde to come.

[¶] Either make the tre good and his frute good also, or els make the tre euel & his frute euel also. For the tre is knowne by the frute. O ye generaciō of vipers, how can ye speake good, whan ye youre selues are euell? "For of [¶] abundāce of [¶] hert [¶] mouth speaketh. A good man out of the good treasure of his hert, bringeth forth good thinges: & an euel man out of his euell treasure, bringeth forth euell thinges. But I saye vnto you, that of euery ydell worde that mē haue spoken, they shal geue accomptes at [¶] daye of iudgmēt. "Out of thy wordes thou shalt be iustified, & out of thy wordes thou shalt be cōdemned.

Then answered certayne of the scribes and Pharises, and sayde: Master, we wolde fayne se a tokē of the. "And he answered and saide vnto thē: This euell and aduouterous generacion seketh a token: and there shal no token be geuen thē, but the token of the prophete Ionas. "For as Ionas was thre dayes and thre nightes in the Whalles bely, so shal the sonne of mā be thre dayes and thre nightes in the hert of the earth. The men of Nin्यूe shal ryse in the last iudgment with this generacion, and shal cōdemne it: "for they dyd pēaunce accordinge to [¶] preachinge of Ionas. And beholde, here is one greater thē Ionas. The quene of the south shal "aryse in the last iudgmēt with this generacion, and shal cōdemne it: for she came from the vttemost partes of the earth, to heare [¶] wysdome of Salomon: And lo, here is one greater then Salomon.

Then goeth he his waye, & taketh vnto him seuen other spretes worse then him self: and whan they are entred in, they dwell there: "And the ende of that man is worse then the begynnyng. Euen so shal it go with this euell generacion.

For who soeuer doth \hat{y} wyll of my father which is in heauē, the same is my brother, sister and mother.

The xiiij. Chapter.

THE same daye wente Iesus out of \hat{y} house, ²and sat by the see syde, & moch people resorted vnto him: so \hat{y} he wēte in to a shyppe and satt him downe, and all the people stode vpō the shore. And he spake many thinges vnto thē in symilitudes, sayenge: Beholde, The sower wente forth to sowe: and as he sowed, some fell by the waye syde: Then came the foules, & ate it vp. Some fell vpon stony grounde, & anone it spronge vp, because it had no depth of earth: But whan the Sonne arose, it caught heate: and for so moch as it had no rote, it withred awaye. Some fell amōge the thornes, & the thornes grewe vp, & choked it. Some fell vpō good grounde, & gaue frute: some an hundredth folde, some sixtie folde, some thirtie folde. Who so hath eares to heare, let hi heare.

And the disciples came vnto him, and sayde: 'Why speakest thou to thē by parables? He answered and sayde vnto thē: Vnto you it is geuen to knowe the 'mystery of the kyngdome of heauen, but vnto them it is not geuen. For whoso hath, vnto him shal be geuē, and he shal haue abundaunce. But who so hath not, from him shalbe taken awaye, euē that he hath. Therefore speake I vnto thē by parables, for with seynge eyes they se not, & with hearinge eares they heare not, for they vnderstonde it not. And in them is fulfilled \hat{y} prophecie of Esay, which sayeth: 'Ye shal heare in dede, and shal not vnderstonde: and with seinge eyes shal ye se, and not perceaue. For \hat{y} hert of this people is waxed grosse, & their eares are thick of hearige, & their eyes haue they closed, lest they shulde once se with \hat{y} eyes, & heare with the eares, & vnderstōde with the hert, & turne, that I might heale them.

But blessed are youre eyes, for they se: & C youre eares, for they heare. Verely I saye vnto you: 'Many prophetes & righteous men haue desyred to se \hat{y} thinges that ye se, and haue not sene thē: and to heare the thinges that ye heare, and haue not herde thē. Hearre ye therfore the parable of the sower. 'Whan one heareth \hat{y} worde of the kyngdome, and vnderstondeth it not, the euell man cōmeth, and plucketh it awaye that is sowne in his hert: & this is he \hat{y} is sowne by the waye syde. But he \hat{y} is sowne in the stony grounde, is this: whā one heareth the worde, & anone with ioye receaueth it: neuertheles he hath no rote i him, but endureth for a season: whā trouble & persecucion aryseth because of the worde, immediatly he is offended. As for him that is sowne amonge \hat{y} thornes, this is he: Whā one heareth the worde, & the carefulness of this worlde, & the disceatfulness of riches choke the worde, & so he becōmeth vnfrutefull. But he \hat{y} is sowne in the good grounde, is this: whan one heareth the worde, and vnderstondeth it, and bringeth forth frute: and some geueth an hundredth folde, some sixtie folde, and some thirtie folde.

Another parable put he forth vnto thē, D & sayde: The kyngdome of heauē is like vnto a man, ⁴ \hat{y} sowed good sēde in his felde. But whyle mē slepte, there came an enemye, and sowed tares amonge \hat{y} wheate, & wente his waye. Now whā the blade was sprōge vp & brought forth frute, thē \hat{y} tares appeared also. Then came the seruātes to \hat{y} housholder, & sayde vnto him: Syr, sowdest not thou good sēde in thy felde? Frō whēce thē hath it tares? He sayde vnto thē: that hath the enemye done. Thē sayde \hat{y} seruātes: wilt thou then \hat{y} we go & wede thē out? He sayde: No, lest whyle ye wede out \hat{y} tares, ye plucke v the wheate also with thē. Let thē both growe together tyll the harvest, and in tyme of harvest I wil saye vnto the reapers: Gather \hat{y} tares first, & bynde thē in sheeues to be brēt: but gather the wheate in to my barn.

Another parable put he forth vnto thē, and sayde: The kyngdome of heauen is like vnto a^a grane of mustarde sede, which a man toke, and sowed it in his felde. Which is the leest amonge all sedes. But whan it is growne, it is the greatest amonge herbes, and is a tre: so that the byrdes vnder the heauen come and dwell in the braunches of it.

^cAll soch thinges spake Iesus vnto [¶] people by parables, and without parables spake he nothing vnto the: [¶] the thinge might be fulfilled, which was spokē by [¶] prophet, sayenge: I wil open my mouth in parables, and wil^d speake out the secretes from the begynnyng of the worlde.

Then sent Iesus the people awaye, and came home. And his disciples came vnto hi, and sayde: Declare vnto vs [¶] parable of [¶] tares of [¶] felde. Iesus answered, and sayde vnto them: He that soweth the good sede, is the sonne of man: the felde is the worlde: [¶] good sede are the childrē of the kyngdome: The tares are the children of wickednes: [¶] enemye that soweth the, is the deuell: [¶] haruest is the ende of the worlde: [¶] reapers are [¶] angels. [¶] For like as [¶] tares are weded out, and brent in the fyre, euē so shal it go in [¶] ende of this worlde. The sonne of man shal sende forth his angels, and they shal gather out of his kyngdome all thinges [¶] offende, and the [¶] do iniquyte, and shal cast the in to a fornace of fyre, there shalbe waylinge and gnaszhing of teth. [¶] The shal the righteous shyne as the Sonne, in the kyngdome of their father. Who so hath eares to heare, let him heare.

¶ Agayne, the kyngdome of heauen is like vnto a treasure hyd in the felde, which a mā founde and hid it, and for ioye therof he wēte and solde all [¶] he had, and bought [¶] felde.

Agayne, the kyngdome of heauen is like vnto a marchaūt, [¶] sought good pearles: and whā he had founde a precious pearle, [¶] he wēte and solde all that he had, and bought it.

Agayne, [¶] kyngdome of heauē is like vnto a nett cast in to [¶] see, wherwith are takē all maner of fyshe: and whā it is ful, mē drawe it out vnto [¶] shore, and sytt [¶] gather [¶] good i to the vessels, but cast the bad awaye. ^aSo shal it be also in [¶] ende of [¶] worlde. The angels shal go out, and seuer the bad frō the righteous, and shal cast the in to a fornace of fyre, [¶] there shalbe waylinge and gnaszhing of teth.

And Iesus sayde vnto them: Hauē ye vnderstōde all these thinges? They sayde: [¶] Yee LORDE. Then sayde he vnto the: Therefore euery scribe taught vnto [¶] kyngdome of heauen, is like an housholder, which bryngeth out of his treasure thinges new and olde.

And it came to passe whā Iesus had ended these parables, he departed thence, and came in to his owne couētre, and taught the in their synagoges: in so moch, that they were astonnyed and sayde: Whēcō cōmeth soch wysdome and power vnto him? [¶] Is not this the carpētērs sonne? [¶] Is not his mother called Mary? and his brethrē Iames and Ioses, and Symon and Iude? And are not all his sisters here with us? Whence hath he the all these thinges? And they were offended at him. But Iesus sayde vnto the: [¶] A prophet is nowhere lesse sett by, the at home and amonge his owne. And he dyd not many miracles there, because of their vnbeleue.

The xiiij. Chapter.

AT that tyme Herode [¶] Tetrarcha herde of [¶] fame of Iesu, and sayde vnto his seruātes: This is Iho [¶] baptist. He is rysen agayne frō the deed, therefore are his dedes so mightie. [¶] For Herode had takē Iho bounde hi, and put him in preson for Herodias sake his brothers Philips wife. For Ihon sayde vnto him: [¶] It is not lauffull for [¶] to haue her. And sayne wolde he haue put him to death, but he feared the people, because they helde him for a Prophet.

[¶] But whan Herode helde his byrth daye, the daughter of Herodias daunced before the, and that pleased Herode well, wherfore he promysed her with an oath, [¶] he wolde geue her, whatsoever she wolde axe. comāunded it to be geuen her, ⁊ sent, ⁊ be-was brought in a platter, and geuen to the damsell, ⁊ she brought it vnto her mother.

 Then came his disciples, and toke his body, and buried it, and wente and tolde Iesus.

Whan Iesus herde ⁊, he departed thence by shippe in to a desert place alone.^a And whā the people herde therof, they folowed him on fote out of ⁊ cities. And Iesus wēte forth, and sawe moch people, and had pytie vpon them, and healed their sicke. But at euen his disciples came vnto him, ⁊ saide: This is a deserte place, and ⁊ night falleth on: let ⁊ people departe from the, that they maye go in to the townes, and bye them vytayles. But Iesus sayde vnto them: They nede not go awaye, geue ye thē to eate. Thē saide they vnto him: We haue here but fyue loaues and two

 And he comāunded ⁊ people to syt downe vpon the grasse, and toke ⁊ fyue loaues and two fiszhes, and loked vp towarde heauen, and gaue thankes, and brake and gaue the loaues vnto the disciples, and the disciples gaue them to the people. And they all ate, and were suffised. And they gathered vp of the broken meate that remainyd ouer, twolue baszkettes full. And they ⁊ ate, were aboute a fyue thousande men, besyde wemen and children.

^b And straight waye Iesus made his disciples to entre in to a shippe, ⁊ to go ouer before hī, tyll he had sent ⁊ people awaye. And whan he had sent the people awaye, he wēte vp in to a mountayne alone,^c to make his prayer.
 And at euen he was there him self alone.
 And ⁊ shippe was allready in ⁊ myddest of the see, ⁊ was tost with waves, for the winde was cōtrary. But in ⁊ fourth watch of ⁊ night Iesus came vnto thē, walkinge vpon the see.
 And whan his disciples sawe him goinge vpon the see, they were afrayed, sayenge: It is some sprete, and cried out for feare. But straight waye Iesus spake vnto them, and sayde: Be of good cheare, it is I, be not afrayed.

^d Peter answered him, ⁊ saide: LORDE, yf it be thou, byd me come vnto the vpon ⁊ water. And he sayde: come on thy waye.
 And Peter stepte out of the shippe, ⁊ wēte vpon the water, to come vnto Iesus. But whan he sawe a mightie wynde, he was afrayed, ⁊ begāne to synke, ⁊ cried, sayenge: LORDE, helpe me. And immediatly Iesus stretched forth his hande, ⁊ caught him, ⁊ sayde vnto him:

 O thou of litle faith, wherfore doutest thou?
 And they wente in to the shippe,^e ⁊ the wynde ceased. Then they that were in ⁊ shippe, came ⁊ fell downe before him, ⁊ sayde: Of a trueth thou art ⁊ sonne of God. And they shipped ouer, ⁊ came in to the lōde of Genazereth. And whā ⁊ mē of ⁊ place had know-rounde aboute, ⁊ brought vnto him all that were sicke, ⁊ besought him, that they might but touch the hemme of his vesture onely: ⁊ as many as touched it, were made whole.

The xh. Chapter.

THEN came vnto him the scribes and pharises from Ierusalem,^f sayenge:
 Why do thy disciples transgresse ⁊ tradicions of the elders? for they wash not their hōdes whan they eate bred. He answered ⁊ sayde vnto thē: Why do ye transgresse the cōsaye: Euery man shal saye to father or that no man honoureth his father or his

Then answered Iesus ƿ sayde vnto her: O womā, greate is thy faith be it vnto the, euē as thou desyrest. And hir daughter was made hole at ſ̄ same houre.

D And Iesus departed thēce, and came nye vnto the see of Galile, and wente vp in to a mountayne, and sat downe there, And there came vnto him moch people, hauinge with them, lame, blynde, dōme, crepell, and other many, and cast them downe at Iesus fete. And he healed thē, in so moch that the people wōdred, to se the dōme speake, the crepell whole, the halt to go, ƿ the blynde to se. And they prayseed the God of Israel.

And Iesus called his disciples vnto him, ƿ sayde: "I haue cōpassion vpon the people, for they haue cōtynued with me now thre dayes, ƿ haue nothinge to eate, ƿ I wil not let thē departe fastynge, lest they perishe in ſ̄ waye. And his disciples sayde vnto him: Whence shulde we get so moch bred in the wyldernes, that we might satisfie so moch people? And Iesus sayde vnto thē: How many loaves haue ye? They sayde: seue, ƿ a fewe litle fyses. And whan he had sent awaye the people, he wente in to a shippe, ƿ came in to the parties of Magdala.

The xvi. Chapter.

THEN came the Pharises ƿ Saduces vnto him, ƿ tēpted him, requyrringe him to shewe thē a tokē from heauē. But he answered, ƿ sayde: "At euē ye saye: It wil be fayre wedder, for ſ̄ szkye is reed. And in ſ̄ mornynge, ye saye: It wil be foule wedder to daye, for the szkye is reed, ƿ gloometh. "And whā his disciples were come to the other syde of the water, they had forgotten to take bred with them. Iesus sayde vnto thē: Take hede ƿ beware of the leuē of ſ̄ Pharises ƿ of the Saduces." Thē thought they in thē selues, sayēge: We haue takē no bred with us. Whē Iesus perceaued ſ̄, he sayde to thē: O ye of litle faith, why are ye combed (in youre mindes) because ye haue takē no bred with you? Do ye not yet perceauē? Thē vnderstode they, how ŷ he bad not thē bewarre of the leuē of bred, but of ŷ doctryne of the Pharises and of the Saduces.

Then came Iesus in to the coastes of the cite Cesarea Philippi, ⁊ axed his disciples ⁊ saide: Whō do mē saie, * ŷ ŷ sonne of mā is? They sayde: Some saye, ŷ thou art Ihō the baptist, Some ŷ thou art Elias, Some ŷ thou art Ieremy, or one of ŷ prophetes. He saide to thē: But whō saye ye ŷ I am? Thē answered Symō Peter and saide: Thou art Christ ŷ sonne of ŷ Iyuinge God.^a And Iesus answered, ⁊ saide vnto hī: Blessed art thou Symō ŷ sonne of Ionas, for flesh ⁊ bloude hath not opened ŷ vnto the, but my father ŷ is in heauē.^b And I saie to ŷ: Thou art Peter, ⁊ * vpō this rocke wil I builde my cōgregation: and ŷ gates of hell shal not preuayle agaynst it. Then charged he his disciples, that they shulde tell no mā that he was Iesus Christ.

From that tyme forth beganne Iesus to shew vnto his disciples, how that he must go vnto Ierusalē, and suffre many thinges of the elders, and of the hye prestes, and of the scribes, and be put to death, and ryse againe the thirde daye. But Peter toke him asyde, and beganne to rebuke him, sayenge: LORDE, fauoure thy self, let not this happen vnto the. Neuertheles he turned him aboute, ⁊ saide vnto Peter: Auoyde fro me Sathā, thou hindrest me, for thou sauourest not ŷ thinges that be of God, but of men.

Then sayde Iesus vnto his disciples: Yf eny man wil folowe me, let him forsake him self, ⁊ take vp his crosse, and folowe me. For who so wil saue his life, shal lose it: but who so loseth his life for my sake, shal fynde it. What helpeth it a man though he wanne the whole worlde, and yet suffred harme in his soule? Or what can a man geue, to redeme his soule withall? For it wil come to passe, that the sonne of mā shal come in the glory of his father with his angels, and then shal he reward euey one accordinge to his dedes.^c Verely I saye vnto you: there stonde here some, which shal not taist of death, tyll they se ŷ sonne of mā come in his kingdome.

The xviij. Chapter.

AND after sixe dayes Iesus toke Peter James, and Ihon his brother,^d and brought them vp in to an hye mountayne out of the waye, and was transfigured before thē: ⁊ his face shone as ŷ Sonne, and his clothes were as white as the light. And beholde, there appeared vnto thē Moses and Elias talkinge with him. Then answered Peter, and sayde vnto Iesus: LORDE, here is good beyng for us. Yf thou wilt, let us make here thre tabernacles: one for the, one for Moses, and one for Elias. Whye he yet spake, beholde, a bright cloude ouersadowed them: and lo, there came a voyce out of the cloude, saienge: This is my deare sonne, in whom I delyte, ⁊ heare him. Whan ŷ disciples herde that, they fell vpon their faces, and were sore afraied. But Iesus came and touchied them, and sayde: Aryse, and be not afraied. And whan they loked vp, they sawe no man, but Iesus onely.

And whā they came downe frō ŷ mountayne, Iesus charged them, and sayde: Tell no man of this vision, tyll the sonne of man be rysen agayne from ŷ deed. And his disciples axed him, and sayde: Why saye the scribes then, that Elias must first come? Iesus answered and sayde vnto them: Elias shall come first in dede, and bringe all thinges to right agayne. But I saye vnto you: Elias is come all ready, ⁊ they knewe him not, but haue done vnto him what they wolde. Euē so shal also the sonne of man suffre of them. Then the disciples perceaued, that he spake vnto them of Ihon the baptist.

And whan they were come to the people, there came vnto him a certayne man, and kneled vnto him, and sayde: LORDE, haue mercy vpon my sonne, for he is lunatike, ⁊ sore vexed. He falleth oft tymes in to ŷ fyre, and oft in to ŷ water: and I brought him vnto thy disciples, and they coude not heale him. Then came the disciples vnto Iesus secretly, ⁊ sayde: "Why coude not we cast him out? Iesus sayde vnto them: Because of youre vnbeleue. And they were very sory. Now whā they were come to Capernaum, they that receaued ⁊ tribute money, came to Peter, and sayde: Doth youre master paye tribute? He sayed: yee. And when he was come home, Iesus preuented him, and sayde: What thinkest thou Symon? Of whom do the kynges of the earth take toll or tribute? Of their children, or of straungers? The xij. Chapter.

¶ AND it came to passe, whā Iesus had ended these sayenges, he gat him frō Galile, & came ī to þe coastes of Iewry beyonde Iordane, & much people folowed him, and he healed them there.

Then came vnto him the Pharises & tēpted him, & sayde vnto him: Is it lauffull for a man to put away his wife for eny maner of cause? He answered & sayde vnto thē: Haue ye not red, how þe he which made (man) at the begynnynge, made thē mā & womā, & sayde:

'For this cause shal a mā leaue father & mother, & cleue vnto his wife, and they two shalbe one fleshe. Now are they not twayne then, but one flesh. Let not man therefore put a sunder, þe which God hath coupled together.

¶ Then sayde they: Why dyd Moses then cōmaunde to geue a testimonyall of deuorsement, & to put her away? He sayde vnto thē: Moses (because of þe hardnes of youre hertes) suffred you to put away youre wyues: Neuertheles frō the begynnynge it hath not bene so. But I saye vnto you: 'Whosoer putteth away his wife (excepte it be for fornicacion) and marieth another, breaketh wedlocke. And who so marieth her þe is deuorced, commytteth adoutrye.

Then sayde his disciples vnto him: Yf þe matter be so betwene mā and wife, thē is it not good to mary. But he sayde vnto them: All mē can not cōprehende þe sayenge, saue they to whō it is geuē. 'For there be some gelded, which are so borne from their mothers wombe: and there be some gelded, which are gelded of men: & there be some gelded, which haue gelded thē selues for the kyngdome of heauens sake. The xx. Chapter.

A THE kyngdome of heauen is like vnto an housholder, which wēte out early in the mornynge, to hyre labourers in to his vynyarde. And whā he had agreed with the labourers for a peny a daye, he sent thē in to his vynyarde. And about ⁊ thirde houre he wente out, and sawe other stondinge ydle in the market place, and sayde vnto them: Go ye also in to my vynyarde, ⁊ what so euer is right, I wil geue it you. And they wēte their waye. Agayne, he wēte out aboute the sixte and nyenth houre, and dyd likewise, And aboute the eleuenth houre he wēte out, and founde other stōdynge ydle, and sayde vnto them: Why stonde ye here all the daye ydle? They sayde vnto him: because no man hath hyred us. He saide vnto thē: Go ye also in to my vynyarde, and loke what is right, ye shal haue it. Now whan euen was come, the lorde of the vynyarde sayde vnto his stewarde: Call the labourers, and geue them their hyre, begynnynge from the last vnto ⁊ first. Then they that were hyred aboute the eleuenth houre, came and receaued euery man a peny. But whan the first came, they supposed that they shulde receaue more: and they also receaued euery man a peny. And whan they had receaued it, they murmured agaynst the housholder, and sayde: These last haue wrought but one houre, and thou hast made thē equall vnto us, which haue borne the burthen and heate of the daye. He answered and sayde vnto one of them: frende, I do ⁊ no wronge: diddest not thou agree with me for a peny? Take that thine is, and go thy waye. I wil geue vnto this last also, like as vnto the. ^hOr haue I not power, to do as me listeth with myne owne? Is thine eye euell, because I am good? ⁱSo the last shalbe the first, ⁊ the first the last. For many are called, but few are chosen.

^mAnd Iesus wente vp to Ierusalem, and toke the twolue disciples asyde in the waye, and sayde vnto them: Behelde, we go vp to Ierusalem, and the sonne of man shalbe deliuered vnto the hye prestes and scribes: ⁊ they shal condemne him to death, and shal deliuer him vnto ⁊ Heithen, to be mocked to be scourged, and to be crucified. The xxi. Chapter.

A ^k NOW when they drew nye vnto Ierusalem,^l and were come to Bethphage vnto mount Oliuete, Iesus sent two of his disciples, and sayde vnto them: Go in to the towne that lyeth before you, ^m and anone ye shal fynde an Asse bounde, and hir foale with her: lowse them, and brynge the vnto me. And yf eny man saye ought vnto you, saye ye: the LORDE hath nede of the. And straight waye he wil let them go. But all this was done, that the thinge might be fulfilled, which was spoken by the prophet, sayenge: Tell the daughter of Sion: beholde, thy kynge commeth vnto ⁿ fy meke, syttinge vpon an Asse and a foale of ^o fy Asse vsed to the yocke. The disciples wente, and dyd as Iesus commaunded them, and broughe the Asse and the foale, ^p and layed their clothes vpon them, and set him thereon. But many of the people spred their ^q garmentes in the waye: other cut downe braunches from the trees, and strawed them in the waye. As for the people that wente before and that came after, they cryed and sayde: Hosanna vnto the sonne of Dauid, ^r Blessed be he that commeth in the name of the LORDE, Hosanna in the height.

And when he was come in to Ierusalem, ^s all the cite was moued, and sayde: Who is this? And the people sayde: This is Iesus ^t fy prophet of Nazareth out of Galile. And Iesus wente in to the tēple of God, and cast out all them that bought and solde in the tēple, and ouerthrew the tables of the money chaungers, and the seates of them that solde doues, and sayde vnto them: It is writte: My house shalbe called ^u fy house of prayer, but ye haue made it a denne of murderers. The blynde also and ^v fy lame came vnto him in the temple, and he healed them.

But when the hye prestes and the scribes sawe the wonders that he dyd, and the children crienge in the temple and sayenge: Hosanna vnto the sonne of Dauid, they disdayned, and sayde vnto him: Hearest thou what these saye? Iesus sayde vnto them: Yee. Haue ye neuer red: ^w Out of the mouth of very babes and sucklings thou hast ordeyned prayse? And he left them there, ^x and wente out of the cite vnto Bethania, and there abode ouer night.

^y But in the mornynge as he returned in to the cite, he hūged. And in the waye he sawe a fygge tre, and came vnto it, and founde nothinge thereon, but leaues onely, ^z and sayde vnto it: Neuer frute growe on the from hence forth. And immediatly the fygge tre wythred awaye. And when his disciples sawe that, they marueyled, and sayde. How is ^{aa} fy fygge tre wythred awaye so soone? Iesus answered and sayde vnto them: Verely I saye vnto you: ^{ab} Yf ye haue faith ^{ac} and doute not, ye shal not onely do this with the fygge tre, but yf ye shal saye vnto this mountayne: Avoide, and cast thy self in to the see, it shal be done. ^{ad} And what soeuer ye axe in prayer, yf ye belene, ye shal receaue it.

And when he was come in to the tēple, the chefe prestes and the elders of the people came vnto him (as he was teachinge) & sayde: "By what auctorite doest thou these thinges? and who gaue the this auctorite? Iesus answered and sayde vnto them: I wil axe a worde of you also: which yf ye tell me, I in like wyse wyl tell you, by what auctorite I do these thinges. The baptisme of Ihō, whēce was it? from heauē, or of men? Then thought they amōge them selues, and saide: Yf we saye it was from heauē, then shal he saye vnto us: Why dyd ye not then beleue him? But yf we saye it was of men, thē feare we the people: For 'euery mā helde Ihon for a prophet. And they answered Iesus, & sayde: We can not tell. Then sayde he vnto them: Nether tell I you, by what auctorite I do these thinges. But what thinke ye? A certayne man had two sonnes, and came to the first, and sayde: Go thy waye my sonne, & worke to daye in my vynyarde. He answered and sayde: I wil not, but afterwarde he repented, and wente. He came also vnto the secōde, and sayde likewise. And he answered and saide: I wil syr. And wēte not. Whether of them twayne dyd the wil of the fater? They sayde vnto him: the first. Iesus sayde vnto thē: Verely I saye vnto you: The publicans and harlottes shal come in to the kyngdome of God before you. 'For Ihon came vnto you, and taught you y^e right waye and ye beleued him not: but the publicans & harlottes beleued hī. As for you, though ye sawe it, yet were ye not moued with repētaunce, that ye might afterwarde haue beleued him.

Heare another parable. There was a certayne housholder which planted a vynyarde,¹ and hedged it rōūde aboute, and dygged a wyne presse in it, and built a tower, and let it out vnto huszbandmen, and wente in to a straunge countre. Now whā the tyme of the frute drew neare, he sent his seruātes to the huszbandmen, to receaue the frutes of it. Then the huszbandmen caught his seruāntes: one they bett, another they kylled, the thirde they stoned. Agayne, he sent other seruāntes, moo then the first, and they dyd vnto them in like maner. At the last he sent his owne sonne vnto them, and sayde: they wyl stōde in awe of my sonne. But whē the huszbandmē sawe the sonne, they sayde amōge thē selues: This is the Heyre, come, let us kyl hym,² and take his inheritaunce vnto oure selues. And they caught him, and thrust him out of the vynyarde, & slew him. Now whē the lorde of the vynyarde commeth, what wyl he do with those huszbandmen? They sayde vnto him: He wyl cruelly destroye those euell personnes, & let out his vyniarde vnto other huszbadmen, which shal delyuer him the frute at tymes conuenient.

Iesus sayde vnto thē: Dyd ye neuer rede in the scriptures: The same stone which the buylders refused,³ is become the heade stone in the corner? This was the LORDES doynge, & it is maruelous ī oure eyes. Therefore I saie vnto you: The kingdome of God shalbe takē frō you, & shalbe geuē vnto the Heithē, which shal brynge forth y^e frutes of it. And who so falleth vpō this stone, shalbe brokē in peces:⁴ & loke vpō whom it falleth, it shal grynde him to poulder.⁵ And when the hye prestes & Pharises herde his parables, they perceaue, that he spake of them.⁶ And they wente aboute to take him, but they feared y^e people, because ⁷they helde hī for a prophet.

The xxiij. Chapter.

AND Iesus answered, and spake vnto thē agayne by parables, & sayde: The kingdome of heauen is like vnto a kynge,¹ which married his sonne. And sent forth his seruāntes, to "call the gēstes vnto the mariage, & they wolde not come. Agayne, he sent forth other seruāntes, and sayde: Tell the gēstes: Beholde, I haue prepared my dynner, myne oxen and my fed catell are kylled, and all thinges are readye, come to the mariage. But they made light of it, and wente their wayes: one to his huszbandrye, another to his marchaundise. As for the remnaūt, they toke his seruāntes, and intreated thē shamefully, and slew thē. When the kynge herde that, he was wroth, and sent forth his warryers, and destroyed those murtherers, and set fyre vpon their cite. Then sayde he vnto his seruāntes: The mariage in dede is prepared, but the gestes were not worthy. Go youre waye out therefore in to þ̄ hye wayes, and as many as ye fynde, byd them to the mariage. And the seruantes wēte out in to the hye wayes, and gathered together as many as they coulde fynde, both good and bad, & the tables were all full. Then the kynge wēte in, to se the gestes, and spyed there a man that had not on a weddyng garment, and sayde vnto him: Frende, how earnest thou in hither, & hast not on a weddyng garment? And he was euen spechlesse. Then sayde the kynge vnto his seruantes: "Take and bynde him hande and fote, & cast him into þ̄ vtter darcknes: there shal be waylinge and gnaszhyng of teth. For many be called, but few are chose.^a

Then wente the Pharises, and toke counsell, how they might tangle him in his wordes, and sent vnto him their disciples with Herodes officers, and sayde: Master, we knowe that thou art true, and teachest the waye of God truly, and carest for no mā: for thou regardest not the outwarde appearance of mē. Tell us therefore, how thinkest thou? Is it lauffull to geue tribute vnto the Emperoure, or not? Now whā Iesus perceaued their wickednes, he sayde: O ye ypocrites, why tēpte ye me? Shewe me þ̄ tribute money. And they toke hī a peny. And he saide vnto thē: Whose is this ymage and superscription? They sayde vnto him: The Emperours. Then sayde he vnto them: "Geue therfore vnto the Emperour, that which is the Emperours: and geue vnto God, that which is Gods. When they herde that, they marueyled, and left him, & wēte their waye.

The same daye there came vnto him the Saduces^c (which holde that there is no resurreccion) and axed him, and sayde: Master, Moses sayde: "Yf a man dye, hauyng no children, his brother shal mary his wife, & raise vp sede vnto his brother. Now were there with us seū brethren. The first married a wife, and dyed: & for somoch as he had no sede, he left his wife vnto his brother. Like wyse the secōde, and thirde vnto the seūeth. Last of all the woman dyed also. Now in the resurreccion, whose wife shal she be of the seuen? For they all had her. Iesus answered, and sayde vnto them: Ye erre, and vnderstōde not the scriptures, ner the power of God. In the resurreccion they shal nether mary, ner be married, but are as the angels of God in heauen.

As touchinge the resurrecciō of the deed, haue ye not red, what is spoken vnto you of God, which sayeth: I am the God of Abraham, and þ̄ God of Isaac, and the God of Iacob? Yet is not God a God of the deed, but of the luyng. And whan the people herde that, they were astonnyed at his doctryne.

When the Pharises herde,^d that he had stopped the mouth of the Saduces, they gathered them selues together. And one of them (a Scribe) tēpted him, and sayde: Master, which is the chefest commandemēt in the lawe? Iesus saide vnto him: Thou shalt loue the LORDE thy God with all thy hert,^e with all thy soule, and with all thy mynde: this is the pryncipall and greatest cōmaundement. As for the secōde, it is like vnto it: "Thou shalt loue thy neyghboure as thy self. In these two commandementes hange all the lawe and the prophetes.

Now whyle the Pharises were gathered together,^f Iesus axed them, and sayde: What thinke ye of Christ? Whose sonne is he? They sayde vnto him: Dauids. He sayde vnto them: How then doth Dauid in sprete, call him LORDE, sayenge: The LORDE sayde vnto my LORDE: "Syt thou on my right honde, tyll I make thine enemies thy fote stole. Yf Dauid now call him LORDE, how is he then his sonne? And no man coude answer him one worde, neither durst eny man axe him eny mo questiōs, frō that daye forth.

The xiiiij. Chapter.

¶ AND Iesus wente out and departed from the temple,^c and his disciples came vnto him, to shew him the buyldinge of the temple. But Iesus sayde vnto them: Se ye not all these thynges? Verely I saye vnto you: there shal not be left here one stone vpon another, ^d ye shal not be cast downe. And as he sat vpon the mount Oliuete, his disciples came vnto him secretly, and saide: Tell us, whē shal these thynges come to passe? and which shal be the token of thy cōmyng, and of the ende of the worlde? Iesus answered and sayde vnto them: Take hede, that no man disceauye you. For there shal many come in my name, and saye: I am Christ, and shal disceauye many.

Ye shal heare of warres, and of ^e noyse of warres: take hede, and be not ye troubled. All these thynges must first come to passe, but the ende is not yet. For one people shall ryse vp agaynst another,^f and one realme agaynst another: and there shalbe pestilēce, honger, and earthquakes here and there. All these are the begynnynge of sorowes.

^g Then shal they put you to trouble, and shal kyll you, and ye shalbe hated of all people for my names sake. Ther shal many be offended, and shal betraye one another, and shal hate one the other. And many false prophetes shal aryse, and shal disceauye many: and because iniquyte shal haue the vpper hande, the loue of many shal abate. But whoso endureth vnto ^h the ende, ⁱ he same shal be saued. And this gospell of the kyngdome shalbe preached in all the worlde for a wytnes vnto all people,^j and then shal the ende come.

^p Then yf eny man shal saye vnto you: lo, here is Christ, or there, beleue it not. For there shal aryse false Christes and false prophetes,^q and shal do greate tokēs and wonders: In so moch, that (yf it were possible) the very chosen shulde be brought in to erreure. Beholde, I haue tolde you before. Wherefore yf they shal saye vnto you: Beholde, he is in the wildernes, go not ye forth: Beholde, he is in the chamber, beleue it not. For like as the lightenyng goeth out from the East, and shyneth vnto the west, so shal the comynge of the sonne of man be. For where so euer a deed carcase is,^r there wyl the Eagles be gathered together.

¶ Immediately after the trouble of the same tyme, shal the Sonne and Moone lose their light, and the starres shall fall from heauen, and the powers of heauen shal moue: and then shal appeare the token of the sonne of man in heauē: and then shal all the kynreds of the earth mourne, and they shal se the sonne of man come in the cloudes of heauen with greate power and glory. THEN shal the kyngdome of heauen be like vnto ten virgins, which toke their lāpes, and wente forth to mete the brydegrome. But fyue of them were foolish, and fyue were wyse. The foolish toke their lāpes, neuertheles they toke none oyle with them. But the wyse toke oyle in their vessels with their lampes. Now whyle the brydegrome taried, they slombred all and slepte. But at mydnight there was a crye made: Beholde, the brydegrome commeth, go youre waye out for to mete him. Then all those virgins arose, and prepared their lampes. But the foolish sayde vnto the wyse: geue vs of youre oyle, for oure lāpes are gone out. Then answered the wyse, and sayde: Not so, lest there be not ynough for vs and you, but go rather vnto them that sell, and bye for youre selues. an hard man : thou reapest where thou hast not sown, and gatherest where thou hast not strowed, and so I was afayred, and wete and hyd thy talent in the earth : lo, there thou hast thine owne. But his lorde answered, and sayde vnto him : Thou euell and slouthfull seruaunt, knewest thou that I reape where I sowed not, and gather where I strawed not ? Thou shuldest therefore haue had my money to the chaungers, and then at my commynge shulde I haue receaued myne owne with vauntage. Therefore take the talent fro him, and geue it vnto him that hath ten talentes. ^aFor who so hath, to him shalbe geuen, and he shal haue abundaunce. But who so hath not, fro him shalbe takē awaye euen that he hath. And cast the vnprofitable seruaunt in to vtter darknes : ^bthere shalbe waylinge and gnaszhyng of teth.

But whan the sonne of man shal come in his glory, and all holy angels with him, then shal he syt vpon the seate of his glory. And all people shalbe gathered before him : and he shal separate them one from another^c as a shepherde deuydeth the shepe from ^dgoates. And he shal set ^eshepe on his right honde, and the goates on the left. Then shal the kyng saye vnto them that shalbe on his right honde : Come hither ye blessed of my father, inheret ye ^fkingdome,^g which is prepared for you from the begynnynge of the worlde. For I was hongrie, and ye gaue me meate : I was thirstie, and ye gaue me drynke : ^hI was harbourlesse, and ye lodged me : I was naked, and ye clothed me : I was sicke, and ye vysited me : ⁱI was in preson, and ye came vnto me.

Then shal the righteous answer him, and saye : LORDE, whē sawe we the hōgrie, and fed the ? Or thirstie, and gaue the drynke ? When sawe we the herbourlesse, and lodged the ? Or naked, and clothed ^j ? Or whē sawe we ^k sicke or in preson, and came vnto the ? And the kyng shal answer and saye vnto them : Verely I saye vnto you : Loke what ye haue done vnto one of the least of these my brethren, the same haue ye done vnto me.

Then shal he saye also vnto them that shalbe on the left hande : ^lDepart from me ye cursed in to the euerlastinge fyre, which is prepared for the deuell and his angels. For I was hōgrie, and ye gaue me no meate : I was thirstie, and ye gaue me no drynke : I was herbourlesse, and ye lodged me not : I was naked, and ye clothed me not : I was sicke and in preson, and ye vysited me not.

Then shal they also answer hi, and saye : LORDE, when sawe we the hōgrie, or thirstie, or herbourlesse, or naked, or sicke, or in preson, and haue not mynisted vnto the ? Thē shal he answer them, and saye : Verely I saye vnto you : ^mLoke what ye haue not done vnto one of the leest of these, the same haue ye not done vnto me. And these shal go in to euerlastinge payne, but the righteous in to euerlastinge life.

The xxi. Chapter.

AND it came to passe whā Iesus had fynished all these wordes, he sayde vnto his disciples : Ye knowe, that after two dayes shalbe Easter, and the sonne of man shalbe deliuered to be crucified.ⁿ

Then ^oassembled together the hye prestes and the scribes, and the elders of the people in to the palace of the hye prest which was called Caiphās, and helde a counsell, how they might take Iesus by disceate, and kyll him. But they sayde : Not on the holy daye, lest there be an vproure in the people.

Now when Iesus was at Bethany^p in the house of Symon the leper, there came vnto hi a woman, which had ^qa boxe with precious oyntment, and poured it vpon his heade, as he sat at the table. Whan his disciples sawe that, they diszdayned, and sayde : Where to serueth this waist ? This oyntmēt might haue bene wel solde, and geuē to the poore. Whē Iesus perceaued that, he sayde vnto them : Why trouble ye the woman ? She hath wrought a good worke vpon me for ye haue allwaye the poore with you,^r but me shal ye not haue allwayes. Where as she hath poured this oyntmēt vpon my body, she dyd it to bury me. Verely I saye vnto you : where so euer this gospell shalbe preached thorow out all the worlde, there shal this also that she hath done, be tolde for a memoriall of her.

33 Then one of the twolue (called Iudas Iscariot) wente vnto the hye prestes, and sayde: "What wil ye geue me, and I shal deluyuer him vnto you? And they offred hi thirtie syluer pens. And from that tyme forth, he sought oportynyte to betraye him.

The firste daye of swete bred came the disciples to Iesus,^a and sayde vnto him: Where wilt thou that we prepare for the, to eate the Easter lambe? He sayde: Go in to the cite to soch a man, and saye vnto him: The Master sendeth the worde: My tyme is at honde, I wil kepe myne Easter by the with my disciples. And the disciples dyd as Iesus had appoynted them, and made ready the Easter lambe.

"And at euen he sat downe at the table with the twolue. And as they ate, he sayde: Verely I saye vnto you: One of you shal betraye me. And they were exceedinge soroufull, and beganne euery one of them to saye vnto him: Syr, is it I? He answered and sayde: He that deppeth his honde with me in the dyszhe, the same shal betraye me. The sonne of man goeth forth, as it is wrytten of him: but wo vnto that man by whō the sonne of man shalbe betrayed: It had bene better for that mā, yf he had neuer bene borne. Thē Iudas that betrayed him, answered and sayde: Master, is it I? He sayde vnto him: Thou hast sayde.

C And as they ate, Iesus toke the bred, gaue thanks,^d brake it, and gaue it to the disciples, and sayde: Take, eate, this is my body. And he toke the cuppe, and thanked, and gaue it thē, and sayde: Drynke ye all therof, this is my bloude of the new testament, that shalbe shed for many for the remission of synnes. I saye vnto you: I wil not drynke hence forth of this frute of the vyne tre, vntill that daye that I shal drynke it new with you in my fathers kyngdome.

And when they had sayde grace,^e they wente forth vnto mount Oliuete. Then sayde Iesus vnto them.* This night shal ye all be offended in me. For it is wrytten: I wil smyte the shepherde, and the shepe of the flocke shalbe scatered abroad. But after that I ryse agayne, /I wil go before you in to Galile. Peter answered and sayde vnto him: "Though all men shulde be offended in ꝑ, yet wyl I neuer be offended. Iesus sayde vnto hi: Verely I saye vnto ꝑ: This same night before ꝑ cock crowe, shalt thou denie me thryse. Peter saide vnto him: And though I shulde dye with the, yet wil I not denye the. Likewise also sayde all the disciples.

Then came Iesus with them in to a felde which is called Gethsemane, and sayde vnto the disciples: Syt ye here, whyle I go yonder & praye. And he toke with him Peter, and the two sonnes of Zebede, and beganne to wexe soroufull and to be in an agonye. Then sayde Iesus vnto them: "My soule is heuy euen vnto the death. Tary ye here, and watch with me. "And he wente forth a litle, and fell flat vpon his face, and prayed sayenge: O my father, yf it be possible, let this cuppe passe fro me: neuertheles not as I wil but as thou wilt. And he came to his disciples, and founde thē a slepe, & sayde vnto Peter: What? coude ye not watch with me one houre? Watch & praye, that ye fall not in to temptacion. "The sprete is wyllinge, but the flesh is weake.

"Agayne, he wēte forth the seconde tyme and prayed, sayenge: O my father, yf this cuppe can not passe awaye fro me (excepte I drynke of it) thy will be fulfilled. And he came, and founde them a slepe agayne, and their eyes were heuy. And he left them, and wente forth agayne, and prayed the thirde tyme, sayenge the same wordes. Then came he to his disciples, and sayde vnto them: Slepe on now, and take youre rest. Beholde, the houre is come, ꝑ the sonne of man shalbe deluyered in to the hondes of synners: Aryse, let us be goynge. Beholde, he is at hōde, that betrayeth me.

Whyle he yet spake, lo, Iudas one of the twolue came,^f and with him a greate multitude with swerdes and staues, sent frō the hye prestes and elders of the people. And he that betrayed him, had geuen them a tokē, sayenge: Whom so euer I kysse, that same is he, laye hōdes vpō him. And forthwith he came to Iesus, and sayde: Hayle master, and kyssed him. And Iesus sayde vnto him: Frende, wherefore art thou come? Then came they, and layed hondes vpon Iesus, and toke

And beholde, one of them that were with Iesus, stretched out his honde, and drue his swerde, and stroke a seruaunt of the hye prestes, & smote of his eare: Then sayde Iesus vnto him: Put vp thy swerde in to his place. "For all that take the swerde, shal perish with the swerde. Or thinkest thou that I can not praye my father now, to sende me more then twolue legions of angels? But how the shulde the scriptures be fulfilled? * For thus must it be.

f In the same houre sayde Iesus vnto the multitude: "Ye are come out as it were to a murthurer with swerdes and staues for to take me. I sat daylie teachinge in the temple amonge you, and ye toke me not. But all this is done, that the scriptures of the "prophetes might be fulfilled.† The all the disciples left him, and fled. But they that toke Iesus,‡ led him to Caiphas the hye prest, where the scribes and the elders were gathered together. As for Peter, he folowed him a farre of vnto the hye prestes palace, & wente in, and sat with the seruauntes, that he might se the ende.

"But the hye prestes and the elders, and the whole counsell sought false wytnesse ageynst Iesus, that they might put him to death, and founde none. And though many false wytnesses stepte forth, yet founde they none. At the last there stepte forth two false wytnesses, & spake: He sayde: I can breake downe the temple of God,‡ and buylde it agayne in thre dayes.

¶ And the hye prest stode vp, and sayde vnto him: Answerest thou nothinge, vnto it, that these testifie agaynst the? Neuertheles Iesus helde his tonge. And the hye prest answered, and sayde vnto him: "I charge the by ¶ Iyuyng God, that thou tell us, yf thou be Christ the sonne of God. Iesus spake: Thou hast sayde it. Neuerthelesse I saye vnto you: "From this tyme forth it shal come to passe, that ye shal se the sonne of man syttinge vpon the right hande of the power (of God) and commynge in the cloudes of the heauen.

¶ Then the hye prest rente his clothes, and sayde: "He hath blasphemed, what nede we eny mo wytnesses? Lo, now haue ye herde his blasphemy: What thinke ye? They answered, & sayde: He is gyltie of death. "Then †spytted they in his face, & smote him with fistes. Some smote him vpon the face, and sayde: Prophecie vnto us thou Christ, who is it, that smote the?

"As for Peter, he sat without in the palace. And there came vnto him a damsell, and sayde: And thou wast with Iesus of Galile also. Neuertheles he denyed before the all, and sayde: I can not tell what thou sayest. But whan he wete out at the dore, another damsell sawe him, and sayde vnto them that were there: This was also with Iesus of Nazareth. And he denyed agayne, and sware also: I knowe not the mā. And after a litle whyle, they that stode there, stepte forth, and sayde vnto Peter: Of a trueth thou art one of them also, for thy speech bewrayeth the. Then begine he to curse and to sweare: I knowe not the man. And immediatly the cock crew. Then thought Peter vpon the wordes of Iesus, which sayde vnto him: "before the cock crow, thou shalt denye me thrise. And he wente out, and wepte bitterly.

The xxij. Chapter.

V PON the morow, all the hye prestes and elders of the people helde a counsell agaynst Iesus, "that they might put him to death, and bounde him, and led him forth, and delyuered him vnto "Pontius Pilate the debyte.

When Iudas which betrayed him, sawe this that he was condemned vnto death, it repented him, and brought agayne the thirtie syluer pens to the hye prestes and the elders, and sayde: I haue done euell, in that I haue betrayed innocēt bloude. They sayde: What haue we to do with ¶? Se thou therto. And he cast the syluer pens in the tēple, and gat him awaye, and wente and hanged him self.

So the hye prestes toke the syluer pens, and sayde: It is not lauffull to put them in to the Gods chest, for it is bloudmoney. Neuertheles they helde a counsell, and bought with thē a potters felde, for to burye straungers in. Wherefore the same felde is called the bloudfelde vnto this daye. Then was that fulfilled, which was spoken by Ieremy the prophet sayenge: "And they toke thirtie syluer pens, the pryce of him that was solde, whom they bought of the children of Israell: and these they gaue for a potters felde, as the LORDE commaunded me.

33 As for Iesus, he stode before the debyte, and the debyte axed him, and sayde: "Art thou the kyng of the Iewes? And Iesus sayde vnto him: Thou sayest it. And whā he was accused of the hye prestes and elders, he answered nothinge. Then sayde Pylate vnto him: Hearest thou not, how sore they accuse the? And *he answered him not one worde: in so much that the debyte marueled exceedingly.

"At that feast, the debyte was wōte to delyuer a presoner fre vnto the people, whom they wolde. And at the same tyme he had a notable presoner called Barrabas. And whan they were gathered together, Pylate sayde vnto them: Whether wil ye, that I geue lowse vnto you? Barrabas, or Iesus which is called Christ? For he knewe well that they had delyuered him of enuye. And whā he sat vpō the iudgmēt seate, his wife sent vnto him, sayenge: Hauē thou nothinge to do with that righteous man, for I haue suffred many things this daye in a dreame because of him.

Ⓒ But the hye prestes and the elders persuaded the people, "that they shulde axe Barrabas, and destroye Iesus. Then answered the debyte, & sayde vnto thē: "Whether of these two wyl ye ŷ I geue lowse vnto you? They sayde: "Barrabas: Pylate sayde vnto them: What shal I do then with Iesus, which is called Christ? They sayde all: let him be crucified. The debyte saide: What euell hath he done thē? Neuertheles they cried yet more and sayde, let him be crucified. So whan Pylate sawe, that he coude not helpe, but that there was a greater vproure, he toke water, and washed his handes before the people, and sayde: I am vngiltie of ŷ bloude of this righteous man. Se ye therto. Then answered all the people, and sayde: His bloude come vpon vs, and vpon oure children. "Then gaue he Barrabas lowse vnto thē, but caused Iesus be scourged, and delyuered him to be crucified.

Then the debites soudryes toke Iesus, in to the comon hall, "and gathered the whole multitude ouer him, and stryped him out of his clothes, and put a purple robe vpō him, and plated a crowne of thorne, & set it vpon his heade, and a rede in his hāde, and kneled before him, and mocked him, and sayde: hayle kyng of the Iewes. And spytted vpon him, and toke ŷ rede, & smote him vpon the heade. And whā they had mocked hī, they toke the robe of him ageyne, & put his owne clothes vpon him, and led him forth, ŷ they might crucifie hī. "And as they were goinge out, they founde a man of Cyren called Symon: him they compelled to beare his crosse. And when they came vnto the place called "Golgatha (that is to saye by interpretaciō a place of deed mens sculles) they gaue him to drynke, veneger myxte with gall. And whan he had tasted therof, he wolde not drynke.

"So whan they had crucified him, they parted his garmētes, and cast lottes therfore: that the thinge might be fulfilled, which was spoken by the prophet: "They haue parted my garmētes amonge thē, & cast lottes vpon my vesture. And there they sat, and watched hī. And aboue ouer his heade, they put vp the cause of his death in wrytinge: namely: This is the kyng of the Iewes.

Ⓓ Then were there two murthurers crucified with him, "the one of the right hande, and the other on the left. They that wente by, reuyled him, and wagged their heades and sayde: Thou that breakest downe the tēple of God, and buyldest it in thre dayes, helpe thy self. Yf thou be the sonne of God, come downe from the crosse. The hye prestes also in like maner with the scribes & elders, laughed him to scorne, and sayde: he hath helped other, and can not helpe himself: Yf he be the kyng of Israel, "let him come downe now from the crosse, and we wil beleue him. ¶ And from ʒ sixte houre there was darcknes ouer the whole earth vnto the nyenth houre. And aboute the nyenth houre, Iesus cried with a loude voyce, and sayde: Eli, Eli, Lamma asabthani? that is, My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me? But some of the that stode there, when they herde ʒ sayde: he calleth Elias. ¶ And beholde, the vale of the temple was rente in two peces, from aboue tyll beneth, and the earth quaked, and the stones rent, and the graues opened, and many bodies of the sayntes that slepte, arose, and wete out of the graues after his resurreccion, and came in to the holy cite, and appeared vnto many.

¶ But the captayne and they that were with him, and kepte Iesus, when they sawe the earthquake and the thinges that were done, they were sore afrayed, and sayde: Verely this was Gods sonne. And there were many wemen there lokinge to afarre of, which had folowed Iesus from Galile, and had mynistrred vnto him: amonge whom was Mary Magdalene, and Mary the mother of Iames and Ioses, and the mother of the children of Zebede.

¶ At euen there came a rich man of Arimathea, called Ioseph, which was also a discipule of Iesus. He wete vnto Pylate, and axed the body of Iesus. Then commaunded Pylate that the body shulde be geuē him. And Ioseph toke the body, and wrapped it in a cleane linnen cloth, and layed it in his owne new sepulchre, which he had hewen out in a rocke, and rolled a greate stone to the dore of the sepulchre, and wente his waye. And there was Mary Magdalene and ʒ other Mary, syttinge ouer agaynst the sepulchre.

The next daye that foloweth the daye of prepayngre, the hye prestes and Pharises came together vnto Pylate, and saide: Syr, we haue called to remembrance, that this disceauer sayde whyle he was yet alyue: After thre dayes I wyl ryse agayne. Comaunde therefore that the sepulchre be kepte vnto the thirde daye, lest peraduenture his disciples come, and steale him awaye, and saye vnto the people: He is rysen from the deed, and so shal the last error be worse the first. Pylate sayde vnto them: Thē haue ye watchmē, go youre waye, and kepe it as ye can. They wete and kepte the sepulchre with watchmen, and sealed the stone.

The xxviii. Chapter.

V PON the euenyng of the Sabbath holy daye, which dawneþ ʒ morow of the first daye of ʒ Sabbathes, came Mary Magdalene and ʒ other Mary, to se ʒ sepulchre. And beholde, there was made a greate earthquake: for the angell of the LORDE descended from heauen, and came and rolled backe ʒ stone from the dore, and sat vpon it. And his countenance was as ʒ lightenyng, and his clothinge whyte as snowe. But ʒ watch mē were troubled for feare of him, and became as though they were deed.

The angell answered, and sayde vnto ʒ women: Be not ye afrayed. I knowe that ye seke Iesus that was crucified. He is not here. He is rysen, as he sayde. Come, and se ʒ place, where the LORDE was layed, and go youre waye soone, and tell his disciples, that he is rysen from the deed. And beholde, he wyl go before you in to Galile, there shal ye se him. The gospell of S. Marke.

The first Chapter.

THIS is the begynnyng of the gospell of Iesus Christ the sonne of God, as it is wryttē in the prophetes. ^a Beholde, I sende my messaüger before thy face, which shal prepare thy waye before the. ^b The voyce of a cryer is in the wyldernes: Prepare the waye of the LORDE, make his pathes straight.

^c Ihon was in the wyldernes, and baptysed, and preached the baptyme of amendment, for the remysion of synnes. And there wente out vnto him the whole londe of Iewry, and they of Ierusalem, and were all baptysed of him in Iordan, and knewedged their synnes.

^d Ihon was clothed with Camels heer, and with a lethron gerdell aboute his loynes, and ate locustes and wyld hony, and preached, and sayde: ^e There commeth one after me, which is stronger then I: before whom I am not worthy to stoupe downe, and to lowse vp ^f lachet of his shue. I baptyse you with water, but he shal baptyse you with the holy goost.

^g And it happened at the same tyme, that Iesus came out of Galile from Nazareth, and was baptysed of Ihon in Iordan. And as soone as he was come out of the water, he sawe that the heauens opened, and the goost as a doue cōmyng downe vpon him. And there came a voyce from heauē: Thou art my deare sonne,^h in whom I delyte.

ⁱ And immediatly the sprete droue him in to the wyldernes: ^j and he was in the wyldernes fourtye dayes, and was tempted of Sathan, and was with the wyld beestes. And the angels mynistred vnto him.

But after that Ihon was taken,^k Iesus came in to Galile, and preached the gospell of the kyngdome of God, and sayde: the tyme is fulfilled, and the kyngdome of God is at hande: Amende youre selues, and beleue the gospell.

^l So as he walked by the see of Galile, he sawe Symon and Andrew his brother, castinge their nettes in the see, for they were fyszhers. And Iesus sayde vnto thē: Folowe me, and I wil make you fyszhers of mē.^m And immediatly they left their nettes, and folowed him.

And when he was gone a lytle further from thence, he sawe Iames the sonne of Zebede, and Ihon his brother, as they were in the shyppe mendyng their nettes. And anone he called them. And they left their father Zebede in the shyppe with the hyred seruautes, and folowed him.

ⁿ And they wente in to Capernaum, and immediatly vpon the Sabbathes, he entred in to the synagoge, and taught. And ^o they were astonnyed at his doctryne: for he taught them as one hauyng power, and not as the Scrybes.

And in their synagoge there was a man possessed with a foule sprete,^p which cried and sayde: Oh what haue we to do with the, thou Iesus of Nazareth. Art thou come to destroye us? I knowe that thou art euen ^q holy one of God. And Iesus reprovde him, and sayde: holde thy tonge, and departe out of him. And the foule sprete tare him, and cried with a loude voyce, and departed out of him. And they were all astonnyed, in so moch that they axed one another amonge thē selues, ^r and sayde: What is this? lernynge is this? For he cōmaundeth the foule spretes with power, and they are obedient vnto him. And immediatly the fame of him was noysed rounde aboute in the coastes and borders of Galile.

“And forth with they wente out of the synagoge, and came in to the house of Symō and Andrew, with Iames and Ihon. And Symons mother in lawe laye, ⁊ had the feuers, and anone they tolde him of her. And he came to her, and set her vp, and toke her by ⁊ hande, and the feuer left her immediatly. And she mynistred vnto them.

“At euen whan the Sonne was gone downe, they brought vnto him all that were sick and possessed, and the whole cite was gathered together at the dore, and he healed many that were diseased with dyuerse sicknesses, and cast out many deuels, and suffred not the deuels to speake, because they knew him.

“And in the mornynge before daye, he arose, and wente out. And Iesus departed in to a deserte place, and prayed there. Peter also and they that were with him, folowed after him. And whan they had founde him, they sayde vnto him: Euery man seketh the. And he sayde vnto them: Let us go in to the next townes, that I maye preach there also, for therto am I come. And he preached i their synagoges, in all Galile, and droue out the deuyls.

“And there came vnto him a leper, which besought him, and kneled before him, ⁊ sayde vnto him: Yf thou wilt, thou canst make me cleane. And it pitied Iesus, and he stretched forth his honde, and touched him, and sayde: I wyll, be thou cleane. And whā he had so spoken, immediatly the leprosy departed frō him, and he was clenſed.^a And Iesus forbad him strately, and forth with sent him awaye, and sayde vnto him: Take hede, that thou saye nothinge to eny man, but go thy waye, and shew thy self vnto the prest, and offre for thy clensynge what Moses cōmaunded, for a wytnesse vnto them. But he whan he was departed, beganne to speake moch of it, and made the dede knowne: in so moch that Iesus coude no more go in to the cite openly, but was without in deserte places, ⁊ they came vnto him frō all quarters.

AND after certayne dayes he wente agayne vnto Capernaum,^f and it was noysed that he was in ⁊ house. And immediatly there was gathered a greate multitude, in so moch that they had no rowme, no not without before the dore. And he spake the worde vnto thē. And there came vnto him certayne, which brought one sicke of the palsey borne of foure. And when they coude not come nye him for ⁊ people, they vncouered ⁊ rofe of ⁊ house where he was. And when they had made a hole, they let downe the bed (by coardes) wherin the sicke of ⁊ palsey laye. But when Iesus sawe their faith, he sayde vnto the sicke of the palsey: My sonne, thy synnes are forgoen the.

Neuertheles there were certayne scribes which sat there, ⁊ thought in their hertes: How speaketh this man soch blasphemy?

“Who can forgoe synnes, but onely God?

“And immediatly Iesus knew in his sprete, that they thought so in thē selues, and saide vnto them: Why thynke ye soch thinges in youre hertes? Whether is easier to saye to the sicke of the palsey: Thy synnes are forgoeū the, or to saye: aryse, take vp thy bed and walke. But that ye maye knowe, that ⁊ sonne of man hath power to forgoe synnes vpon earth, he sayde vnto the sicke of ⁊ palsey: I saye vnto the, aryse, take vp thy bed, and go home. “And immediatly he arose, toke his bed, and wente forth before them all: in so moch that they were all astonnied, and prayſed God, and sayde: We neuer sawe soch.

“And he wente forth agayne vnto the see, and all the people came vnto him,^g and he taught them. And as Iesus passed by, he sawe Leui the sonne of Alpheus syttinge at the reccate of custome, and sayde vnto him: Folowe me. And he arose, and folowed him. And it came to passe as he sat at the table in his house, there sat many publicans ⁊ synners at the table with Iesus and his disciples: For there were many ⁊ folowed him. with þ̄ publicans and synners? When Iesus herde that, he sayde vnto thē: The whole nede not þ̄ Phisician, but they that are sycke. I am not come to call the righteous, but the synners to repētaunce.^a

And the disciples of Ihon and of þ̄ Pharises fasted.^b And there came certaine, which sayde vnto him: Why fast the disciples of Ihon, and of þ̄ Pharises, and thy disciples fast not? And Iesus sayde vnto them: How can the weddinge children fast, whyle the brydegrome is with them? So longe as þ̄ brydegrome is with them, they can not fast. But the tyme wyl come, that the brydegrome shalbe taken from them, and then shal they fast.

C No man soweth a pece of new cloth vnto an olde garment, for els he taketh awaye the new pece from the olde, and so is the rēt worse. And no man putteth new wyne in to olde vessels, els the new wyne breaketh the vessels, and the wyne is spylt, and þ̄ vessels perishe: but new wyne must be put in to new vessels.

And it chaunthed that vpon þ̄ Sabbath he wente thorow the corne felde, and his disciples begāne to make a waye thorow, and to plucke the eares of þ̄ corne. And the Pharises sayde vnto him: Beholde, what thy disciples do, which is not lauffull vpon the Sabbath. And he sayde vnto thē: Haue ye neuer red what Dauid dyd, whā he had nede, and was an hongred, both he and they that were with him: how he wente in to the house of God in the tyme of Abiathar the hye prest,^c and ate the shewbreds (which was lauffull for no man to eat, but for the prestes) and he gaue them vnto him, and to them that were with him? And he sayde vnto them: The Sabbath was made for mans sake, and not man for the Sabbathes sake. Therefore is the sonne of man LORDE euen ouer the Sabbath.

The iij. Chapter.

A HE wente agayne also in to the synagoge, and there was there a mā that had a wythred hande.^d And they marked him, whether he wolde heale him on the Sabbath, that they might accuse him. And he sayde vnto þ̄ mā with the wythred hāde: Steppe forth here.

And he sayde vnto thē: Is it lauffull to do good on the Sabbath? Or is it lauffull to do euell? to saue life, or to kyll? But they helde their tonge. And he loked rounde aboute vpon them with wrath, and was sory for the harde hertes of thē, and sayde vnto the man: Stretch out thine hande. And he stretched it out. And his hande was made whole like as þ̄ other.

And the Pharises wēte out, and straight waye they helde a counsell with Herodes officers agaynst him, how they might destroye him. But Iesus departed awaye with his disciples vnto the see. And there followed him moch people out of Galile, and frō Iewry, and from Ierusalē, and out of Idumea, and from beyonde Iordan, and they that dwelt aboute Tyre and Sydon, a great multitude which had herde of his noble actes, and came vnto him.

And he spake vnto his disciples þ̄ they shulde kepe a shypp for him because of the people, lest they shulde thrunge him: for he healed many of them, in so moch, that all they which were plagued, preased vpon him, that they might touch him. And whan the foule spretes sawe him, they fell downe before him, and cried, and sayde: Thou art the sonne of God. And he charged them strately, that they shulde not make him knowne.

And he wente vp in to a mountayne, and called vnto him whom he wolde, and they came vnto him. And he ordeyned þ̄ twolue, that they shulde be with him, and that he might sende them out to preach, and that they might haue power to heale sicknesses, and to cast out deuyls. And vnto Symon he gaue the name Peter, and Iames the sonne of Zebede, and Ihon the brother of Iames, and gaue thē the name Bonarges, that is to saye, the children of thonder: and Andrew, and Philippe, and Bartylmew, and Mathew, and Thomas, and Iames þ̄ sonne of Alpheus, and Tadeus, and Symon of Cana, and Iudas Iscarioth which betrayed him.

And they came to house. Then assembled the people together agayne, in so moch that they had no leysure to eate. And when they that were aboute him herde of it, they wente out to holde him. For they sayde: * he taketh to moch vpon him. But the scribes that were come downe from Ierusalem, sayde: He hath Belzeub, and thorow the chefe deuell casteth he out deuyls. And he called them together,^a and spake vnto them in symilitudes:

¶ How can one Sathan dryue out another? And yf a realme be deuyded in it self, how can it endure? And yf a house be deuyded agaynst it self, it can not contynue. Yf Sathan now ryse agaynst him self, and be at variaunce with him self, he can not endure, but is at an ende. No man can entre in to a stronge mans house, and take away his goodes, excepte he first bynde the stronge man, and then spoyle his house.

^b Verely I saye vnto you: All synnes shalbe forgeuen the children of men, and the blasphemy also wherwith they blaspheme. But who so blasphemeth the holy goost, hath neuer forgeuenes, but is giltye of the euerlasting iudgment. For they sayde: he hath an vncleane sprete.

¶ And there came his mother and his brethre, and stode without, and sente vnto him, and called him. And the people sat aboute him, and sayde vnto him: Beholde, thy mother and thy brethre axe after the without. And he answered, and sayde: Who is my mother and my brethren? And he lokyd rounde aboute him vpon his disciples, which sat rounde in compasse aboute him, and sayde: Beholde, my mother and my brethren. For who so euer doth the will of God the same is my brother, and my sister and my mother.

The iiii. Chapter.

¶ AND he begane agayne to teach by ſyde. ¶ And there gathered moch people vnto him, so that he wente in to a shippe, and sat vpon the water. And all the people stode vpon the londe by the see syde. And he preached longe vnto the by parables, and sayde vnto the in his doctryne: Herken to, beholde, there wente out a sower to sowe: & it happened whyle he was sowinge, that some fell by the waye syde. Then came the foules vnder the heauen, and ate it vp. Some fell vpon stonye grounde, where it had not moch earth: and anone it came vp, because it had not depe earth. Now whā the Sonne arose, it caught heate: and in so moch as it had no rote, it wythred awaye. And some fel amonge the thornes, & the thornes grew vp, and choked it, and it gaue no frute. And some fell vpon a good grounde, which gaue frute, that came vp and grew. And some bare thirtie folde, and some sixtie folde, and some an hundreth folde. And he sayde vnto them: Who so hath eares to heare, let him heare.

¶ And whan he was alone, they that were aboute him with the twolue, axed him concerninge this parable. And he sayde vnto the: Vnto you it is geuen, to knowe the mystery of the kyngdome of God: but vnto them that are without, all thinges happen by parables,^c that with seynge eyes they maye se, and not discerne: and that with hearinge eares they maye heare, and not vnderstode, lest at eny tyme they turne, and their synnes be forgeuen them. And he sayde vnto them: Vnderstonde ye not this parable? How wyl ye then vnderstonde all other parables?

The sower soweth the worde. ¶ These be they that are by the waye syde: where the worde is sowne, and as soone as they haue herde it, immediatly commeth Sathā, and taketh awaye the worde that was sown in their hertes. And likewyse are they that are sown on the stonye grounde: which when they haue herde the worde, receaue it with ioye, and haue no rote in them: but endure for a tyme. When trouble and persecucion aryseth for ſy wordes sake, immediatly they are offended. And these are they that are sown amōge the thornes: which heare the worde, and ſy carefules of this worlde, and the disceatfulnes of riches, and many other lustes entre in, and choke the worde, and so is it made vnfrutefull. And these are they ſy are sown vpō a good grounde: Which heare ſy worde, and receaue it, and brynge forth frute: some thirtie folde, and some sixtie folde, and some an hundreth folde.

With what measure ye mete, with the same shal it be measured vnto you agayne. ^bAnd vnto you that heare this, shal more be geuen. ^cFor who so hath, vnto him shal be geuen: and who so hath not, from him shalbe taken awaye, euen that he hath.

And he sayde: The kyngdome of God is after this maner, as when a man casteth sede vpon the londe, and slepeth, and stondest vp night and daye,^d and the sede spryngeth vp, & groweth, he not knowinge of it. (For the earth bryngeth forth frute of her selfe: first the grasse, afterwarde the eare, then the full wheate in the eare.) But whan she hath brought forth the frute, he putteth to the syckell, because the haruest is come.

And he sayde: Where vnto wyl we lickien the kyngdome of God? Or by what symilitude wyl we compare it? ^eIt is like a grayne of mustarde seade, which whā it is sowē vpō the londe, is the leest amonge all sedes of the earth. And whā it is sowed, it groweth vp, and is greater then all herbes, and getteth greate branches, so ^f the foules vnder the heauē maye dwell vnder ^g shadowe therof.

And by many soch parables he spake the worde vnto the, there after as they might heare it,^h & without parables spake he nothinge vnto them: but vnto his disciples he expounded all thinges pryuatly. And the same daye at euen he sayde vnto them: ⁱ let us passe ouer. And they let the people go, and toke him as he was in the shippe, and there were mo shippes with him. And there arose a greate storme of wynde, and daszhed the waves in to the shippe, so that the shippe was full. And he was behynde in the shippe and slepte vpon a pelowe. And they awoke him & sayde vnto him: Master, Carest thou not, that we perishe? And he arose, and rebuked ^j wynde, and sayde vnto the see: Peace, and be still, And the wynde was layed, & there folowed a greate calme. And he sayde vnto them: Why are ye so fearful? How is it, that ye haue no faith? And they feared exceedingly, & sayde one to another:

What is he this? For wynde and see are obedient vnto him.

The 6. Chapter.

AND they came ouer vnto the other syde ^k of the see in to the cowntre of the Gaderenites. ^lAnd whan he wēte out of the shippe, there met him a mā possessed of an vnclane sprete, which had his dwellinge in the graues. And no man coude bynde hym, no not with cheynes: for he was oft bounde with fetters & cheynes, and pluckte the cheynes in sunder, and brake the fetters in peces, and no man coude tame him. And he was allwaye both daye and night vpon the mountaynes and in the graues crienge, and beatinge him self with stones. But whan he sawe Iesus afare of, he ranne, and fell downe before him, and cried loude, and sayde: ^m What haue I to do with the O Iesus thou sonne of ⁿ Hiest God? I charge the by God, that thou torment me not. Neuertheles he sayde vnto him: Go out of the man thou foule sprete. And he axed him: What is thy name? And he answered and sayde: My name is Legion, for there be many of vs. And he prayed him instantly, that he wolde not sende them awaye out of that cowntre.

And euen there in the mountaynes there was a ^o greate heerd of swyne fedyng, and all the deuyls praied him, and sayde: Let vs departe in to the swyne. And anone Iesus gaue them leue. Then the foule spretes wente out, and intred in to the swyne. And the heerd of swyne, ranne heedlinges in to ^p see with a storme. They were aboute a two thousande swyne, and were drowned in the see.

And the swyneherdes fled, and tolde it in the cite, and in the cowntre. And they wente out for to se what had happened, and came to Iesus, and sawe hym which was possessed and had had ^q legion, that he sat, and was clothed, and in his right mynde, and they were afrayed. And they that had sene it, tolde them what had happened to the possessed, and of the swyne.

And they beganne to praye him, that he wolde departe out of their coastes. And whan he came in to the shippe, the possessed prayed him, that he might be with him.

Neuertheless Iesus wolde not suffre hi, but saide vnto hi: Go i to thy house & to thine awne, and tell thē how greate benefites the LORDE hath done for y, and how he hath had mercy vpon the. And he wente his way, and beganne to publish in the ten cities how greate benefites Iesus had done for him. And euery man marueyled.

C And whan Iesus passed ouer agayne by shippe, there gathered moch people vnto him, and was by the see syde. *And beholde, there came one of the rulers of the synagoge, whose name was Iairus. And whan he sawe him, he fell downe at his fete, and besought him greatly, & sayde: My doughter is at the poynte (of death) let it be thy pleasure to come and laye thine honde vpon her, that she maye be whole and lyue. And he wente with him, and moch people folowed him, and thronged him.

And there was a woman, ⁴which had had the bloudeysse twolue yeares, and had suffred moch of many phisicians, and spent all that she had, and was not helped, but rather in worse case. Whan she herde of Iesus, she came behynde amonge the people, and touched his garment. For she sayde: Yf I maye but touch his clothes, I shal be whole.

And immediatly y fountayne of hir bloude was dried vp, and she felt in hir body, y she was healed of the plage.

D And forth with Iesus felt in himself the power that was gone out of him, and turned him aboute amoge the people, and sayde: Who hath touched my clothes? And his disciples sayde vnto him: Thou seist that the people thrusteth the, and sayest: Who hath touched me? And he loked aboute to see her, that had done it.

As for the woman, she feared and trembled (for she knew, what was done in her) and came and fell downe before him, and tolde him the whole trueth. And he sayde vnto her: Doughter, thy faith hath made the whole: go thy waye in peace, & be whole of thy plage.

^aWhyle he yet spake, there came certayne from the ruler of the synagoges house, and sayde: Thy doughter is deed, why troublest thou the master eny more? But Iesus herde right soone the worde that was spoken, and sayde vnto the ruler of the synagoge: Be not thou afraied, beleue onely.

And he suffred no mā to folowe him, but Peter and Iames and Ihon his brother. And he came in to the ruler of the synagoges house, and sawe the busynes, and them that wepte and wayled greatly: and he wente in, and sayde vnto them: Why make ye this a doo, and wepe? The mayde is not deed, but slepeth.

And they laughed him to scorne. *And he droue them all out, and toke the father and mother of the mayde, and them that were with him, and wente in where the mayden laye. And he toke the maydē by the honde, and sayde vnto her: Thabitha Cumi (which is by interpretacion) Maydē, I saye vnto the: Arise. [†]And immediatly the mayden arose, and walked. She was twolue yeare olde, and they were astonnyed out of measure. And he charged them strately, that no man shulde knowe of it, and sayde vnto them, that they shulde geue her to eate.

The vi. Chapter.

AND he departed thence, and came in to ²his awne countre, and his disciples folowed him. And whā y Sabbath came, he begāne to teach in their synagoge. And many that herde it, marueled at his lernynge, and sayde: From whēce hath he these thinges? And what wysdome is this, y is geuē him: & soch actes as are done by his handes? Is not this the Carpenter the sonne of Mary, and the brother of Iames and Ioses, and of Iude and Symon? Are not his sisters here with vs also? And they were offended at him. But Iesus saide vnto thē: ^aA prophet is nowhere lesse set by, thē in his awne countre, & at home amonge his awne. And he coude not shew one miracle there, but layed his handes vpon a few sicke, and healed them. And he marueyled at their vnbeleue.

And he wente aboute in the townes on euery syde, and taught them. And called the twolue, and begāne to sende them two and two, and gaue them power ouer the vnclene spretes. And commaunded thē, that they shulde take nothings with them towarde their iourney, saue onely a rodde: no scrippe, no bred, no money in the gerdell, but shulde ^cAnd they wete forth, and preached, that men shulde amede them selues, and they cast out many deuyls: and many that were sicke annoynted they with oyle, and healed the.

^dAnd it came to kynge Herods eares (for his name was now knowne) and he sayde: Ihon the baptist is rysen agayne from the deed, and therefore are his dedes so mightie. But some sayde: It is Elias. Some sayde: It is a prophet, or one of ^e prophetes. But when Herode herde it, he sayde: It is Ihon whom I beheaded, he is rysen againe from the deed. This Herode had sent forth, and taken Ihon, and put him in preson, because of Herodias his brother Philippes wife, for he had married her. Neuertheles Ihon sayde vnto Herode: *It is not lawfull for the to haue thy brothers wife. But Herodias layed wayte for him, and wolde haue slayne him, and coude not. Notwithstōdinge Herode feared Ihō, for he knew that he was a iust and holy man: and he kepte him, and herkened vnto him in many thinges, and herde him gladly.

^fAnd there came a conuenient daye, that Herode on his byrth daye made a supper to the lordes, captaynes and chefe estates of Galile. Then the daughter of Herodias came in, and daunsed, and pleased Herode, and them that sat at the table. Then sayde the kynge vnto ^g damsel: Axe of me what thou wilt, I wil geue it the. And he sware vnto her: What soeuer thou shalt axe of me, I wil geue it the, euen vnto ^h one half of my kyngdome. She wente forth, and sayde vnto hir mother: what shal I axe? She sayde: Ihon baptistes heade. And immediatly she wete in to the kinge with haist, and sayde: I will that thou geue me straight waye in a platter the heed of Ihon the baptist. Then the kynge was sorry: Yet for the othes sake and the that sat at the table, he wolde not saye her nay.

And immediatly he sent the hangman, and commaunded his heade to be brought in. So he wete, and heeded him in the preson, and brought his heade in a platter, and gaue it vnto the damsell, and the damsell gaue it vnto hir mother. And whan his disciples herde that, they came and toke his body, and layed it in a graue.

ⁱAnd the Apostles came together vnto Iesus, and tolde hi all, and what they had done and taught. And he sayde vnto them: Let vs go out of the waye in to the wyldernes, and rest a litle. For there were many cōmers and goers, and they had not tyme ynough to eate. And there he passed by shippe out of ^j waye in to a deserte place. And the people sawe the departynge awaye, and many knewe of it, and ranne thither together of fote out of all cities, and came before the, and came vnto him. ^kAnd Iesus wente out, and sawe moch people, and had cōpassion vpon them: for they were ^l as the shepe, that haue no shep-herde, and he begane a lōge sermon.

Now whan the daye was farre past, his disciples came vnto him, and sayde: This is a deserte place, let them departe,^m that they maye go in to the vyllages and townes rounde aboute, and bye them selues bred, for they haue nothinge to eate. But Iesus answered and sayde vnto them: geue ye them to eate.

And they sayde vnto him: Shal we go then, and bye two hundreth peny worth of bred, and geue them to eate? He sayde vnto them: How many loaues haue ye? Go and se. And when they had searched, they sayde: Fyue, and two fiszhes. And he commaunded them all to syt downe by table fulles vpon the grene grasse. And they sat downe here a rowe and there a rowe by hundreds and by fifties. And he toke the fyue loaues and two fiszhes, and loked vp vnto heauen, and gaue thanks, and brake the loaues, and gaue to the disciples, to set before them. And the two fiszhes parted he amonge them all. And they all ate, and were satisfied. And they toke vp twolue baskettes full of ⁿ broken peeces and of the fiszhes. caused his disciples to go in to the shippe, and to passe ouer before him vnto Bethsaida, whyle he sent awaye the people. And at euen was the shippe in the myddest of the see, and he alone vpon the londe. And he sawe that they were in parell with rowyng, for the wynde was agaynst them.

¶ And aboute the fourth watch of ȝ night he came vnto them, and walked vpon the see, and wolde haue gone ouer by thē. And whan they sawe him walkinge vpon the see, they thought it had bene a sprete, and cried out, for they sawe him all, and were afraied. But immediatly he talked with them, and sayde vnto them: Be of good comforte, it is I, be not afraied. ^b And he wēte vnto them in to the shippe, and the wynde ceased. And they were astonnyed, and marueled exceedingly: for they had forgotten the *loaues, and their hert was blynded.

And whan they were passed ouer, they came in to ȝ lande of Genezareth, and drue vp in to the haun. And whan they were come out of the shippe, immediatly they knewe him, and ranne thorow out all the region aboute, and beganne on euery syde to bryng vnto him in beddes soch as were sicke, where they herde that he was. And whither so euer he entred in to townes, cities or vyllagies, there layed they the sicke in the market place, and prayed him, that they might but touch the hemme of his garment. And as many as touched him, were made whole.

The viij. Chapter.

¶ AND there came vnto him the Pharises, and certayne of the scribes,^c that were come from Ierusalē. And whā they sawe certayne of his disciples eate bred with comon (that is, with vnwaschen) handes, they complayned. For the Pharises & all the Iewes eate not, excepte they wash their handes oft tymes: obseruyng so the tradicions of the elders. And whan they come from the market, they eate not, excepte they waszhe. And many other thynges there be, which they haue taken vpon them to obserue, as the washinge of cuppes and cruses, and brasen vessels and tables.

Then the Pharises and scribes axed him: Why walke not thy disciples after the tradi-cions of the elders, but eate bred with vnwaschen handes? But he answered & sayde vnto them: Full well hath Esay prophecied of you Ypocrytes, as it is wryttē: ^d "This people honoureth me with their lippes, but their hert is farre fro me. But in vayne do they serue me, whyle they teach soch doctrynes as are nothinge but the commaundemētēs of mē. Ye leaue the cōmaundement of God and kepe the tradicions of men, as the washyng of cruses and cuppes, & many soch thynges do ye.

And he saide vnto thē: How goodly haue ye cast asyde the cōmaundement of God, to manteyne youre owne tradicions? ^e For Moses sayde: Honoure father & mother. ^f Who so curseth father and mother, shal dye the death. But ye saye: A mā shal saye to father or mother: Corban, that is, The thinge ȝ I shulde helpe the withall, is geuē vnto God. And thus ye suffre him nomore to do ought for his father or his mother, & make Gods worde of none effecte, thorow youre owne tradicions that ye haue set vp. And many soch thynges do ye.

And he called vnto him all the people,^g and sayde vnto them: Herken vnto me ye all, and vnderstonde me. There is nothinge without a man, that can defyle him, whan it entreth in to him. But that goeth out of him, that is it that maketh the man vnclane. Yf eny man haue eares to heare, let him heare. And whan he came from the people in to ȝ house, his disciples axed him of this symilitude. And he sayde vnto them: Are ye so then without vnderstandinge? Perceauē ye not yet, ȝ euery thinge which is without, and goeth in to the mā, can not defyle him? For it entreth not in to his hert, but in to ȝ bely, and goeth out in to the draught, that purgeth all meates.

And he sayde: The thinge that goeth out of the man, that defyleth the man. ^h For from within out of the hert of man procede euell thoughtes, aduoutrye, whordome, murthur, theft, coueteousnes, wickednes, disceate, vnclennes, a wicked eye, blasphemy, pryde, foolishnes. All these euell thynges go from within, and defyle the man.

But Iesus sayde vnto her: Let the children be fed first: It is not mete to take the childrēs bred, and to cast it vnto dogges. She answered and sayde vnto him: Yee LORDE, neuertheles the whelpes also eate vnder y table, of y childrēs crōmes. And he toke him a syde from the people, and put his fyngers in his eares, and dyd spyt, and touched his tonge, and loked vp vnto heauen, sighed, and sayde vnto him: Ephatha, that is, be opened. And immediatly his eares were opened, and the bonde of his tōge was lousd, and he spake right. ⁵ And he charged them, that they shulde tell noman.

But the more he forbad them, the more they published it, ⁊ marueyled out of measure, and sayde: * He hath done all thinges well. The deaf hath he made to heare, and the domme to speake.

The liij. Chapter.

AT the same tyme whan there was moch people there, and had nothinge to eate, Iesus called his disciples to him, and sayde vnto them: I haue compassion vpon the people, for they haue taried with me now thre dayes, ⁊ haue nothinge to eate. And yf I let them go home fro me fastynge, they shulde faynte by the waye. † For some of them were come from farre. And his disciples answered him: Where shulde we get bred here in the wyldernes, to satisfie them? And he axed thē: How many loaves haue ye? They sayde: Seuen. And he commaunded the people to syt downe vpon the grounde. And he toke the seuen loaves, and gaue thākes, and brake them, and gaue thē vnto his disciples to set them before the people. And they set thē before the people. And they had a few small fyshes, and whan he had geuen thankes, he bad set the same before the people. They ate, and were satisfied, ⁊ toke vp seūe baszkettes full of y brokē meate that was left. And they y ate, were vpō a foure thousande. And he sent thē awaye.

And forth with he wente in to a shippe with his disciples,⁴ and came in to the coastes of Dalmanutha. And the Pharises wente out, and begāne to dispute with him, and tempted him, and desyred a token of him from heauē. And he sighed in his sprete, and sayde: Why doth this generacion seke a token? Verely I saye vnto you: There shal no tokē be geūē vnto this generacion. And he left them, and wētē againe in to the shippe, and passed ouer.

⁵ And they forgat to take bred with them, and had nomore with them in the shippe but one loaf. And he cōmaunded them, and sayde: Take hede, and beware of the leuen of the Pharises, and of the leuen of Herode. And their myndes wauered here and there, and sayde amonge them selues: This is it, that we haue no bred. And Iesus vnderstode that, and sayde vnto them: Why trouble ye youre selues, that ye haue no bred? Are ye yet without vnderstondinge? Haue ye yet a blynded hert in you? Haue ye eyes, ⁊ se not? and haue ye eares, and heare not? and remēbre ye not, ⁴ that I brake fyue loaves amonge fyue thousande, how many baszkettes full of broken meate toke ye then vp? They answered: They saye, thou art Ihon the baptist: Some saye thou art Elias, some that thou art one of the prophetes. And he sayde vnto them: But whom saye ye that I am? Then answered Peter^b and sayde vnto him: Thou art very Christ. And he charged them strately, that they shulde tell no man of him. And he beganne to teach them: ^cThe sonne of man must suffre many thinges, and be cast out of the elders, & hye prestes and scribes, and be put to death, and after thre dayes ryse agayne. The ii. Chapter.

AND after sixe dayes Iesus toke vnto him Peter, Iames and Ihon,^a and brought them vp in to an hye mountayne out of the waye alone, and was trāsfīgūred before them, and his clothes were bright and very whyte as y^e snowe, so whyte as no fuller can make vpon earth. And there appeared vnto thē Elias with Moses, and they talked with Iesus. And Peter answered, and sayde vnto Iesus: Rabbi, here is good beyng for vs. Let vs make thre tabernacles: one for the, one for Moses, and one for Elias. For he knewe not what he sayde, and they were very fearfull. And there was a cloude, which ouershadowed thē. ^bAnd out of the cloude there came a voyce, and sayde: This is my deare sonne,^c heare him. And immediatly they loked aboute them, and sawe noman more then Iesus onely with them.

^dBut whan they wente downe from the mountayne, Iesus charged them, that they shulde tell no man what they had sene, tyll the sonne of man were rysen agayne from the deed.

And they kepte that sayenge by them, and axed one another: What is that rysinge agayne from the deed? And they axed him, and sayde: Why saye the scribes then, that ^eElias must first come? He answered and sayde vnto them: Elias shal come first in dede, and brynge all thinges to right agayne. The sonne of man also shal suffre many thinges, and be despyed, ^fas it is wrytten. But I saye vnto you: Elias is come, and they haue done vnto him what they wolde, acordinge as it is wrytten of him.

^gAnd he came to his disciples, and sawe moch people aboute them, and the scribes disputynge with them. And as soone as the people sawe, they were astonnyed, and ranne vnto him, and saluted him. And he axed the scribes: What dispute ye with them? And one of the people answered, and sayde: Master, I haue brought vnto the my sonne, which hath a domme sprete: and whan so euer he taketh him, he teareth him, and he fometh, and gnaszeth with the teth, and pyneth awaye, & I haue spoken to thy disciples that they shulde cast him out, and they coude not.

¶ He answered him, and sayde : O thou vnfaithfull generacion, how longe shal I be with you? How longe shal I suffre you? Brynge hi hither to me. And they brought him vnto him. And as soone as the sprete sawe him, he tare him, and fell vpon the earth, and weltred and fomed. And he axed his father: How longe is it, sens this happened vnto him? He sayde: Of a childe, and oft tymes hath he cast him in to the fyre and water, to destroye him: but yf thou canst do eny thinge, haue mercy vpon vs, and helpe vs. Iesus sayde vnto him: Yf thou couldest beleue: All thinges are possible vnto him that beleueth. And immediatly the father of the childe cried with teares, and sayde: LORDE I beleue: O helpe thou myne vnbeleue.

Now whan Iesus sawe that the people ranne to, he rebuked the foule sprete, and sayde vnto him: Thou domme and deaf sprete, I charge the, departe out of him, and entre nomore in to him from hence forth. And he cried, and rent him sore, and departed. And he was as though he had bene deed, in so moch that many sayde: he is deed. But Iesus toke him by the hande, and set him vp. And he arose. And whan he came home, his disciples axed him secretly: "Why coude not we cast him out? And he sayde: This kynde cā go out by no meanes, but by prayer and fastyng.

¶ And they departed thēce, and toke their journey thorow Galile,^a and he wolde not that eny man shulde knowe of it. But he taught his disciples, and sayde vnto them: The sonne of mā shalbe delyuered in to the handes of men, and they shal put him to death: and whan he is put to death, he shal ryse ageyne the thirde daye. But they vnderstode not that worde, and were afraied to axe him.

And he came to Capernaum. ^c And whan he was at home, he axed them: What disputed ye amonge youre selues by ^g waye? But they held their tūges: ^d "For they had disputed by the waye amonge them selues, who shulde be ^g greatest. And he sat downe, and called the twolue, and sayde vnto them: "Yf eny man wyl be the first, the same shal be the last Ihon answered him, and sayde: Master, we sawe one dryue out deuels in thy name, but he foloweth not vs, and we forbad him because he foloweth vs not. But Iesus sayde: Forbyd him not: for ^e there is no mā that doth a myracle in my name, and can soone speake euell of me. For who so euer is not agaynst vs, the same is for vs. And who so euer geueth you a cuppe of water^f to drynke in my name, because ye belonge vnto Christ, verely I saye vnto you: he shal not lose his rewarde. And ^g who so offendeth one of these litle ones that beleue in me, it were better for him, that a mylstone were hāged aboute his neck, and he cast in to the see. "Yf thy hāde offende the, cut him of. Better it is for the to entre in to life lame, thē hauyng two hondes to go in to hell in to the euerlastinge fyre, where their worme dyeth not, and their fyre goeth not out.

Yf thy fote offende the, cut him of. Better it is for the to entre in to life crepell, thē hauyng two fete to be cast in to hell in the fyre euerlastyng, where their worme dyeth not, and their fyre goeth not out. Yf thine eye offende the, cast him from the. Better it is for the to entre in to ^h kyngdome of God with one eye, then hauyng two eyes to be cast in to the fyre of hell: where their wormeⁱ dyeth not, and their fyre goeth not out. For euery mā must be salted with fyre, ^j and ^k euery offeryng shalbe seasoned with salt. ^l The salt is good: but yf ^m salt be vnsauery, wherwith all shal it be salted? And at home his disciples axed him agayne of [¶]same. And he sayde vnto thē: Who so euer putteth away his wife, ^c& marieth another, breaketh wedlocke to her warde. And yf a womā forsake hir huszbande, & be maried to another, she cōmitteth aduoutrie.

B And they brought childrē vnto him, that he might touch them. ^aBut the disciples reproued those that brought thē. Neuertheles whan Iesus sawe it, he was displeased, and sayde vnto them: Suffre the children to come vnto me, and forbyd them not, for of such is the kyngdome of God. Verely I saye vnto you: Who so euer receaueth not the kyngdome of God as a childe, he shal not entre therin. And he toke them vp in his armes, and layed his handes vpon them, and blessed them.

And whan he was gone forth vpon the waye, there came one runninge, ^cand kneled vnto him, & axed him: Good Master, what shal I do, that I maye inheret euerlastinge life? But Iesus saide vnto him: Why callest thou me good? There is no man good, ^fbut God onely. Thou knowest the commaundementes: ^eThou shalt not breake wedlocke: thou shalt not kyll: thou shalt not steale: thou shalt beare no false wytnesse: thou shalt begyle no man: Honoure thy father and mother. But he answered, and sayde vnto him: Master, all these haue I kepte fro my youth vp. And Iesus behelde him, and loued him, & sayde vnto him: Thou wantest one thinge: Go thy waye, and ^gsell all that thou hast, and geue it vnto [¶]poore: so shalt thou haue a treasure in heauen, and come & folowe me, and take the crosse vpon [¶]. And he was discomforted at the sayenge, & wente awaye sory, for he had greute possessions.

And Iesus looked aboute him, and sayde vnto his disciples: ^aO how hardly shal the ryche come in to [¶]kyngdome of God? And the disciples were astonnyed at his wordes. But Iesus answered agayne, and sayde vnto them: Deare children, how harde is it for them that trust in riches, to come in to the kyngdome of God? It is easier for a Camell to go thorow the eye of a nedle, then for a rich man to entre in to [¶]kyngdome of God. Yet were they astonnyed [¶]more, and sayde amonge thē selues: Who can thē be saued? But Iesus behelde them, and sayde: With men it is vnpossyble, but not with God: ⁱfor with God all thinges are possyble.

Then sayde Peter vnto him: Beholde, we haue forsaken all, and folowed the. ^aIesus answered & sayde: Verely I saye vnto you: There is no man that forsaketh house, or brethren, or sisters, or father or mother, or wife, or children, or londes for my sake and the gospels, that shal not receaue an hundreth folde now in this tyme, houses, and brethrē, and sisters, and mothers and children, and londes with persecucions, and in the worlde to come euerlastinge life. But many that are the first, shal be the last: and the last the first.ⁱ

They were in the waye goinge vp to Ierusalem, and Iesus wente before them. ^aAnd they were astonnyed, and folowed him, and were afraied. And Iesus toke the twelue agayne, and tolde them what shulde happē vnto him. Beholde, we go vp to Ierusalem, and the sonne of man shalbe deluyered vnto the hye prestes and scribes, and they shal condemne him to death, and deluyere him vnto the Heythē. And they shal mocke hī, and scourge him, and spyt vpon him, and put him to death, and on the thirde daye shal he ryse agayne.

^aThen wēte vnto him Iames and Ihon [¶]sonnes of Zebede, and sayde: Master, We desyre, that what soeuer we axe of the, thou wilt do it for vs. He sayde vnto thē: What desyre ye that I shal do to you? They sayde vnto him: Graunte vs, that we maye syt one Oliete, he sent two of his disciples, and sayde vnto them: Go in to the towne that lyeth before you, and as soone as ye come in, ye shal fynde a foale bounde, wher vpon no man hath syttē: lowse it, and brynge it hither. And yf eny man saye vnto you: wherfore do ye that? Then saye ye: The LORDE hath nede therof, and forth with he shal sende it hither. They wēte their waie and founde the foale tyed by y dore without at the partyenge of the waye, and lowsed it. And certayne of those y stode there, axed them: What do ye, that ye lowse the foale? But they sayde vnto thē, like as Iesus had commaunded them. And so they let them alone. And they brought the foale vnto Iesus, and layed their clothes theron, and he sat theron. But many spred their garmētes in the waye:^f some cut downe braunches frō the trees, and strowed thē in the waye. And they that wente before, and that folowed after, cried, and sayde: Hosyanna,^g blessed be he, that cometh in the name of the LORDE: blessed be the kyngdome of oure father Dauid, which cometh in the name of the LORDE. Hosyanna in the height.

And the LORDE entred in to Ierusalem, and wente in to the temple, and loked vpon all. And at euen he wente out vnto Bethany with the twolue: and on the morow^h whā they departed from Bethanye, he hūged, and sawe a fygge tre afarre of, which had leaues. Then came he nye,ⁱ (to se) yf he coude fynde eny thinge theron. And whan he came to it, he founde nothinge but leaues (for the tyme of fygges was not yet.) And Iesus answered, and sayde vnto it: Neuer mā eate frute of the for euermore. And his disciples herde it.

And they came to Ierusalem. B And they came agayne vnto Ierusalem and whan he wente in the temple,^f there came vnto him the hye prestes and scribes and the elders, and sayde vnto him: By what auctorite dost thou these thinges? and who gaue the this auctorite to do soch?

But Iesus answered and sayde vnto thē: I wil axe you a worde also, answere me, and I wyl tell you, by what auctorite I do these. The baptyme of Ihon, was it from heauen, or of men? Answere me.

And they thought in them selues: yf we saye, it was from heauen, then shal he saye: Why dyd ye not then beleue him? But yf we saye: It was of men, then feare we the people, for they all helde that Ihon was a true prophet. And they answered, and saide vnto him: We can not tell. And Iesus answered, and sayde vnto them: Nether tell I you, by what auctorite I do these thinges.

The xij. Chapter.

AND he beganne to speake vnto them by parables: A certayne mā planted a vynyarde, and made a hedge aboute it, and dygged a wyne presse, and buylded a tower, and let it out vnto huszbande men, and wente in to a straunge countre. And whan the tyme was come, he sent a seruauit to the huszbande men, that he might receaue of the huszbandmen, of the frute of the vynyarde. But they toke him, and bet him, and sent him awaye emptye. Agayne, he sent vnto them another seruauit, whom they stoned, and brake his heade, and sent him awaye shamefully dealt withall. Agayne he sent another, whom they slew, and many other: some they bett, and some they put to death.

Then had he yet one sonne onely, whom he loued, him he sent also vnto them at the last, and sayde: they wyl stonde in awe of my sonne. But the same huszbandmen sayde amonge them selues: This is the heyre, Come, let vs kyll him, so shal the inheritance be ours. And they toke him, and slewe him, and cast him out of the vynyarde. What shal now the lorde of the vynyarde do? He shal come and destroye the huszbande men, and geue the vynyarde vnto other. Haue ye not red this scripture: ^gThe same stone which the buylders refused, is become the headstone in the corner? This was the LORDES doynge, and it is maruelous in oure eyes. ^hAnd they wente aboute to take him (but they feared the people) for they perceaued, that he had spokē this parable agaynst thē. And they left him, and wente their waye.

And they sent vnto him certayne of the Pharises and Herodes ⁱofficers to take him in his wordes. And they came, and sayde vnto hī: Master, we knowe that thou art true and carest for no man. For thou regardest not the outwarde appearaunce of men, but teachest y^e waye of God truly. Is it lafull to geue tribute vnto the Emperoure, or not? Ought we to geue it, or ought we not to geue it? But he perceaued their ypcrisye, and sayde vnto them: Why tempte ye me? Brynge me a peny, that I maye se it. And they brought it him. Then sayde he: Whose ymage and superscripion is this? They sayde vnto him: The Emperours. Then answered Iesus and sayde vnto thē: ^jGeue therefore vnto the Emperoure that which is the Emperours, and vnto God that which is Gods. axed him, and sayde: Master, Moses wrote vnto vs. ^aYf eny mans brother dye, and leaue a wife, and leaue no children, his brother shal take his wife, and rayse vp sede vnto his brother. Now were there seuen brethren: the first toke a wife, and dyed, and left no sede: and the seconde toke her, and dyed, and left no sede also: the thirde in like manner.

And they all seuen toke her, and left no sede. At the last after them all, the wyfe dyed also. Now in the resurreccion whan they shal ryse agayne, whose wife shal she be of them? For seuen had her to wife.

Then answered Iesus, and sayde vnto them: Do not ye erre? because ye knowe not the scripture ner ^y power of God? Whan they shal ryse agayne from the deed, they shal nether mary ner be maried, but they are as the angels in heauen. As touchinge the deed, that they shal ryse agayne, haue ye not red in the boke of Moses, how God spake vnto him in the bush, and sayde: ^c'I am the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, ^dthe God of Iacob? Yet is not God a God of the deed, but of the luyng. Therefore ye erre greatly.

^eAnd there came vnto him one of the scribes, that had herkened vnto ^{thē} how they disputed together, and sawe that he had answered them well, and axed him: Which is the chefest comaundement of all? Iesus answered him: The chefest comaundemēt of all comaundementes is this: ^f'Heare O Israel, the LORDE oure God is one God, and thou shalt loue the LORDE thy God with all thy hert, with all thy soule, with all thy mynde, and with all thy strength. This is the chefest comaundement, and the seconde is like vnto it: ^g'Thou shalt loue thy neighbour as thy self. There is none other greater comaundement then these.

And the scribe sayde vnto him: Master, Verely thou hast sayde right: for there is but one God, ^hthere is none other without him, and to loue him with all the hert, with all the mynde, with all the soule, and with all the strength, and to loue a mans neighbour as himself, is more then brent sacrifices and all offerynges. But whā Iesus sawe that he answered discretly, he sayde vnto him: Thou art not farre from the kyngdome of God. And after this durst no man axe him eny mo questions.

And Iesus answered, and sayde, whan he taught in the temple: ⁱHow saye the scribes, ^j^kChrist is the sonne of Dauid? But Dauid himself saieth thorow the holy goost: ^l'The LORDE sayde vnto my LORDE: Syt thou on my right honde, tyll I make thine enemies thy fote stole. There Dauid calleth him his LORDE. How is he ^{thē} his sonne? And many people herde him gladly.

And he taught ^{thē}, and sayde vnto ^{thē}: ^mBeware of the scribes, that loue to go in longe garmentes, and loue to be saluted in the market, and syt gladly aboue in the synagoges and at the table: they deuoure wyddowes houses, and vnder a coloure they make longe prayers. These shal receaue the more damnacion.

ⁿAnd Iesus sat ouer agaynst the ^oGods chest, and behelde how the people put money in to the Gods chest. And many that were riche: put in moch. And there came a poore wyddowe, and put in two mytes, which make a farthinge. And he called vnto him his disciples, and sayde vnto them: Verely I saye vnto you: this poore wyddowe hath put more in ^pGods chest, then all they that haue put in: For they all haue put ^qi of their superfluyte, but she of hir pouerte hath put in all that she had, euen hir whole luyng.

Then were there some, y^e disdayned and sayde: Where to serueth this waist? This oyntment might haue bene solde for more then thre hundreth pens, & bene geue to y^e poore. And they grudged agaynst her.

But Iesus sayde: let her be in rest. Why trouble ye her? She hath done a good worke vpō me. Ye haue allwaye the poore with you, and whā so euer ye wil, ye maye do thē good: but me haue ye not allwaie. She hath done what she coulde, she is come before, to anynte my body for my buriall. Verely I saye vnto you: Where so euer this gospell shal be preached in all the worlde, there shal this also that she hath now done, be tolde for a remembrance of her.

13 And Iudas Iscarioth^a one of the twolue wente vnto the hye prestes, to betraye him vnto them. When they herde y^e, they were glad, & promysed that they wolde geue him money. And he sought, how he might cōueniently betraye him.

^b And vpon y^e first daye of swete bred, whā the Easter lambe was offered, his disciples sayde vnto him: Where wilt thou y^e we go and prepare, y^e thou mayest eate y^e Easter lābe? And he sent two of his disciples, and sayde vnto them: Go youre waye in to the cite, and there shal mete you a mā bearinge a pitcher with water, folowe him, & where so euer he goeth in, there saye ye to the good man of the house: The Master sendeth the worde: Where is the gest house, wherin I maye eate the Easter lābe, with my disciples? And he shal shewe you a greate parlour, which is paued & prepared, there make readye for vs. And y^e disciples wēte forth, & came in to y^e cite, & fōūde it as he had sayde vnto thē. And they prepared y^e Easter lambe.

C At euen he came with the twolue. And as they sat at the table & ate, Iesus sayde: Verely I saye vnto you: One of you y^e eateth with me, shal betraye me. And they were sory, & sayde vnto hī one after another: Is it I? & another (sayde): is it I? He answered & saide vnto thē: One of the twolue, euen y^e same y^e dyppeth with me in y^e platter. The sonne of man truly goeth forth, as it is wrytē of hī,

But wo vnto that mā, by whom the sonne of man is betrayed. It were better for the same man, that he had neuer bene borne.

^d And as they ate, Iesus toke the bred, gaue thanks, & brake it, and gaue it thē, & sayde: Take, eate, this is my body. And he toke the cuppe, thāked, and gaue it thē, and they all dranke therof. And he sayde vnto them: This is my bloude of the new Testament, which shalbe shed for many. Verely I saye vnto you, that from hence forth I wil not drynke of the frute of the vyne, tyll y^e daye y^e I drynke it new in y^e kyngdome of God. And whā they had sayde grace, they wēte forth vnto mount Oliuete.

And Iesus sayde vnto them: ^D 'This night shal ye all be offended in me, for it is wrytten: * I wil smyte the sheperde, & the shepe shal be scatred abroad. Neuertheles after y^e I am rysen agayne, I wil go before you in to Galilee/ But Peter sayde vnto him: And though all men shulde be offended, yet wolde not I be offended. And Iesus sayde vnto him: Verely I saye vnto y^e: To daye in this same night, before y^e cock crowe two tymes, shalt thou denye me thryse. But he saide yet more: Yee though I shulde dye with y^e, yet wil I not denie y^e. So saide they all i like maner.

And they came in to y^e felde called Gethsemane, and he saide vnto his disciples: Syt ye here, tyll I go yonder, and praye. And he toke with him Peter & Iames, & Ihon, and begāne to waxe fearefull, & to be in an agonye, & sayde vnto thē: My soule is heuy euē vnto y^e death: tary ye here and watch. And he wente forth a litle, fell vpon the grounde and prayed, that, (yf it were possyble) y^e houre might passe fro him, and sayde: Abba, my father, all thynges are possyble vnto the, take this cuppe awaye fro me: Neuertheles not what I wyl, but what thou wilt.

And he came vnto them, and founde thē slepynge, and sayde vnto Peter: ^E Symon, slepest thou? Coudest thou not watch with me one houre? Watch and praye, that ye fal not in to temptation. The sprete is wyllinge, but y^e flesh is weake. And he wēte forth agayne, and prayde, and spake the same wordes, and returned, and founde them slepyng agayne: for their eyes were heuy, & they knewe not what they shulde answere him.

And he came the thirde tyme, and sayde vnto them: Sleepe on now, and take youre rest. It is ynough, the houre is come: beholde, y sonne of man shalbe deluyered in to the handes of synners: aryse, let vs be goynge. Beholde, he is at hande, that betrayeth me.

And immediatly whyle he yet spake, came Iudas one of the twolue, and with him a greате multitude, with swerdes and staues from the hye prestes and scribes and elders. And the traytoure had geuen them a tokē, and sayde: Whom so euer I kysse, that same is he, laye handes vpon him, and lede him awaye warely. And whā he was come, he wente straight waye vnto him, and sayde vnto him: O master, master, and kyssed him. Then layed they their handes vpon him, & toke him. But one of the that stode by, drew out his swerde, and smote the hye prestes seruaunt, and cut of his eare.

¶ And Iesus answered, and sayde vnto the: Ye are come forth as it were to a murthurer with swerdes and with staues to take me. I was daylie with you in the temple, and taught, and ye toke me not. * But this is done, that the scripture maye be fulfilled. And all the disciples forsoke him, and fed. And there folowed him a yonge mā, which was clothed in lynnyn vpon the bare skynne, and the yonge mē toke holde of him. But he let the lynnyn go, and fled naked from them.

And they led Iesus vnto the hye prest, where all y hye prestes, and elders and scribes were come together. As for Peter, he folowed him afarre of in to the hye prestes palace. And he was there, and sat with the seruauntes, and warmed him.

But the hye prestes and the whole counceill sought wytnesse agaynst Iesus, y they might brynge him to death, and they founde none. Many gaue false wytnesse agaynst him, but their wytnesses agreed not together. And some stode vp, and gaue false wytnes agaynst him, and sayde: We herde him saye: I wil breake downe this temple that is made with hōdes, and in thre dayes buylde another not made with handes. But their wytnesse agreed not together.

¶ And the hye prest stode vp amonge them, and axed Iesus, and sayde: Answerest thou

nothinge vnto it, that these testifie agaynst the? But he helde his tunge, and answered nothinge. The hye prest axed him agayne, and sayde vnto him: Art thou Christ the sonne of the blessed? Iesus sayde: I am. And ye shal se the sonne of man syt at the right hande of power, and come in the cloudes of heauē. Then the hye prest rent his clothes, & sayde: What nede we eny mo wytnesses? Ye haue herde the blasphemy. What thynke ye? They all cōdemned him, that he was giltye of death. Then beganne there some to spyt vpō him, and to couer his face, and to smyte him with fistes, and to saye vnto him Prophecie vnto vs. And the seruauntes smote him on the face.

And Peter was beneth in y palace. The came one of the wenches of the hye prest: And whā she sawe Peter warmynge him, she lokd vpō hi, and sayde: And thou wast with Iesus of Nazareth also. But he denyed, & sayde: I knowe him not, nether can I tell what thou sayest. And he wente out in to the fore courte, and the cock crew. And a damsell sawe him, and beganne agayne to saye vnto them that stode by: This is one of them. And he denyed it agayne. And after a litle whyle they y stode by, sayde agayne vnto him: Of a trueth thou art one of them for thou art a Galilean, and thy speach soundeth euen alike. But he begāne to curse and sweare: I knowe not the man, that ye speake of. And the cock crew agayne. thy charge. Neuertheles Iesus answered no more, in so moch ȝ Pylate marueyled.

^aAt that feast of Easter he was wonte to delyuer vnto them a presoner, whom so euer they wolde desyre. There was i preson with the sedicious, one called Barrabas, which in the vproure had committed murthur. And the people wente vp, and prayed him, that he wolde do, as he was wonte. Pylate answered them: wyl ye that I geue lowse vnto you the kyng of the Iewes? For he knew, that ȝ hye prestes had delyuered him of envye. But the hye prestes moured ȝ people,^b that he shulde rather geue Barrabas lowse vnto them.

³³ Pylate answered agayne, and sayde vnto them: What wil ye the that I do vnto him, whom ye accuse to be kyng of the Iewes? They cried agayne: Crucifie hi. Pylate sayde vnto the: What euell hath he done? But they cried yet moch more: Crucifie him. So Pylate thought to satisfie the people, and gaue Barrabas lowse vnto them, and delyuered the Iesus, to be scourged ȝ crucified.

^dAnd the soudyers led him in to the comō hall, and called the whole multitude together, and clothed him with purple, and plated a crowne of thorne, and crowned him withall, and beganne to salute him: Hayle kyng of the Iewes. And smote him vpon the heade with a rede, and spytted vpō him, and fell vpō the kne, ȝ worshipped him. ^eAnd whā they had mocked him, they toke ȝ purple of him, and put his clothes vpon him, ȝ led him out, that they might crucifye him.

^c And they compellyd one that passed by, called Symon of Cyren (which came from the felde,^f and was the father of Alexander and Rufus) to beare his crosse. And they brought him to the place Golgatha, which is by interpretacion: a place of deed mens skulles. And they gaue him wyne myxted with myrre, to drynke, ȝ he toke it not. And whan they had crucified him, they parted his garmētes,^g ȝ cast lottes therfore, what euery one shulde take. And it was aboute ȝ thirde houre, ȝ they crucified him. And the tytyle of his cause was wryttē ouer aboute him (namely:) The kyng of the Iewes. And they crucified him with two murthurers, one at ȝ right hande, and one at the left. Then was the

ⁱAnd they that wēte by, reuyled him, and wagged their heades, and sayde: Fye vpon the, how goodly breakest thou downe ȝ tēple, ȝ buyldest it agayne in thre dayes? Helpe thy self now, ȝ come downe fro the crosse. The hye prestes also in like maner laughed him to scorne amonge the the selues, with the scribes, ȝ sayde: He hath helped other, himself can he not helpe. Yf he be Christ and ȝ kyng of Israel, let him come downe now fro the crosse, ȝ we maye se it, ȝ beleue. And they ȝ were crucified with hi, checked hi also.

And whā it was aboute the sixte houre, there was a darcknesse ouer the whole lōde,^j tyll aboute ȝ nyenth houre. And aboute ȝ nyenth houre Iesus cried loude, and sayde: Eli, Eli, lamma asabthani? which is interpreted: My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?^k And some that stode by, whan they herde ȝ , they sayde: Beholde, he calleth Elias. ^lThen rāne there one, ȝ fylled a spōge with vynerge, ȝ stickte it vpō a rede, ȝ gaue hi to drynke, ȝ sayde: Holde styll, let se, whether Elias wil come, and take him downe. But Iesus cried loude, and gaue vp the goost. And the vale of the tēple rent in two peces, from aboute tyll beneth.

The captayne that stode thereby ouer agaynst him, ^mwhan he sawe ȝ he gaue vp the goost with soch a crye, he sayde: Verely this man was Gods sonne.

³⁴ And there were wemen there also, which behelde this afare of,ⁿ amōge whō was Mary Magdalene, ȝ Mary of Iames ȝ litle, ȝ the mother of Ioses, ȝ Salome, which had folowed him whā he was in Galile, and mynystred vnto hi: ȝ many other ȝ wēte vp with hi to Ierusalem. And at euen^o (for so moch as it was the daye of preparinge, which is the fore Sabbath) there came one Ioseph of Arimathia, a worshipfull Senatoure (which loked also for the kyngdome of God) ȝ wēte in boldly vnto Pilate, ȝ axed ȝ body of Iesus. FOR so moch as many haue taken in hande, to set forth þy wordes of the actes that are come to passe amonge vs, like as they deluyered thē vnto vs, which from the begynnynge sawe them their selues, and were mynisters of the worde, I thought it good (after that I had diligently searched out all from the begynnynge) to wryte the same orderly vnto the (good Theophilus) that thou mightest knowe the certēte of þy wordes, wherof thou art informed.

The first Chapter.

IN the tyme of Herode kynge of Iewry, there was a prest named Zachary of the *course of Abia: and his wife of the daughters of Aaron, & hir name Elizabeth. They were both righteous before God, and walked in all the commaundementes and statutes of the LORDE vnreproueably. And they had no childe, for Elizabeth was baren, and they were both well stricken in age.

And it came to passe as he executed the prestes office before God whan his course came (acordinge to the custome of the prest-hode) it fell to his lott to burne incense. And thē he wente in to the temple of the LORDE, and the whole multitude of the people was without in prayer, whyle the incense was aburnynge. And the angell of the LORDE appeared vnto him, and stode on the right syde of the altare of incense. And whan Zachary sawe him, he was abaszhed, & there came a feare vpon him.

But the angell sayde vnto him: Feare not Zachary, for thy prayer is herde. And thy wife Elizabeth shal beare the a sonne, whose name thou shalt call Ihon, & thou shalt haue ioye and gladnesse: and many shal reioyce at his byrth, for he shal be greate before the LORDE. Wyne and stronge drynke shal he not drynke. And he shalbe fylled with the holy goost, euen in his mothers wombe. And many of the children of Israel shal he turne vnto the LORDE their God. And he shal go before him in the sprete and power of †Elias, to turne the hertes of þy fathers vnto the children, and the vnfaithfull vnto the wyszdome of the righteous, to make the people ready for the LORDE.

And Zachary sayde vnto the Angel: ‡
*Wherby shal I knowe this? For I am olde, and my wife well stricken in age. The angell answered, and sayde vnto him: I am Gabriell that stonde before God, and am sent to speake vnto the, and to shewe the these glad tydings. And beholde, thou shalt be domme, and not able to speake, vn tyll the daye that this come to passe, because thou hast § not beleued my wordes, which shalbe fulfilled in their season.

And the people wayted for Zachary, and marueyled, that he taried so longe in the tēple. And whā he wēte out, he coude not speake vnto them. And they perceaued, that he had sene a vision in the tēple. And he beckened vnto them, and remayned speechlesse.

And it fortunied whā the tyme of his office was out, he wente home in to his house. And after those dayes Elizabeth his wife conceaued, and hyd hir self fyue monethes, & sayde: Thus hath þy LORDE done vnto me in þy dayes, wherin he hath lokēd vpō me, to take awaye fro me my rebuke amōge men.

^a And in the sixte moneth was the angell Gabriel sent from God in to a cite of Galile, called Nazareth, vnto a virgin that was spoused vnto a man, whose name was Ioseph, of the house of Dauid, and the virgins name was Mary. And the angell came in vnto her, and sayde: Hayle thou full of grace, the LORDE is with the: blessed art thou amonge women.

C Whā she sawe him, she was abashez at his sayenge, and thought: What maner of salutation is this? And the angell sayde vnto her: ^oFeare not Mary, for thou hast foude grace with God. Beholde, thou shalt cōceau in thy wōbe, ^q beare a sonne* ^q shalt call his name Iesus: he shalbe greate, ^q shalbe called ^q sonne of the Hyest. shal all generacions call me blessed.

For he that is Mightie, hath done greater things vnto me, and holy is his name.

And his mercy endureth thorow out all generacions, vpon them that feare him.

He sheweth strength with his arme, and scatreth them that are proude in the ymagination of their hert.

‘He putteth downe the mightie from the seate, and exalteth them of lowe degree.

He fylleth the hongrie with good thinges, and letteth the riche go emptye.

He remembreth mercy, and helpeth vp his seruaunt Israel.

Euen as he promysed vnto oure fathers,
|| Abraham and to his sede for euer.

And Mary abode with her aboute thre monethes, and then returned home agayne.

And Elizabethes tyme was come, that she shulde be delyuered, ⁊ she brought forth a sonne. And hir neighbours and kynsfolkes herde, ⁊ the LORDE had shewed greate mercy vpo her, ⁊ they reioysed with her. And it fortuneyse vpon the eight daye, they came to circumcyse ⁊ childe, and called him Zachary after his father: And his mother answered, and sayde: No, but he shalbe called Ihon. And they sayde vnto her: There is none in thy kynne, ⁊ is so called. And they made signes vnto his father, how he wolde haue him called. And he axed for wrytinge tables, wrote ⁊ sayde: His name is Ihon. And they marueyled all. And immediatly was his mouth and his tōge opened, and he spake, ⁊ prayseed God. And there came a feare vpon all their neighbours. And all this acte was noysed abrode thorow out all the hill cowntre of Iewry: And all they ⁊ herde therof, toke it to hert, and sayde: What maner of man will this childe be? For the hande of the LORDE was with him.

And Zachary his father was fylled with the holy goost, and prophecied, and sayde :

Blessed be y^e LORDE God of Israel, for he hath vysited and redeemed his people.

† That we delyuered out of ⁊ hāde of oure enemies, might serue him without feare all the dayes of oure life, in soch holynes and righteousnes as is accepte before him.

And thou childe shalt be called a prophet of the Hyst: for thou shalt go before ⁊ LORDE, to prepare his wayes.

And to geue knowledge of saluacion vnto his people, for the remyssion of their synnes.

Thorow the tender mercy of oure God, wherby the daye sprynge from an hye hath vysited vs.

That he might geue light vnto them ⁊ syt in darcknesse and shadowe of death, and to gyde oure fete in to the waye of peace.

And the childe grew, and waxed stronge in sprete, and was in the wyldernes, tyll the tyme that he shulde shewe him self vnto the people of Israel.

The ij. Chapter.

¶ IT fortunad at the same tyme, that there wēte out a cōmaundement frō Augustus the Emperoure, that the whole worlde shulde be taxed. And this taxynge was the first that was executed, whan Syrenius was leftenaunt in Siria. And they wente all, euery one to his owne cite to be taxed. Then Ioseph gat him vp also frō Galile, out of the cite of Nazareth, in to Iewry, to ⁊ cite of Dauid,§ which is called Bethleem, (because he was of ⁊ house and lynage of Dauid) that he might be taxed with Mary his spoused wife, which was with childe.

¶ And it fortunad whyle they were there, ⁊ tyme was come, that she shulde be delyuered. And she brought forth hir first begottē sonne, ⁊ wrapped him in swadlinge clothes, and layed him in a maunger: for they had els no rowme in the ynnē.

¶ And there were in ⁊ same region shep-

herdes in the felde by the foldes, and watchinge their flocke by night. And beholde, ⁊ angell of the LORDE stode by thē, and ⁊ brightnes of the LORDE shone rounde aboute them, and they were sore afrayed. And the angell sayde vnto them: Be not afrayed. Beholde, I brynge you tydiges of greate ioye, which shall happen vnto all people: for vnto you this daye is borne ⁊ Sauoure, euē Christ ⁊ LORDE, in the cite of Dauid. And take this for a token: Ye shal fynde the babe swaddled, and layed in a maunger. And straight waye there was by the angell a multitude of heauenly hoostes, which prayed God, and sayde: Glory be vnto God an hye, ⁊ peace vpon earth, and vnto men a good wyll.

¶ And it fortunad whā the angels were gone from thē in to heauē, the shepherdes sayde one to another: let vs go now euen vnto Bethleem, and se this thinge that is happened, which ⁊ LORDE hath shewed vnto vs. And they came with haist, ⁊ founde both Mary and Ioseph, ⁊ the babe layed in ⁊ maunger. And whan they had sene it, they published abrode the sayenge, ⁊ was tolde thē of this childe. And all they that herde it, wondered at the wordes, which the shepherdes had tolde them. But Mary kepte all these sayenges, and pondred them in hir hert. And the shepherdes returned, prayying and lauding God, for all that they had herde and sene, euen as it was tolde them.

¶ And whan eight dayes were ended, that the childe shulde be circumcysed, his name was called Iesus,|| which was named of ⁊ angell, before he was conceaued in his mothers wombe.

¶ And whā the dayes of their purificacion ¶ after the lawe of Moses, were come, they brought him to Ierusalē, that they might present him vnto the LORDE (As it is wrytten in the lawe of the LORDE:¶ Euery māchilde that first openeth the Matrix, shalbe called holy vnto ⁊ LORDE) and that they might geue the offerynge, as it is wrytē in the lawe of the LORDE (namely) a payre of turtle doues, or two yonge pigeons.

¶ And beholde, there was a man (at Ierusalē) whose name was Symeon, and the same mā was iust, and feared God, and lōged for the consolacion of Israel, and the holy goost was

¶ And when the elders brought the childe Iesus in to the temple, to do for him after ꝑ custome of the * lawe, then toke he him vp in his armes, and prayed God, and sayde:

LORDE, now lestest thou thy seruaut departe in peace, accordinge to thy promesse.

For myne eyes haue sene thy Sauoure, whō thou hast prepared before all people.

† A light for the lightenyng of the Heythē, ꝑ for the prayse of thy people of Israel.

And his father and mother marueyled at the thinges that were spokē of him. And Symeon blessed them, and sayde vnto Mary his mother: Beholde, this (childe) shalbe set to a fall, and to an vprynginge agayne of many in Israel, and for a token, which shalbe spokē agaynst. And the swerde shal pearse thy soule, that the thoughtes of many hertes maye be opened.

¶ And there was a prophetisse, one Anna, the daughter of Phanuel of the trybe of Aser, which was of a greate age, and had lyued seuen yeaeres with hir huszbāde from hir virginite, ꝑ had now bene a wedowe aboute foure score ꝑ foure yeaeres, which came neuer frō the tēple, seruyngē God with fastyngē and prayenge, daye and night: the same came forth also the same houre, and prayed the LORDE, and spake of him vnto all that loked for the redempcion at Ierusalem.

And when they had performed all accordinge to the lawe of the LORDE, they returned i to Galile, to their owne cite Nazareth. And the childe grewe, and waxed stronge in sprete, full of wysdome, ꝑ the grace of God was with him.

And his elders wente to Ierusalem every yeaere at the feast of Easter. And when he was twolue yeaere olde, they wente vp to Ierusalem, after the custome of the feast. And when they had fulfilled the dayes, and were gone home agayne, the childe Iesus abode styll at Ierusalem. And his elders knewe it not, but thought he had bene in the company, and they came a dayes iourney, and sought hi amōge their kynszfolkes ꝑ acquātaunce. And whā they founde him not, they wētē agayne to Ierusalē, and sought him.

And it fortunēd after thre dayes, ꝑ they founde him in the temple, syttyngē amonge the teachers, hearyngē thē, and opposyngē them. † And all they that herde him, wōdred at his vnderstandyngē and answers. And when they sawe him, they were astonnyed. And his mother sayde vnto him: My sonne, why hast thou done this vnto vs? Beholde, thy father and I haue sought the sorowynge. And he sayde vnto them: ‡ What is it, that ye haue sought me? Wyst ye not, ꝑ I must go aboute my fathers busynes? And they ¶ vnderstode not the sayenge ꝑ he spake vnto them. And he wente downe with thē, and came to Nazareth, and was obediēt vnto them. And his mother kepte all these wordes in hir hert. And Iesus increased in wysdome, age and fauoure with God and men.

The iij. Chapter.

IN the fiftenth yeaere of the raigne of Tiberius the Emperoure, whā Pontius Pilate was letenaūt in Iewry ¶ and Herode one of the foure princes in Galile, and his brother Philippe one of the foure prynces in Iturea, ꝑ in the coastes of Traconites, and Lysanias one of the foure princes of Abilene, when Hannas and Caiphas were hye prestes, thē came ꝑ worde of God vnto Ihon the sonne of Zachary in the wyldernes. The iiii. Chapter.

¶ IESUS full of the holy goost, came agayne from Iordane,^a and was led of ʒ sprete in to wyldernes, ⁊ fourty dayes lōge was he tēpted of ʒ deuell. *And in those dayes ate he nothinge. And when they were ended, he hongred afterwarde. And the deuell sayde vnto him: Yf thou be ʒ sonne of God, cōmaunde this stone, ʒ it be bred. And Iesus answered ⁊ sayde vnto hī: It is wrytten: †Man shal not lyue by bred onely, but by euery worde of God. And ʒ deuell toke him vp in to an hye moūtayne, and shewed him all the kyngdomes of ʒ whole worlde in ʒ twinkeling of an eye, ⁊ sayde vnto him: All this power wil I geue vnto the, and the glory therof, for it is geuē ouer vnto me, and I geue it, to whom I wil. Yf thou now wilt worshippe me, they shal all be thine. Iesus answered him, and sayde: Auoyde fro me thou Satan. It is wrytten: †Thou shalt worshippe the LORDE thy God, and him onely shalt thou serue.

¶ And he caried him to Ierusalem, and set him vpon a pynnacl of the temple, and sayde vnto him: Yf thou be ʒ sonne of God, cast thy self downe from hence. For it is wryttē: He shal geue his angels charge ouer the, to kepe the,^a and with their handes they shal holde the vp, that thou dashe not thy fote agaynst a stone. And Iesus answered, and sayde vnto him: It is sayde: †Thou shalt not tempte the LORDE thy God. And whan ʒ deuell had ended all the temptacions, he departed from him for a season.

And †Iesus came agayne in the power of the sprete in to Galile. And the fame of him was noysed thorow out all ʒ region rounde aboute. And he taught in their synagoges, and was commended of euery man.

And he came vnto Nazareth where he was noursed,^a and as his custome was, he wēt in to the synagoge vpon ʒ Sabbath, and stode vp for to rede. Then was there deluyered him the †boke of ʒ prophet Esay. And whan he had turned ouer the boke, he founde the place where it is wrytten: The sprete of the LORDE is with me,^a because he hath anoynted me: to preach the Gospell vnto ʒ poore hath he sent me: to heale the broken harted: to preach deluyeraunce to the captiue, and sight to the blynde: and frely to set at liberty them that are brused: and to preach the acceptable yeaue of the LORDE.

And whan he had closed the boke, he gaue it agayne to ʒ mynister, ⁊ sat him downe. And the eyes of all that were in the synagoge, were fastened on him. And he begāne to saye vnto them: This daye is this scripture fulfilled in youre eares. §And they all gaue him wytnesse, and wōdred at the gracious wordes, which proceded out of his mouth, and they saide: Is not this Iosephs sonne?^a

And he sayde vnto them: Doutles ye wyl saye vnto me this prouerbe: Phisician, heale thyself. For how greate thinges haue we herde done at Capernaū? Do the same here also in thine owne cowntre. But he saide: Verely I saye vnto you: There is no prophet accepted in his owne cowntre.^a Neuertheles of a trueth I saye vnto you: ¶ There were many wedowes in Israel in ʒ tyme of Elias, whā the heauē was shut thre yeaues and sixe monethes, and whan there was a greate derth in all the lande: ⁊ to none of thē was Elias sent, but onely vnto Sarepta of the Sydonians to a wedowe. ¶ And many lepers were there in Israel in the tyme of Eliseus ʒ prophet, and none of thē was clensed, saue onely Naaman of Syria.

The v. Chapter.

IT came to passe, \dot{y} the people /preessed^a vpon him to heare the worde of God, and he stode by the lake of Genazereth, and sawe two shippes stōde by \dot{y} lake syde, but \dot{y} fishers were gone out of thē, and had wasshed their nettes. Then wente he in to one of the shippes, which was Symons, and prayed him, \dot{y} he wolde thrust out a litle frō the londe. And he sat him downe, and taught the people out of \dot{y} shippe.

And whan he had left of talkynge, he sayde vnto Symon: Launch out in to the depe τ let slyppe youre nettes, to make a draught. And Symon answered and sayde vnto him: Master, we haue laboured all \dot{y} night, and taken nothinge. But vpō thy worde, I wil lowse forth the nett. And whā they had so done, they toke a greate multitude of fiszhes, τ their net brake. And they made synes to their felowes which were in \dot{y} other shippe, \dot{y} they shulde come, τ helpe thē. And they came, τ fylled both the shippes full, so \dot{y} they soncke. Whan Symon Peter sawe \dot{y} , he fell^b downe at Iesus knees, τ sayde: LORDE, go fro me, for I am a synfull man: For he was astonnyed and all that were with him, at this draught of fishes which they toke, and so were Iames and Ihon also the sonnes of Zebede, which were Symons companyons. And Iesus sayde vnto Symō: Feare not, for frō hence forth thou shalt take men. And they brought the ^eshippes to londe, and left all, and folowed him.

^a And it fortunēd as he was in a cite, be-^cholde, there was a man full of leprosy. Whā he sawe Iesus, he fell vpō his face, τ besought him, and sayde: LORDE, yf thou wilt, thou canst make me cleane. And he stretched out his hāde, and touched him, and sayde: I wil, be thou cleane. And immediatly the leprosy departed from him. And he charged him, \dot{y} he shulde tell no mā, but go thy waye (sayde he) and shewe thy self vnto \dot{y} prest, and offere for thy clensynge,^d as Moses cōmaunded, for a witness vnto thē. But \dot{y} fame of hī wēte out farther abrode, τ there came moch people together, to heare him, τ to be healed by hī frō their sicknesses. And he departed in to the wyldernesses, ⁊ gaue him self to prayer.

And it fortunēd vpō a daye, ⁊ he taught, and there sat ⁊ Pharises and scribes, which were come out of all the townes of Galile, and Iewry, and frō Ierusalē, and the power of the LORDE wēte frō him, ⁊ healed euery man. And beholde, certayne men brought vpon a bed, a man ⁊ had ⁊ palsey, and they sought how they might brynge him in, and laye him before him. And whan they coude not fynde by what waye they might bringe him in (for ⁊ people) they clymmed vp to ⁊ toppē of the house, ⁊ let him downe thorow the tylinge with the bed, amōge thē before Iesus. And whan he sawe their faith, he sayde vnto hi: Man, thy synnes are forgeuē ⁊. And the scribes and pharyses begāne to thynke, ⁊ sayde: What is he this, ⁊ speaketh blasphemy. *Who cā forgeue synnes, but onely God?

Neuertheles whā Iesus perceaued their thoughtes, he answered, and sayde vnto thē: What thynke ye in your hertes? Whether is easier to saye: Thy synnes are forgeuē ⁊, Or to saye: Aryse, and walke? But that ye maye knowe, that the sonne of mā hath power to forgeue synnes vpon earth, he sayde vnto ⁊ sicke of the palsey: I saye vnto ⁊: Aryse, take vp thy bed, and go home. And immediately he rose vp before thē, ⁊ toke vp the bed ⁊ he had lyen vpō, and wēte home, and praysed God. And they were all astonnyed, and gaue God ⁊ prayse, and were fylled with feare, and sayde: We haue sene maruelous thynges to daye.

And afterwarde he wēte out, and sawe a publican named Leui, syttinge at ⁊ reccate of custome, ⁊ he sayde vnto him: Followe me. And he left all, rose vp, ⁊ folowed him. And Leui made hi a greates feast i his house. And many publicans ⁊ other sat with hi at ⁊ table. And the scribes and Pharyses murmured agaynst his disciples, ⁊ saide: Wherefore do ye eate ⁊ drynke with publicā ⁊ synners? And Iesus answered, ⁊ sayde vnto thē: The whole nede not ⁊ phisician, but they ⁊ are sicke. I am not come to call ⁊ righteous, but sinners to repentāce.

But they sayde vnto him: Wherefore fast

⁊ disciples of Ihō so of, ⁊ praye so moch, ⁊ the disciples of the Pharises likewise, but thy disciples eate and drynke? And he sayde vnto them: Can ye make the weddyngē childrē fast, so lōge as the brydegrome is with thē? But the tyme wil come that the brydegrome shalbe takē frō thē, then shal they fast.

And he sayde vnto them a symilitude: No man putteth a pece of new cloth in to an olde garment: for els he renteth the new, and the pece of the new agreeth not with the olde. And no man putteth new wyne in to olde vessels, for els ⁊ new wyne barsteth the vessels, and runneth out it self, and the vessels perishe. But new wyne must be put in to new vessels, and so are they both preserued. And there is no man that drynketh the olde, and wolde straight waye haue the new, for he sayeth: the olde is pleasaunter.

The vi. Chapter.

AND it fortunēd vpon an after pryncipall Sabbath, that he wente thorow the corne felde, ⁊ his disciples plucked the eares of corne, and ate, and rubbed thē with their hādes. But certayne of the Pharises sayde vnto them: Wherefore do ye that, which is not lafull to do vpon the Sabbath? And Iesus answered, and sayde vnto thē: Haue ye not red what Dauid dyd, whā he was hongrie, and they that were with him, how he wente in to the house of God, and toke the shewbread, and ate, and gaue also vnto them that were with him, which was lafull for no man to eate, but for the prestes onely? And he sayde vnto them: The sonne of man is LORDE euen ouer the Sabbath.

It came to passe vpō another Sabbath, that he wēte in to the synagoge, and taught: and there was a man, whose right hande was wythred. But ⁊ scribes and Pharises marked him, whether he wolde heale vpon the Sabbath, that they might fynde an occasion agaynst him. Neuertheles he perceaued their thoughtes, and sayde vnto the mā with the wythred hande: Aryse, and steppē forth here. And he arose, and stepped forth. Then sayde Iesus vnto thē: I wil axe you a question: What is it lafull to do vpō the Sabbath? good, or euell? to saue life, or to destroie it? And he behelde the all rounde aboute, and sayde vnto the mā: Stretch out thine hande. And he dyd so. Then was his hande restored him to right, euen as whole as the other. But they were fylled full of madnes, and commoned together, what they wolde do to him.

⁂ And it fortuneth at the same tyme, that he wente out in to a mountayne to praye, and continued all night in prayer to God.* And whā it was daye, he called his disciples, and chose twolue of them, whom he called also apostles. Symon, whom he named Peter, and Andrew his brother, Iames and Ihon, Phylippe and Bartylmew, Mathew and Thomas, Iames the sonne of Alpheus, Symon called Zelotes, Iudas the sonne of Iames, and Iudas Iscarioth, which was the traytoure.

⁂ And he wente downe with them, and stode vpon a playne in the felde, and the company of his disciples, and a greate multitude of people, from all Iewry, and Ierusalē, and from Tyre and Sydon by the see coast, which were come to heare him, and to be healed of their diseases, and they that were vexed with foule spretes, were healed. And all the people sought to touch him, for there wente vertue frō him, and healed the all.

Ⓒ And he lift vp his eyes vpō his disciples, and sayde: 'Blessed are ye poore, for yours is the kyngdome of God. Blessed are ye that hunger here, for ye shalbe satisfied. Blessed are ye ⁊ wepe here, for ye shal laugh. Blessed are ye, whan men hate you, and put you out of their cōpanyes, and reuyle you, and cast out youre name as an euell thinge, for the sonne of mans sake. Reioyse ye then, and be glad: for beholde, youre rewarde is greate in heauen. ⁂ Euen thus dyd their fathers vnto the prophetes also.

But wo vnto you riche, for ye haue youre cōsolacion allready. Wo vnto you that are full, for ye shal hunger. Wo vnto you that laugh here, for ye shal wepe and wayle. Wo vnto you whan euery man prayseth you, Euen so dyd their fathers vnto the false prophetes also.

But I saye vnto you that heare: Loue youre enemies: do good vnto them that hate you: blesse them that curse you: praye for them that wrongfully trouble you. And who so snyteth the on the one cheke, offre him ⁊ other also. And who so taketh awaye thy cloake, forbyd him not thy cote also. Who so euer axeth of the, geue him: and who so taketh awaye thyne, axe it not agayne. ⁂ And as ye wolde that men shulde do vnto you, ⁂ euen so do ye vnto them likewise.

And yf ye loue them that loue you, what thāke haue ye therfore? For synners also loue their louers. And yf ye do good for youre good doers, what thanke haue ye therfore? For synners also do euen the same. And yf ye lende vnto them, of whō ye hope to receaue, what thāke haue ye ther fore? For synners also lende vnto synners, that they maye receaue as moch agayne. But rather loue ye youre enemies, do good, and lende, lōkyng for nothinge therof agayne: so shal youre rewarde be greate, and ye shalbe the children of the Hiest, for he is kynde, euen to the vnthankfull and to the euell.

Be ye therfore mercifull,⁷ as youre father also is mercifull. Iudge not, and ye shal not be iudged. Condēpne not, and ye shal not be condemned. Forgeue, and ye shal be forgeuen. ⁂ Geue, and to you shalbe geuē. A good measure, pressed downe, shaken together, ⁊ rūnyng euer, shal mē geue in to youre bosome. ⁂ For with what measure ye meete, with the same shal it be measured to you agayne.

And he sayde a symilitude vnto the: ⁂ Can the blynde shewe the waye to ⁊ blynde? Do they not both the fall in to the dyche? The disciple is not aboue his master.ⁱ But whoso-euer is perfecte, ⁊ same shalbe as his master. But why seist thou a moote ī thy brothers eye, and considrest not the beame, that is in thine awne eye? The vii. Chapter.

ⁱ WHAN he had ended his talkynge vnto the people,ⁱ he wente in to Capernaum: and a captaines seruauit laye deed sicke, whom he loued. Whā he herde of Iesus, he sent the elders of the Iewes vnto him, and prayed him, that he wolde come, and make his seruauit whole. But whā they came to Iesus, they besought him instantly, ⁊ sayde: He is worthy ƿ̃ thou shuldest shewe this for him, for he loueth oure people, ⁊ hath buylded vs ƿ̃ synagoge. And Iesus wente with them.

Now when they were not farre from ƿ̃ house, ƿ̃ captaine sent frēdes vnto hī, saiēge vnto him: Oh LORDE, trouble not thy self, I am not worthy, ƿ̃ thou shuldest enter vnder my rofe, and therefore I thought not my self worthy to come to ƿ̃: but speake ƿ̃ worde, ⁊ my seruauit shalbe whole. For I my self also am a mā, subiecte to the hygher auctorite, ⁊ haue soudryers vnder me. And I saye vnto one: Go, ⁊ he goeth. And to another: Come, and he cometh. And to my seruauit: Do this, ⁊ he doeth it. When Iesus herde ƿ̃, he marueyled at hī, ⁊ turned him aboute, ⁊ sayde vnto ƿ̃ people ƿ̃ folowed hī: I saye vnto you: So greate faith haue I not founde, no not in Israel. And whā they that were sent, came home agayne, they founde the seruauit that was sicke, whole.

And it fortuneth afterwarde, that he wēte in to a cite called Naim, and many of his disciples wente with him, and moch people. When he came nye to the gate of the cite, beholde, there was caried out one deed, which was the onely sonne of his mother, and she was a wyddowe, and moch people of the cite wente with her. And whan the LORDE sawe her, he had cōpassion on her, and sayde vnto her: Wepe not. And he came nye, and touched the Coffyn. And they that bare him, stode styll. And he sayde: Yonge man, I saye vnto the: Aryse. And ⁊ the deed sat vp, and beganne to speake. And he delyuered him vnto his mother. And there came a feare on them all, and they prayed God, and sayde: † A greate prophet is rysen amonge vs, and God hath vysited his people. And this fame of him was noysed in all Iewry, and in all ƿ̃ regions that laye rounde aboute.

And the disciples of Ihō shewed him of all these thinges. And Ihon called vnto him two of his disciples, and sent thē vnto Iesus sayenge: Art thou he that shal come, or shal we loke for another? When the men came to him, they sayde: Ihon ƿ̃ baptist hath sent vs vnto the, sayenge: Art thou he that shal come, or shal we loke for another?

At the same houre healed he many from sicknesses ⁊ plages, and frō euell spretes, and vnto many that were blynde, he gaue sight. And Iesus answered, ⁊ sayde vnto thē: Go youre waye, shewe Ihon, what ye haue sene ⁊ herde. This is he, of whom it is wrytten: "Beholde, I sende my messaunger before thy face, which shal prepare thy waye before the. For I saye vnto you: Amonge thē ŷ are borne of wemē, there is no greater prophet thē Ihon the baptist. Notwith standyng he that is lesse in the kyngdome of God, is greater then he.

And all the people that herde him, and ŷ publicans, iustified God, and were baptysed with the baptyme of Ihon. But the Pharises and scribes despyed ŷ counsell of God against thē selues, ⁊ were not baptised of hi.

But the LORDE saide: Where vnto shal I liken the men of this generacion? And whom are they like? They are like vnto childrē which syt in the market, and crye one to another, and saye: We haue pyed vnto you, and ye haue not daunted: we haue mourned vnto you, ⁊ ye haue not wepte. For Ihon ŷ baptist came, and *ate no bred, and drāke no wyne, and ye saye: he hath ŷ deuell. The sonne of man is come, eateth and drynkeh, ⁊ ye saye: This man is a glutton and a wyne bebbber, a frende of publicans and synners. And wysdome is iustified of all hir children.

And one of the Pharises desyred him, ŷ he wolde eate with him.^c And he wente in to the Pharises house, and sat him downe at ŷ table. † And beholde, there was in the cite a womā, which was a synner. And he turned him to the woman, and sayde vnto Symō: Seist thou this womā? I am come in to thine house, thou hast geuē me no water vnto my fete, but she hath watred my fete with teares, and dryed thē with the hayres of hir heade: Thou hast geuē me no kysse, but she (sens the tyme she came in) hath not ceased to kysse my fete: Thou hast not anoynted my heade with oyle, but she hath anoynted my heade with oyntment. Therefore I saye vnto the: Many synnes are forgeuen her, for she hath loued moch. But vnto whom lesse is forgeuen, the same loueth the lesse.

And he sayde vnto her: Thy synnes are forgeuen the. Then they that sat at the table with him, beganne to saye within themselves: What is he this, that forgeueth synnes also? But he sayde vnto the woman: Thy faith hath sauēd the, Go thy waye in peace.

This is the parable: The sede is the worde of God: As for those that are by ŷ waye syde, they are they that heare it, afterwarde commeth the deuell, and taketh awaye the worde out of their hertes, that they shulde not beleue, and be sauēd. And Herode sayde: Ihō haue I beheaded, who is this then, of whō I heare soch thinges? And he desyred to se him.

¶ And the Apostles came agayne, and tolde him how greate thinges they had done. And he toke them to him, and wente asyde in to a solytary place by the cite called Bethsaida. Whan the people knew of it, they folowed him. And he receaued them, and spake vnto them of the kyngdome of God, and healed soch as hade nede therof. But the daye beganne to go downe. Then came the twolue to him, and sayde vnto him: let the people departe frō the, that they maye go in to the townes rounde aboute, and in to þy vyllages, where they maye fynde lodgyng ⁊ meate, for we are here in þy wyldernes. for so moch people (for there were vpon a fyue thousande men) But he sayde vnto his disciples: Cause them to syt downe by fifties in a cōpany. And they dyd so, and made them all to syt downe. Then toke he the fyue loaves and two fisshes, and lokyd vp towarde heauē, and sayde grace ouer them, brake them, and gaue them to the disciples, to set thē before the people. And they ate, and were all satisfied. And there were taken vp of that remainyd to them, twolue baskettes full of broken meate.

¶ And it fortunyd when he was alone, "and at his prayer, and his disciples with him, he axed them, and sayde: Whom saye the people that I am? They answered, and sayde: They saye, thou art Ihon the baptist: Some, that thou art Elias: Some, that one of the olde prophetes is rysen agayne. But he sayde vnto them: Whom saye ye that I am? Then answered Peter and sayde: "Thou art the Christ of God. And he charged them strately, and commaunded them, that they shulde tell this vnto no mā, and sayde: * For the sonne of man must suffre many thynges, and be cast out of the Elders and of y^e hye prestes, and scribes, and be put to death, and ryse agayne the thirde daye.

Then sayde he vnto them all: "Yf eny mā wil folowe me, let hi denie himself, & take vp his crosse daylie, & folowe me. † For who so euer wil saue his life, shal lose it. But who so loseth his life for my sake, shal saue it. For what auantage hath a man, though he wanne the whole worlde, and loseth himself, or runneth in dammage of himself? ‡ Who so is ashamed of me and of my sayenges, of him shall the sonne of mā also be ashamed, when he commeth in his glory, and in the glory of his father, and of the holy angels. I saye vnto you of a treuth: ¶ there be some of them that stonde here, which shall not taist of death, tyll they se the kyngdome of God.

¶ And it fortunyd, that aboute an eight dayes after these wordes, ¶ he toke vnto him Peter, Ihon and Iames, and wente vp in to a moūt for to praye. ¶ And as he prayed, the shappe of his countenance was chaunged of another fashion, and his garment was whyte, and shyned: and beholde, two men talked with him, Which were Moses and Elias, that appeared gloriously, and spake of his departynge, which he shulde fulfill at Ierusalem. As for Peter and them that were with him, they were full of slepe. But when they awoke, they saw his glory, and the two men stondynge with him.

¶ And it chaunsed, when they departed frō him, Peter sayde vnto Iesus: Master, here is good beyng for vs. Let vs make thre tabernacles: one for the, one for Moses, and one for Elias, and wyst not what he sayde. But whyle he thus spake, there came a cloude, and ouersadowed them. And they were afraied, when the cloude couered them. And out of the cloude there came a voyce, which sayde: This is my deare sonne, § heare him. And whyle this voyce came to passe, they founde Iesus alone. And they kepte it close, and tolde no mā in those dayes eny of the thynges which they had sene.

¶ And it chaunsed on the nexte daye after, when they came downe from the mount, moch people met him, and beholde, a man amonge the people cryed out, and sayde: Master, I beseke the, loke vpon my sonne, for he is my only sonne: beholde, the sprete taketh him, and sodenly he crieth, and he teareth him, that he someth, and with payne departeth he from him, when he hath rente him. And I besought thy disciples to cast him out, and they coulde not. Then answered Iesus, and sayde: Oh thou vnfaithfull and croked generacion, how longe shal I be with you, & suffre you? Brynge hither thy sonne. And when he came to him, the deuell rente him and tare him. But Iesus rebuked the foule sprete, and healed the chyld, and deliuered him vnto his father agayne. ¶ And they were all amased at the mighty power of God.

¶ And whyle they wondred euery one at all thynges which he dyd, he sayde vnto his disciples: Comprehende these sayenges in youre eares. ¶ For the sonne of man must be deliuered in to the hādes of men. But they wyst not what that worde meaned, and it was hyd from them, that they vnderstode it not. And they were afraied to axe him of that worde.* There came a thought also amonge them, which of them shulde be the greatest. But whā Iesus sawe the thoughtes of their hert, he toke a childe, & set him harde by him, and sayde vnto them: "Whosoeuer receaueth this childe in my name, receaueth me: and who so euer receaueth me, receaueth him that sent me.† But who so is leest amonge you all, ſ same shal be greate.

Then answered Ihō, and sayde: Master, we sawe one dryue out deuels in thy name, and we forbad him, for he folowed the not with vs. And Iesus saide vnto him: For byd him not, for he that is not agaynst vs, is for vs.

¶ And it fortuned when the tyme was fulfilled that he shulde be receaued vp from hence, he turned his face to go straight to Ierusalem, and before him he sent messaungers, which wente their waye, and came in to a towne of the Samaritans, to prepare lodginge for him. And they wolde not receaue him, because he had turned his face to go to Ierusalē. But whan his disciples Iames and Ihon sawe that, they sayde: LORDE, wilt thou, that we commaunde, that fyre fall downe from heauen, and consume them,‡ as Elias dyd? Neuertheles Iesus turned him aboute, and rebuked them, and sayde: Knowe ye not, what maner of sprete ye are of? The sonne of man is not come to destroye mens soules, but to saue them. And they wente in to another towne.

¶ And it fortuned as they went by the waye, one sayde vnto him: I wil folowe the, whyther so euer thou go. And Iesus sayde vnto him: The foxes haue holes, and the byrdes vnder the heauē haue nestes: but the sonne of man hath not wheron to laye his heade.

¶ And he sayde vnto another: Folowe me. He sayde: Syr, geue me leue first to go, and burye my father. But Iesus sayde vnto him: ¶ Let the deed burye their deed. But go thou thy waye, and preach the kyngdome of God.

¶ And another sayde: Syr, I will folowe the,|| but geue me leue first, to go byd them faruele, which are at home in my house. Iesus sayde vnto him: Who so putteth his hāde to the plowe, and loketh backe, is not mete for the kingdome of God.¶

AFTERWARDE the LORDE appointed out other seuentie, and sent them two and two before him in to euery cite and place, whither he himself wolde come, and sayde vnto them: "The haruest is greate, but the labourers are fewe. Praye therfore the LORDE of the haruest, to sende forth labourers in to his haruest. ¶ Go youre waye: beholde, I sende you forth as the lābes amonge ſ wolues. Beare nether wallet, ner scrippes, ner shues, and ¶ salute no mā by the waye. In to what so euer house ye entre, first saye: Peace be in this house. And yf the childe of peace be there, youre peace shal rest vpon him. Yf no, then shal youre peace turne to you agayne. But tary ye still in the same house, eatinge and drynkinge soch as they haue. For the labourer is worthy of his rewarde.

Go not from house to house. And in to what so euer cite ye entre, and they receaue you, eate soch thinges as are set before you, and heale the sickie that are there, and saye vnto them: The kyngdome of God is come nye vnto you. ¶ But in to what so euer cite ye come, and they receaue you not, go youre waye out in to the stretes of the same, and saye: Euen the very dust which cleaueth vpon vs of youre cite, wype we of vpon you. But of this ye shal be sure, that the kyngdome of God was come nye vnto you. I saye vnto you: It shalbe easier for Sodome in that daye, then for that cite.

The seuēty came agayne with ioye, and sayde: LORDE, the deuels also are subdued vnto vs in thy name. But he sayde vnto them: *“I sawe Sathan fall downe from heauen as a lightenyng. Beholde, I haue geuen you power to treade vpon serpētes and scorpions, and ouer all power of the enemye, and nothinge shall hurte you. Neuertheles, reioyce not ye in this, that the spretes are subdued vnto you: but reioyse, †that youre names are wrytten in heauen.

C At the same houre reioysed Iesus in sprete, and sayde: “I prayse the (O father and LORDE of heauen and earth) that thou hast hyd these thynges from the wyse and prudent, and hast opened them vnto babes. Euen so father, for so it pleased the. †All thynges are geuen ouer vnto me of my father: ‡and no man knoweth who the sonne is, but onely the father: nether who the father is, saue onely the sonne, and he to whō the sonne will open it.

And he turned him vnto his disciples, and sayde in especiall: Blessed are the eyes, which se that ye se. For I saye vnto you: “Many prophetes and kynges, wolde haue sene the thynges that ye se, and haue not sene them: and to haue herde the thynges that ye heare, and haue not herde them.

And beholde, there stode vp a scribe and tempted him, and sayde: Master, what must I do, to inheret euerlastinge life? He sayde vnto him: What is wrytten in the lawe? How readest thou? He answered and sayde: “Thou shalt loue thy LORDE God with all thy hert, with all thy soule, with all thy strength, and with all thy mynde, and § thy neyghboure as thy self. He sayde vnto him: Thou hast answered right: this do, and thou shalt lyue. But he wolde haue iustified himself, ¶ sayde vnto Iesus: Who is then my neyghboure?

D Then answered Iesus, and sayde: A certayne man wente downe from Ierusalem vnto Iericho, and fell amonge murthurers, which stryped him out of his clothes, and wounded him, and wente their waye, and left him half deed. And by chaūce there came downe a prest the same waye: and when he sawe him, he passed by. And likewise a Leuite, whā he came nye vnto the same place and sawe him, he passed by. But a Samaritan was goynge his iourney, and came that waye, and when he sawe him, he had compassion vpon him, wente vnto him, bounde vp his woundes, and poured oyle and wyne therin, and lifte him vp vpon his beast, and brought him in to the ynne, and made prouysion for him. Vpon the next daye when he departed, he toke out two pens, and gaue them to the oost, and sayde vnto him: Take cure of him, and what so euer thou spendest more, I wil paye it the, when I come agayne. Which of these thre now thinkest thou, was neyghboure vnto him, that fell amonge the murtherers? He sayde: He that shewed mercy vpon him. Then sayde Iesus vnto him: Go thy waye then, and do thou likewise.

It fortunēd as they wēte, that he entred in to a towne, where there was a woman named Martha, which receaued him in to hir house. And she had a sister, called Mary, / which sat hir downe at Iesus fete, and herkened vnto his worde. But Martha made hir self moch to do, for to serue him. And she stepte vnto him, and sayde: LORDE, carest thou not, that my sister letteth me serue alone? Byd her therfore, that she helpe me. But Iesus answered, and sayde vnto her: Martha Martha, thou takest thought, and combreth thy self aboute many thynges: ¶ there is but one thinge nedefull. Mary hath chosen a good parte, which shal not be taken awaye from her.

He sayde vnto thē: Whan ye praye, saye: O oure father which art in heauen, halowed be thy name. Thy kyngdome come. Thy wil be fulfilled vpon earth, as it is in heauen. I saye vnto you: and though he wolde not aryse and geue him, because he is his frende, Yet because of his vnshamefast begginge he wolde aryse, and geue him as many as he neded.

13 And I saye vnto you also: Axe, and it shal be geuen you: "Seke, and ye shal fynde: knocke, and it shalbe opened vnto you. For who so euer axeth, receaueth: and he that seketh, fyndeth: and to him that knocketh, shal it be opened. Yf the sonne axe bred of eny of you that is a father, wyl he geue him a stone therfore? Yf ye then which are euell, can geue youre children good giftes, how moch more shal the father of heauen geue the holy sprete vnto them that axe him?

"And he droue out a deuell that was domme: and it came to passe when the deuell was departed out, the domme spake, and the people wondred. But some of them sayde: "He dryueth out the deuels, thorow Beelzebub the chefe of the deuels. The other tempted him, and desyred a token of him from heauen. And whan he commeth, he fyndeth it swepete, and garnished. Then goeth he, and taketh vnto him seuen other spretes, worse the himself. And whan they are entred in, they dwell there. Wherefore yf God so cloth the grasse, y is to daye in y felde, and tomorow shalbe cast in to the fornae, how moch more shal he clothe you, o ye of litle faith? Axe not ye therfore what ye shal eate, or what ye shal drynke, and clymme not vp an hye: The Heithen in the worlde seke after all soch thinges. But seke ye the kyngdome of God, and all these shal be mynistred vnto you.

Feare not thou litle flocke, for it is youre fathers pleasure to geue you the 'kyngdome. Sell that ye haue, and geue almesse. Make you bagges, which waxe not olde: euen a treasure that neuer fayleth in heauen, where no thefe commeth, and no moth corrupteth: for where youre treasure is, there wil youre hert be also.

"Let youre loynes be gerded aboute, and youre lightes burnynge, and be ye like vnto men that wayte for their lorde, agaynst he returne from the mariage, that whan he cometh & knocketh, they maye straight waye open vnto him. Blessed are those seruantes, whom the LORDE (whan he cometh) shal fynde wakynge. Verely I saye vnto you: He shal gyrde vp him self, and make them syt downe at the table, and shal go by them, and mynister vnto them. And yf he come in the seconde watch, and in the thirde watch, and fynde them so, blessed are those seruantes. "But be sure of this, that yf the good man of the house knewe, what houre the thefe wolde come, he wolde surely watch, and not suffre his house to be broken vp. Therfore be ye ready also, for at an houre whan ye thynke not, shal the sonne of man come.

But Peter sayde vnto him: LORDE, tellest thou this symilitude vnto vs, or to all men also? The LORDE sayde: How greate a thinge is a faithfull and wyse steward, whom his lorde setteth ouer his houszholde, to geue thē their dewtye in due season? Blessed is that seruaunt, whom his lorde (whan he cometh) shal fynde so doynge. Verely I saye vnto you: he shal set him ouer all his goodes. But yf the same seruaunt shal saye in his hert: Tush, it wil be longe or my lorde come, and shal begynne to snyte y seruauntes and maydens, yee & to eate and drynke, & to be dronke: the same seruauntes lorde shal come in a daye whan he loketh not for him, and in an houre that he is not aware of, & shal hew him in peces, and geue him his rewarde with the vnbeleuers.

The xiiij. Chapter.

A THERE were present at the same season certayne, that shewed him of ſ *Galileans, whose bloude Pilate had mēgled with their awne sacrifice. And Iesus answered, and sayde vnto them: Suppose ye, that these Galileās were greater synners then all the other Galileans, because they suffred soch punyshment? I tell you naye, but excepte ye amēde youre selues, ye shal all perishe likewise. Or thinke ye that ſ eightene (vpon whom the tower in Siloe fell and slewe them) were giltye aboute all men that dwell at Ierusalem? I tell you naye: but excepte ye amende youre selues, ye shal all perishe likewise.

And he tolde them this symillitude: A certayne mā had a fygge tre, which was planted in his vynyarde, & he came and sought frute thereon, and founde none. Then sayde he vnto the wyngardener: Beholde, This thre yere longe haue I come euery yere, and sought frute vpon this fygge tre, and fynde none: cut it downe, why hyndreth it the grounde? But he answered, and sayde: Syr, let it alone yet this yere, tyll I dygge rōude aboute it and donge it, yf it wyl brynge forth frute: Yf no, then cut it downe afterwarde.

And he taught in a synagoge vpon the Sabbath: and beholde, there was a womā, which had a sprete of infirmyte eightene yeaeres, and was croked, and coulde not well loke vp. Whan Iesus sawe her, he called her to him, and sayde vnto her: Woman, be deluyered from thy disease. And he layed his handes vpō her, and immediatly she was made straight, and prayed God. Then answered the ruler of the synagoge, and toke indignacion (because Iesus healed vpō ſ Sabbath) and sayde vnto the people: There are sixe dayes, wherin men ought to worke, in them come and be healed, and not on the Sabbath.

Then the LORDE answered him, and sayde: Thou ypcryte, doth not euery one of you lowse his ox or asse frō the crybbe vpō Sabbath, and leade him to the water? But shulde not this (which is Abrahams daughter) whom Sathan hath bounde now eightene yeaeres, be lowsed from this bonde vpō the Sabbath? And whan he thus sayde, all his aduersaries were ashamed. And all the people reioysed ouer all the excellent dedes, that were done by him.

And he sayde: "What is the kyngdome of God like? Or wher vnto shal I cōpare it? It is like a grayne of mustarde seede, which a man toke, and cast in his garden: and it grewe, and waxed a greate tre, and the foules of the ayre dwelt amonge the braunches of it.

The xiiiij. Chapter.

¶ AND it fortuneth that he came in to the house of one of ¹ the chefe Pharises vpon a Sabbath, to eate bred, ² and they watched him. And beholde, there was a mā before him, which had ³ the dropsye. And Iesus answered, ⁴ and spake vnto the scribes and Pharises, ⁵ and sayde: Is it lafull to heale on the Sabbath? But they helde their tonge. And he toke him, and healed him, ⁶ and let him go, and answered, and sayde vnto the: Which of you shal haue an ox or an asse fallen in to a pytte, ⁷ and wil not straight waye pull him out on the Sabbath daye? And they coude not answey him agayne to that.

And he tolde a similitude vnto ⁸ the gestes, whā he marked how they chose the hyest seates, ⁹ and sayde vnto the: Whan thou art byddē of eny man to a weddyng, syt not downe in the hyest rowme, lest a more honorable man than thou be byddē of him, and he that bade both the and him, come ¹⁰ and saye vnto the: Geue this mā rowme, and thou the begynne with shame to take ¹¹ the lowest rowme. But rather whā thou art byddē, go and syt in ¹² the lowest rowme, that whā he that bade the, cometh, he maye saye vnto the: Frende, syt vp hyer: then shalt thou haue worships in the presence of them that syt at the table. ¹³ For who so euer exalteth himself, shalbe brought lowe: ¹⁴ and he ¹⁵ the humbleth himself, shalbe exalted.

He sayde also vnto him that had bydden him: Whā thou makest a dynor or a supper, call not thy frendes, ner thy brethren, ner thy kynsfolkes, ner thy riche neighbours, lest they call the agayne, and recompēce be made ¹⁶ the. But whā thou makest a feast, ¹⁷ call the poore, the crepell, the lame, the blynde, then art thou blessed, for they can not recompēce ¹⁸ the. ¶ Whan one of them that sat by at the table herde this, he sayde vnto him: Blessed is he, that eateth bred in ¹⁹ the kyngdome of God. And they begāne all together to excuse thē selues one after another: The first saide vnto hī: I haue bought a ferme, and I must nedes go forth and se it, I praye ⁊ haue me excused. And ⁊ seconde sayde: I haue bought fyue yoke of oxen, and now I go to proue them, I praye the haue me excused. And the thirde sayde: I haue maried a wife, therefore can I not come. And the seruauit came, and brought his lorde worde agayne therof.

Then was the good man of the house displeased, and sayde vnto his seruauit: Go out quickly in to the stretes and quarters of ⁊ cite, and brynge in hither the poore and crepell, and lame and blynde. And the seruauit sayde: lorde, it is done as thou hast cōmaunded, and there is yet more rowme. And the lorde sayde vnto the seruauit: Go out in to the hye wayes, and to the hedges, and compell them to come in, that my house maye be fylled. But I saye vnto you: that none of these men which were bydden, shal taist of my supper.

¶ There wente moch people with him,^a and he turned him aboute and sayde vnto them: Yf eny man come vnto me, and hate not his father, mother, wife, childrē, brethrē, sisters, yee and his owne life also, he can not be my disciple. The xii. Chapter.

¶ THERE resorted vnto him all the publicans and synners,^c that they might heare him. And ⁊ Pharises and scribes murmured, and sayde: *This man receaueth synners, and eateth with them. But he tolde thē this symilitude, and sayde: What man is he amonge you, that hath an hundreth shepe, and yf he loose one of thē,^d that leaueth not the nyne and nyentye in the wyldernesse, and goeth after that which is lost tyll he fynde it? And whan he hath founde it, he layeth it vpon his shulders with ioye: and whan he commeth home, he calleth his frēdes and neighbours, and sayeth vnto thē: Reioyce with me, for I haue founde my shepe, ⁊ was lost. I saye vnto you: Euc so shal there be ioye in heauen ouer one synner that doth pennaunce, more then ouer nyne and nyentye righteous, which ⁊ nede not repentance.

Or what woman is it that hath ten grotes, yf she loose one of them, that lighteth not a candell, and swepeth the house, and seketh diligently, tyll she fynde it? Euen so (I tell you) shal there be ioye before the angels of God, ouer one synner ⁊ doth pennaunce.

And he sayde: A certayne man had two sonnes, and the yonger of them sayde vnto the father: Father, geue me the porcion of ⁊ goodes, that belongeth vnto me. And he deuyded the good vnto them. And not longe thereafter, gathered the yonger sonne all together, ⁊ toke his journey in to a farre cōtre, and there waisted he his goodes with ryotous lyuynge. Now whan he had spent all that he had, there was a greate derth thorow out all the same lōde. And he begāne to lacke, and wente his waye, and clauē to a cytesin of that same cōtre, which sent him in to his felde, to kepe swyne. C Then came he to him self, and sayde: How many hyred seruauntes hath my father, which haue bred nough, and I perish of hunger? I wil get vp, and go to my father, and saye vnto him: Father, I haue synned agaynst heauen and before the, and am nomore worthy to be called thy sonne, make me as one of thy hyred seruauntes. And he gat him vp, & came vnto his father. But whan he was yet a greate waye of, his father sawe him, and had cōpassion,^a and ranne, and fell aboute his neck, and kyssed him. Then sayde the sonne vnto him: Father, I haue synned agaynst heauē, and before the, I am no more worthy to be called thy sonne. But the father sayde vnto his seruauntes: Brynge forth the best garment, and put it vpon him, and geue him a ryng vpon his hande, and shues on his fete, and brynge hither a fed calfe, and kyll it, lat vs eate and be mery: for this my sonne was deed, and is alyue agayne: he was lost, and is founde. And they beganne to be mery.

D But the elder sonne was in the felde. And whan he came, and drewe nye to the house, he herde ſ̄ mynstrelsy and daunsynge, and called one of the seruauntes vnto him, and axed what it was. He sayde vnto him: Thy brother is come, and thy father hath slayne a fed calfe, because he hath receaued him safe and sounde. Then was he angrie, and wolde not go in. Then wente his father out, and prayed him. But he answered, and sayde vnto his father: Lo, thus many yeaes haue I done the seruyce, nether haue I yet broken thy commaundement, and thou gauest me neuer one kydd, ſ̄ I might make mery with my frendes. But now that this thy sonne is come, which deuoured his goodes with harlottes, thou hast slayne a fed calfe. But he sayde vnto him: My sonne, thou art allwaye with me, and all that is myne, is thine: thou shuldest be mery and glad, for this thy brother was deed, and is alyue agayne: he was lost, and is founde agayne.

The xvi. Chapter.

E HE sayde also vnto his disciples: There was a certayne riche man, which had a stewarde, that was accused vnto him, that he had waisted his goodes. And he called him, and sayde vnto him: How is it, that I heare this of the? geue acomptes of thy stewardshipe, for thou mayest be no longer stewarde. The stewarde sayde within himself: What shal I do? My lorde wil take awaye the stewardshipe fro me. I cā not dygge, and to begg I am ashamed. I wote what I wil do, that whā I am put out of the stewardshipe, they maye receaue me in to their houses.

And he called vnto hi all his lordes detters, and sayde vnto the first: How moch owest thou vnto my lorde? He sayde: an hundreth tonnes of oyle. And he sayde: Take thy byll, syt downe quykly, & wryte fiftie. Then sayde he vnto another: How moch owest thou? He sayde: An hundreth quarters of wheate. And he sayde vnto him: Take thy byll, and wryte foure score. And the lorde cōmended the vnrighteous stewarde, because he had done wysely. For the children of this worlde are in their kynde wyser, thē the children of light. And I saye vnto you: Make you frendes with the vnrighteous Mammon, ſ̄ whan ye shal haue nede, they maye receaue you in to euerlastinge Tabernacles.

He that is faithfull in the least, is faithfull also in moch: and he that is vnrighteous in the least, is vnrighteous also in moch. Yf ye then haue not bene faithfull in the vnrighteous Mammon, who wyll beleue you in that which is true? And yf ye haue not bene faithfull in another mans busynesse, who wil geue you that which is youre awne?

^aNo seruaunt can serue two masters: for either he shal hate the one, and loue ſ̄ other: or els he shal leane to the one, and despyse the other. Ye can not serue God and Mammon.

All these thinges herde the Pharises, which were couetous, and they mocked hi. And he sayde vnto them: Ye are they that iustifie youre selues before men, but God knoweth youre hertes. For ſ̄ which is hye amonge men, is an abhominacion before God.

The lawe and ſ̄ prophetes prophecied vnto Ihon,^c and from that tyme forth is ſ̄ kyngdome of God preached thorow ſ̄ Gospell, and euery man preasseth in to it by violence. But easier is it, for heauen and earth to perishe, then one tittle of ſ̄ lawe to fall. There was a certayne riche man, which clothed him self with purple and costly linnen, and fared deliciously euery daye. And there was a poore man named Lazarus which laye at his gate full of sores, and desyred to be fylled with the crommes, that fell from the riche mans table. Yet came the dogges, and licked his sores. But it fortunēd, that the poore man dyed, and was caried of the angels in to Abrahams bosome. The riche man dyed also, and was buried.

D Now whan he was in the hell, he lift vp his eyes in the payne, and sawe Abraham asfarre of, and Lazarus in his bosome: and he cried, and sayde: Father Abraham, haue mercy vpon me, and sende Lazarus, that he maye dyppe the typpe of his fynger in water, & coole my tonge, for I am tormēted in this flāme. But Abrahā saide: Remēbre sonne, ⁊ thou hast receaued good in thy life, & contrary wyse Lazarus receaued euell. But now is he comforted, and thou art tormented. And beside all this, there is a great space set betwene vs and you: so ⁊ they which wolde go downe from hence vnto you, can not: nether maye they passe ouer from thence vnto vs.

Then sayde he: I pray the then father, that thou wilt sende him vnto my fathers house, for I haue yet fyue brethren, that he maye warne them, lest they also come in to this place of torment. Abraham sayde vnto him: They haue Moses and the prophetes, let them heare them. But he sayde: Nay father Abraham, but yf one wente vnto them frō the deed, they wolde do pennaunce. Neuertheles he sayde vnto him: Yf they heare not Moses & the prophetes, then shal they not beleue also, though one rose agayne frō the deed.

And it came to passe, as they wente, they were censed. And one of them whā he sawe that he was censed, he turned backe agayne, and prayed God with loude voyce, and fell downe on his face at his fete, and gaue him thanks. And the same was a Samaritane. And he sayde vnto him: Aryse, go thy waye, thy faith hath made ⁊ whole.

C But whan he was demanded of ⁊ Pharises: Whan cōmeth the kyngdome of God? He answered them, and sayde: The kyngdome of God commeth not with outwarde appearance, nether shal it be sayde: lo, here or there is it. For beholde, ⁊ kyngdome of God is inwarde in you.

In that daye, who so is vpo the rofe, and his stuffe in ¹² house,¹³ let him not come downe to fetch it: Likewise he that is in the felde, let him not turne backe, for it that is behynde him. * Remēbre Lottes wife. Who so euer goeth aboute to saue his life,¹⁴ shal lose it: and who so euer shal lose it, shal saue it.

I saye vnto you: In ¹⁵ night shal two lye vpon one bed, the one shalbe receaued, the other shalbe for saken. ¹⁶ Two shalbe gryndinge together, the one shalbe receaued, the other shalbe forsaken. And they answered, and sayde vnto him: Where LORDE? He sayde vnto thē: Where so euer ¹⁷ deed carcase is there wil ¹⁸ Aegles be gathered together.

this weddowe is so importune vpon me, I wil deliyuer her, lest she come at the last, and rayle vpon me.

Then sayde the LORDE: Heare what ¹ vnrighteous iudge sayeth. But shall not God also deliyuer his chosen, that crye vnto hī daye and night, though he differre thē? I saye vnto you: He shal deliyuer them, and that shortly. Neuertheles, whan the sonne of man cōmeth, suppose ye, that he shal fynde faith vpon earth?

And vnto certayne which trusted in the selues, that they were perfecte, and despyed other, he spake this symilitude: There wente vp two men in to the tēple, to praye: the one a Pharise, the other a publican. The Pharise stode, and prayed by himself after this maner: ² I thanke the God, that I am not as other men, robbers, vnrighteous, aduouters, or as this publican. I fast twyse in the weke, I geue the tithes of all that I haue. And the publican stode afarre of, and wolde not lift vp his eyes to heauen, but smote vpon his brest, and sayde: God be thou mercyfull vnto me synner. I tell you: This man wente downe in to his house iustified more thē the other.³ For who so euer exalteth himself, shalbe brought lowe: and he that humbleth himself, shalbe exalted.

⁴ They brought yonge children also vnto him, that he shulde touch them. But whan the disciples sawe that, they rebuked them. Neuertheles Iesus called them vnto him, and sayde: Suffre childrē to come vnto me, and forbyd thē not, for of such is ⁵ kyngdome of God. Verely I saye vnto you: Whosoever receaueth not ⁶ kyngdome of God as a childe, shal not enter therin.

And a certayne ruler axed him, and sayde: ⁷ Good master, what must I do, that I maye enheret euerlastinge life? But Iesus sayde vnto him: Why callest thou me good? There is no man good, but God onely. Thou knowest the cōmaundementes: Thou shalt not breake wedlocke: Thou shalt not kyll: ⁸ Thou shalt not steale: Thou shalt not beare false wytnesse: Honour thy father and thy mother. But he sayde: All these haue I kepte fro my youth vp. Whan Iesus herde that, he sayde vnto him: Yet lackest thou one thinge, sell all that thou hast, and geue it vnto þ̄ poore, and thou shalt haue a treasure in heauen, and come ⁊ folowe me. When he herde that, he was sory, for he was very riche.

*Whan Iesus sawe that he was sory, he sayde: How hardly shal the riche come in to the kyngdome of God? It is easier for a Camell to go thorow the eye of a nedle, thē for a rich man to entre in to the kyngdome of God. Then sayde they þ̄ herde that: Who can then be saued? But he sayde: loke what is vnpossible with mē, is possible with God.⁶

Then sayde Peter: Beholde, we haue forsakē all, and folowed the. He sayde vnto thē: *Verely I saye vnto you: There is no mā þ̄ forsaketh house, or elders, or brethren, or wife, or children for the kyngdome of Gods sake, which shal not receaue moch more in this tyme, and euerlastinge life in the worlde to come.

¶ He toke vnto him the twolue, and sayde vnto them: *Beholde, we go vp to Ierusalē, and it shal all be fulfilled, that is wrytten by the prophetes of the sonne of man. For he shal be deluyered vnto þ̄ Heythen, and shalbe mocked,⁴ and despytfully intreated, and spitted vpon: and when they haue scourged him, they shal put him to death, and vpon the thirde daye shal he aryse agayne. *And they vnderstode nothinge of these thinges. And this sayenge was hyd from them, and they perceaued not the thinges that were spoken.

¶ And it came to passe, when he came nye vnto Iericho, there sat one blynde by the waye, and begged. And whan he herde the people passe by, he axed what it was. Then sayde they vnto him, that Iesus of Nazareth passed by. And he cryed, and sayde: Iesu thou sonne of Dauid, haue mercy vpon me. But the people that wente before, rebuked him, that he shulde holde his tunge. Neuertheles he cried moch more: Thou sonne of Dauid haue mercy vpo me. Iesus stode styl, ⁊ cōmaunded hi to be brought vnto hi. And whan he was come neare, he axed him and sayde: What wilt thou, that I do vnto the? He sayde: LORDE, that I maye receaue my sight. And Iesus sayde vnto him: Receaue thy sight, thy faith hath saued the. And immediatly he sawe, and folowed him, ⁊ prayed God. And all the people that sawe it, gaue God the prayse.

The xix. Chapter.

AND he entred in, and wente thorow ^a Iericho: ⁊ beholde, there was a man named Zacheus, which was a ruler of the publicans, and was riche, and desyred to se Iesus what he shulde be, and he coulde not for the people, for he was lowe of stature. And he ranne before, and clymmed vp in to a wyld fygge tre, that he might se him: for he shulde come þ̄ waye. And whan Iesus came to the same place, he lokod vp, and sawe him, and sayde vnto him: Zache, come downe haistely, for to daye must I turne in to thy house. And he came downe hastily, and receaued him[†] with ioye. Whan they sawe that, they murmured all, and sayde, þ̄ he was gone in, to a synner.

But Zacheus stode forth, and sayde vnto the LORDE: Beholde LORDE, the half of my goodes geue I to the poore: and yf I haue defrauded eny man, I restore him foure folde. Iesus sayde vnto him: This daye is health happened vnto this house, for so moch as he also is Abrahams sonne.[†] For the sonne of mā is come, to seke and to saue that which was lost.

Now whyle they herkened, he tolde a symilitude also, because he was nye vnto Ierusalem, and because they thought, that the kyngdome of God shulde appeare immediatly. And he sayde: *A certayne noble mā wēte in to a farre countre, to receaue hī a kyngdome, and then to come agayne. This man called ten of his seruantes, and deluyered them ten pounde, and sayde vnto them: Occupy, tyll I come agayne. But his citesyns hated him, and sent a message after him, and sayde: We wil not haue this man to raigne ouer vs.

And it fortunwed whan he came agayne, ³³ after that he had receaued the kyngdome, he bade call for the seruantes, vnto whom he had geuē his money, þ̄ he might knowe, what euery one had done. Then came the first and sayde: Syr, thy pounde hath wonne ten pounde. And he sayde vnto him: Well thou good seruaut, for so moch as thou hast bene faithfull in the least, thou shalt haue auctorite ouer ten cities. The seconde came also, and sayde: Syr, thy pounce hath wonne fyue pounce. And to him he sayde: And thou shalt be ouer fyue cities. And y^e thirde came, and sayde: Lo syr, here is thy pounce, which I haue kepte in a napkyn. I was afraied of the, for thou art an harde man, thou takest vp y^e thou hast not layed downe, and reapest that thou hast not sowne. He sayde vnto him: *Of thine awne mouth iudge I the thou euell seruaunt. Knewest thou that I am an harde man, takyng vp that I layde not downe, and reapyng that I dyd not sow? Wherefore then hast thou not deliuered my money to the exchange banke? And at my comynge might I haue requyred myne awne with vauntage?

C And he sayde vnto them that stode by: Take y^e pounce from him, and geue it vnto him that hath ten pounce. And they sayde vnto him: Syr, he hath ten pounce already. But I saye vnto you: †Whosoever hath, vnto him shal be geue: but from him that hath not, shal be taken awaye euen that he hath. As for those myne enemies, which wolde not that I shulde raigne ouer them, bringe them hither, and slaye them before me. And whan he had thus sayde, he wete on forwarde, and toke his journey vp to Ierusalem.

¶ And it fortuneth whan he came nye to Bethphage and Bethany vnto mount Oliuete, he sent two of his disciples, and sayde: Go in to the towne that lyeth ouer agaynst you, and assone as ye are come in, ye shal fynde a foale tyed, wheron yet neuer man satt, lowse it, and bryng it hither. And yf eny mā axe you wherfore ye lowse it, saye thus vnto him. The LORDE hath nede therof.

And they that were sent, wete their waye and founde euen as he had sayde. But whā they lowsed y^e foale, the owners therof sayde vnto thē: Why lowse ye the foale? They sayde: The LORDE hath nede therof. And they brought it vnto Iesus, and cast their clothes vpo the foale, and set Iesus theron. ¶ Now as he wente, they spred their garments in the waye.

D And whan he wete downe from mount Oliuete, y^e whole multitude of his disciples begāne ioyfully to prayse God with loude voyce, ouer all the miracles that they had sene, and sayde: †Blessed be he, that cōmeth a kyng in the name of the LORDE. †Peace be in heauen, and prayse in the height. And some of the Pharises amonge the people sayde vnto him: Master, rebuke thy disciples. And he answered and sayde vnto them: I tell you, †yf these holde their peace, yet shal the stones crye.

And whan he was come neare, he behelde the cite, and y^e wepte vpo it, and sayde: Yf thou knewest what were for thy peace, thou shuldest remēbre it euen in this present daye of thine. But now is it hyd from thine eyes. ¶ For the tyme shal come vpon the, that thine enimes shal cast vp a bāke aboute the, and aboute thy children with the, and besege y^e, and kepe the in on euery syde, and make the eauen with the grounde, and shal not leaue in the one stone vpon another, because thou hast not knowne y^e tyme, wherin thou hast bene visited.

¶ And he wente in to the temple, and begāne to dryue out them that bought, and sold therin, and sayde vnto them: It is written:

My house is an house of prayer, but ye haue made it a denne of murthurers. And he taught daylie in the tēple. But the hye prestes and the scribes and the chiefe of y^e people wente aboute to destroye him, and founde not, what to do vnto him. For all the people stacke by him, and gaue him audience.

The xi. Chapter.

A AND it fortuneth one of those dayes, whan he taught the people in the tēple,^a and preached the Gospell, the hye prestes and scribes came to him with the Elders, and spake vnto him, and sayde: Tell vs, by what auctorite doest thou these thinges? Or who gaue the this auctorite? But he answered, y^e sayde vnto thē: I wil axe you a worde also, tell it me: The baptyme of Iho was it from heauen, or of men? But they thought in them selues, and sayde: Yf we saye, from heauen, then shal he saye: Why dyd ye not thē beleue him? But yf we saye, of men, then shal all the people stone vs, for they be perswaded, that Ihon is a prophet. And they answered, that they coude not tell, whence it was. And Iesus sayde vnto them: Nether tell I you, by what auctorite I do these thinges.

And he beganne to tell the people this symillitude:^a A certayne man planted a vynyarde, and let it out vnto huszbädmen, and wente himself in to a straunge countre for a greate season. And whan his tyme was come, he sent a seruaut to the huszbädmen, that they might geue him of the frute of the vynyarde. But the huszbändmen bet him, and sent him awaye emptye. And agayne he sent yet another seruaut: but they bet him also, and intreated him shamefully, & sent him awaye emptye. And besydes this, he sent the thirde: but they wounded him also, and thrust him out. Then sayde the lorde of the vynyarde: What shal I do? I wil sende my^b deare sonne, peradventure they wil stonde in awe of him, whan they se him.

But whan the huszbändmen sawe the sonne, they thought in thē selues, and sayde: This is the heyre, come,^c let vs kyll him, & the inheritaunce maye be oures. And they thrust him out of y^d vynyarde, and slew him. What shal now the lorde of the vynyarde do vnto them? He shal come, and destroye those huszbändmen, and let out his vynyarde vnto other. Whan they herde that, they sayde: God forbyd.

But he behelde thē, and sayde: What is this then that is written: ^dThe same stone which the buylders refused, is become the head corner stone? Who so euer falleth vpon this stone, shalbe broken in sunder: but vpon whō so euer he falleth, he shall grynde him to poulder. ^eAnd the hye prestes and scribes wente aboute to laye handes vpon him the same houre, and they feared the people: for they perceaued, that he had spokē this symillitude agaynst them.

And they watched hī, & sent forth spies, which shulde fayne thē selues perfecte,^f that they might take him in his wordes, to delyuer him vnto the power and auctorite of y^g debite. And they axed him, & sayde: Master, we knowe that thou sayest & teachest right, and regardest the outward appearance of no man, but teachest the waye of God truly. Is it lauffull, that we geue tribute vnto the Em-peroure, or not? But he perceaued their craftynes, and sayde vnto them: Why tēpte ye me? Shewe me the peny. Whose ymage and superscription hath it? They answered, and sayde: The Emperours. Then sayde he vnto them: Geue thē vnto the Emperoure, that which is the Emperours: & vnto God, that which is Gods. And they coude not reproue his worde before the people, and marueyled at his answer, and helde their peace.

^hThen came vnto him certayne of the Saduces (which holde that there is no resurrection) and axed him, and sayde: Master, Moses wrote vnto vs, yf eny mans brother dye hauynge a wife, and dyeth without childrē, then shal his brother take his wife, and rayse vp sede vnto his brother. Now were there seue brethrē: the first toke a wife, and dyed childlesse: and the seconde toke the wife, and dyed without children also: and the thirde toke her, likewyse all the seue, and left no children behynde thē, and dyed. At the last after them all, the woman dyed also. Now in the resurrection, whose wife shal she be of them? For seuen had her to wife. And Iesus answered and saide vnto them: The childrē of this worlde mary, & are married, but they yⁱ shalbe worthy to enioye that worlde and the resurrection from the deed, shal nether mary ner be married, for they can dye nomore. For they are like vnto the angels, and are the y^j children of God, in so moch as they are children of the resurrection.

But that the deed ryse agayne, hath Moses also signified besydes the bush, when he called the LORDE, the God of Abraham,^k the God of Isaac, and the God of Iacob. But God is not a God of the deed but of the lyuynge, for they lyue all vnto him. Then answered certayne of the scribes, and sayde: Master, thou haist sayde well. And from that tyme forth they durst axe him no mo questions.

^lBut he sayde vnto them: How saye they that Christ is Dauids sonne? And Dauid himself sayeth in the boke of the Psalmes: The LORDE sayde vnto my LORDE: ^m'Syt thou on my right honde, tyll I make thine enemies thy fote stole. Dauid calleth him LORDE, how is he then his sonne?

AND he loked vp, and behelde y^e riche,^a how they put in their offerynges in to the Gods chest. The xxij. Chapter.

A THE feast of swete bread (which is called Easter) drue nye. And y^e hye prestes and Scribes sought how they might put him to death, and were afrayed of the people. But *Satan was entred in to Iudas, named Iscarioth (which was of y^e nombre of y^e twolue) and he wēte his waye, and talked with the hye prestes and with y^e officers, how he wolde betraye him vnto them. And they were glad, and promysed to geue him money. And he cōsented, & sought oportunitie, y^e he might betraye hī without eny rumoure.

"Then came y^e daye of swete bread, wherin the Easter lambe must be offered. And he sent Peter and Ihon, and sayde: Go youre waye, prepare vs the Easter lambe, that we maye eate. But they sayde vnto him: Where wilt thou, that we prepare it? He saide vnto them: Beholde, whā ye come in to y^e cite, there shal mete you a man, beearinge a pitcher of water, folowe him in to the house y^e he entreth in, and saye vnto the good man of the house: The master sendeth y^e worde: Where is y^e gesthouse, wherin I maye eate the Easter lābe with my disciples? And he shal shewe you a greate parlour paued. They wente their waye, and founde as he had sayde vnto them, and made ready the Easter lambe.

B And whan the houre came, he sat him downe, and the twolue Apostles with him, and he sayde vnto them: I haue hertely desyred to eate this Easter lābe with you before I suffre. For I saye vnto you: that henceforth I wil eate nomore therof, tyll it be fulfilled in the kyngdome of God. And he toke the cuppe, gaue thanks, and sayde: Take this and deuyde it amonge you. For I saye vnto you: I wil not drynke of the frute of y^e vyne, vntyll the kyngdome of God come.

And he toke the bred, gaue thanks, and brake it, and gaue it them, and sayde: This is my body, + which shalbe geuen for you. This do in the remembraunce of me. Likewise also the cuppe, after they had supped, and sayde: This cuppe is the new Testamēt in my bloude, which shalbe shed for you.

"But lo, the hande of him that betrayeth me, is with me on the table. And the sonne of man trulye goeth forth, as it is appoynted. But wo vnto that man, by whom he is betrayed. And they beganne to axe amonge them selues, which of them it shulde be, that shulde do that.

"There rose a strife also amōge thē, which of them shulde be takē for the greatest. But he sayde vnto them: The kynges of y^e worlde haue domynion ouer y^e people, and they that beare rule ouer thē, are called gracious lordes. But ye shal not be so: But the greatest amonge you, shalbe as the yngest: and the chefest, as a seruauit. For which is the greatest? he that sytteth at the table, or he that serueth? Is not he that sytteth at the table? § But I am amōge you as a mynister. As for you, ye are they, that haue byddē with me in my temptacions. And I wil appoynte the kyngdome vnto you, euen as my father hath appoynted me, that ye maye eate and drynke at my table in my kyngdome, & and syt vpon seates, and iudge the twolue trybes of Israel.

But the LORDE sayde: Simon Simon, beholde, Satan hath desyred after you, that he might sifte you euen as wheate: but I haue prayed for y^e, that thy faith fayle not. And whan thou art cōuerted, strength thy brethren: But he sayde vnto him: LORDE, I am ready to go with the in to preson, and in to death. Neuertheles he sayde: Peter, I saye vnto the: The cock shal not crowe this daye, tyll thou haue thryse denyed, y^e thou knewest me.

And he gat him from them aboute a stones cast, and kneled downe, prayed, & sayde: Father, yf thou wilt, take away this cuppe fro me: Neuerthelesse, not my wyl,⁶ but thynne be fulfilled. And there appeared vnto him an angell frō heauen, and comforted him. And it came so, that he wrestled with death, and prayed the longer. And his sweate was like droppes of bloude, runnyng downe to the grounde. And he rose vp frō prayer, and came to his disciples, and founde them slepinge for heynesse, and sayde vnto them: What, slepe ye? ryse vp and praye, that ye fall not in to tēptacion.

¶ But whyle he yet spake, beholde, the multitude, and one of the twolue called Iudas wente before them, and he came nye vnto Iesus, to kysse him. But Iesus sayde vnto him: Iudas, betrayest thou the sonne of mā with a kysse? When they that were aboute him, sawe what wolde folowe, they sayde vnto him: LORDE, shal we smyte with the swerde? And one of thē stroke a seruaũt of ḡ hye prestes, & smote of his eare. But Iesus answered, and sayde: Suffre thē thus farre forth. And he touched his eare, & healed him.

¶ But Iesus sayde vnto the prestes and rulers of the temple, and to the Elders that were come vnto him: Ye are come forth as it were to a murthurer with swerdes, & with staues. I was daylie with you in the temple, and ye layed no handes vpon me. But this is youre houre, and the power of darknesse.

Neuerthelesse they toke him, and led him,⁶ and brought him in to the hye prestes house. As for Peter, he folowed hī a farre of.

Then kyndled they a fyre in the myddest of the palace, and sat them downe together. And Peter sat him downe amonge them. Then a damsell sawe him syttinge by the light, and behelde him well, and sayde vnto him: This same was also with him. But he denyed him, and sayde: Womā, I knowe him not. And after a litle whyle, another sawe him, and sayde: Thou art one of them also. But Peter sayde: Man, I am not.

And aboute the space of an houre after, another affirmed, & sayde: Verely this was with him also, for he is a Galilean. But Peter saide: Mā, I wote not what thou sayest. And immediatly whyle he yet spake, ḡ cock crewe. And the LORDE turned him aboute and loked vpō Peter. And Peter remembred the wordes of ḡ LORDE, how he sayde vnto him: † Before the cock crowe, thou shalt denye me thryse. And Peter wente out, and wepte byterly.

The men that helde Iesus, mocked him,⁷ and stroke him, byndfolded him, and smote him on the face, and axed him, and sayde: Prophecie, who is it that smote the? And many other blasphemies sayde they vnto hī.

¶ And whan it was daye, there gathered together the Elders of the people, the hye prestes and scribes, and led him vp before their councell, and sayde: Art thou Christ? Tell vs. But he sayde vnto them: Yf I tell you, ye wyl not beleue: But yf I axe you, ye wyl not answeere me, nether wyl ye let me go.⁸ ¶ From this tyme forth shal the sonne of man sytt at the right hāde of the power of God. and sayeth, that he is Christ a kyng. But Pilate axed him, and sayde: "Art thou the kyng of the Iewes? He answered him, and sayde: Thou sayest it. Pilate sayde vnto þy hye prestes and to the people: I fynde no cause in this man. But they were the more feare, and sayde: He hath moued the people, in that he hath taught here ⁊ there in all the londe of Iewry, and hath* begonne at Galile vnto this place.

Whan Pilate herde mencion of Galile, he axed whether he were of Galile. And whan he perceaued that he was vnder †Herodes iurisdiccio ⁊ he sent him to Herode, which was also at Ierusalē in those dayes. When Herode sawe Iesus, he was excedinge glad, for he had longe bene desyrous to se him: because § he had herde moch of him, ⁊ hoped to se a miracle of hi. And he axed him many thinges. Neuertheles he answered him nothinge. The hye prestes and scribes stode, and accused him sore. But Herode with his men of warre despyed him, and mocked him, put a whyte garmēt vpō him, and sent him agayne vnto Pilate. Vpō þy same daye were Pilate and Herode made frendes together, for afore they had bene at variance.

33 Pilate called the hye prestes, and the rulers, and the people together, and sayde vnto thē: "Ye haue brought this man vnto me, as one that peruerteth the people, and beholde, I haue examyned him before you, ⁊ fynde in the mā none of the causes, wherof ye accuse him: Nor yet Herode: for I sent you to him, and beholde, there is brought vpon hi nothinge, that is worthy of death. ¶ Therefore wil I chasten him, and let him lowse: For he must haue let one lowse vnto them after the custome of the feast.

"Then cried the whole multitude, and sayde: Awaye with him, and delyuer vnto vs Barrabas, which for insurreccion made in the cite, and because of a murthur, was cast in to preson. Then called Pilate vnto them agayne, ⁊ wolde haue let Iesus lowse. But they cried, and sayde: Crucifye him, Crucifye him. Yet sayde he vnto them, the thirde tyme: What euell thē hath he done? I fynde no cause of death in hi, therefore wil I chasten him, and let him go. But they laye styll vpon him with greate crye, and requyred þy he might be crucified. And the voyce of thē and of the hye preastes preuayled.

⁴ And Pilate gaue sentence, that it shulde be as they requyred, and let lowse vnto thē, him, that for insurreccio and murthur was cast in to preson, whom they desyred, but gaue Iesus ouer vnto their wyll. And as they led him awaye, they toke one Simon of Cyren (which came from the felde) "and layed þy crosse vpon him, to beare it after Iesus.

⁵ And there folowed him a greate multitude of people and of women, which bewayled and lamented him. But Iesus turned him aboute vnto thē, and sayde: Ye daughters of Ierusalē, wepe not ouer me: but wepe ouer youre selues, and ouer youre childrē. For beholde, the tyme wil come, wherin it shal be sayde: Blessed are the baren, and the wombes that haue not borne, and the pappes that haue not geuen sucke.¶ Then shal they begynne to saye vnto the mountaynes: Fall vpon vs. And to the hylles: Couer vs. For yf this be done to a grene tre, what shal be done then to the drye?

⁶ And two other (which were myszdoers) were led out also, to be put to death with him. And whā they came to þy place, which is called Caluery, they crucified him euen there, and the two myszdoers with him, the one on the righte hande, the other on þy left. But Iesus sayde: "Father, forgeue them, for they wote not what they do. And they parted his garmētes, and cast lottes therfore. And the people stode and behelde.

And the rulers mocked him with them, and sayde: He hath helped other, let him helpe him self now, yf he be Christ þy chosen of God. The soudyers also mocked him, wēte vnto him, ⁊ brought him vyner, and sayde: Yf thou be the kyng of the Iewes, then helpe thyself. And aboute ouer him was this superscripcio⁷ wrytten with letters of Greke, Latyn, and Hebrue: This is the kyng of the Iewes.

and founde not his body, came and tolde, that they had sene a visiō of angels, which sayde he was alyue. And certayne of them that were with vs, wente vnto the sepulchre, and founde it euen so as ſ wemē sayde, but hi founde they not.

C And he sayde vnto thē: O ye fooles and slowe of hert to beleue all that the prophetes haue spokē? *Ought not Christ to haue suffred these thinges, and to entre in to his glory? And he beganne at Moses and at all the prophetes, and expounded vnto them all the scriptures, that were spoken of him. And they drue nye vnto the towne, which they wētē vnto, and he made as though he wolde haue gone farther. †And they compelled him, and sayde: Abyde with vs, for it draweth towardes night, and the daye is farre passed. And he wente in to tary with thē. And it came to passe whan he sat at the table with thē, he toke the bred, gaue thanks, brake it, and gaue it them. Then were their eyes opened, and they knewe him. And he vanyshe out of their sight. And they sayde, betwene thē selues: Dyd not oure hert burne with in vs, whan he talked with vs by the waye, whye he opened the scriptures vnto vs? And they rose vp the same houre, turned agayne to Ierusalem, and founde ſ eleuē gathered together, and them that were with them, which sayde: The LORDE is rysen of a trueth, and hath appeared vnto Symon. And they tolde thē what had happened by ſ waye, and how they knewe him in breakynge of the bred.

“But whye they were talkynge therof, Iesus himself stode in the myddes amonge thē, and sayde: Peace be with you. But they were abashed and afraied, supposinge that they had sene a sprete. And he saide vnto thē: D Why are ye abashed? ¶ wherfore ryse there soch thoughtes in youre hertes? Beholde my hādes ¶ my fete, it is euen I my self. Handle me, and se, for a sprete hath not flesh and bones, as ye se me haue. And whan he had thus spokē, he shewed thē his hōdes and his fete. But whye they yet beleued not for ioye and wondred, he sayde vnto them: ¶ Haue ye eny thinge here to eate? And they set before him a pece of a broyled fish, and an hony combe. And he toke it, and ate it before thē.

And he sayde vnto them: †These are the wordes, which I spake vnto you, whye I was yet with you. For it must all be fulfilled that was wrytten of me in the lawe of Moses, in the prophetes, ¶ in the Psalmes. Thē opened he their vnderstandinge, that they might vnderstonde the scriptures, and sayde vnto them: ¶ Thus is it wryttē, and thus it behoued Christ to suffre, ¶ the thirde daye to ryse agayne frō the deed, and to let repentance and remysion of synnes be preached in his name amōge all nacions,¶ and to begynne at Ierusalē. As for all these thinges, ye are wytnesses of thē. And beholde, ¶ I wil sende vpon you the ¶ promes of my father: but ye shal tary in the cite of Ierusalem, tyll ye be endewed with power from aboue.

¶ But he led them out vnto Bethany, and lift vp his handes, and blessed them. And it came to passe whā he blessed them, he departed from them, and was caried vp in to heauen. And they worshipped him, and turned agayne to Ierusalem with greate ioye and were contynually in ſ tēple, geuyng prayse and thanks vnto God. Amen.

The ende of the gospell of S. Luke.

The gospell of S. Ihon.

What S. Ihons gospell conteyneth.

Chap. I.—The euerlasting byrth of the sonne of God, and how he became man. The testimony of Ihon and of his baptyme. The callinge of Andrew, Peter, Philip and Nathanael.

Chap. II.—Christ turneth the water vnto wyne at the mariage in Cana, and dryueth the marchauntes out of the temple.

Chap. III.—The swete talkinge of Christ with Nicodemus. The doctryne & baptyme of Ihō, and what wytnesse he beareth of Christ.

Chap. IIII.—The lounge communicacion of Christ with the woman of Samaria by the welles syde. How he commeth in to Galile, and healeth the rulers sonne.

Chap. V.—He healeth the man that was sicke eight & thirtie yere. The Iewes accuse him as a breaker of the Sabbath: he answereth for him self, and reproveth them.

Chap. VI.—Iesus fedeth fyue thousande men with fyue barlye Loaves, departeth awaye, that they shulde not make him kynge, goeth vpō the see, and reproveth the fleshly hearers of his worde. The carnall are offended at hī, and forsake him.

Chap. VII.—Iesus commeth to Ierusalē at the feast, teacheth the Iewes and reproveth thē: The pharises & the hye prestes hearinge that the people begynne to fauour Christ and to beleue in him, sende out officers to take hī. There are dyuerse opinions of him amōge the people. The pharises rebuke the officers because they haue not taken him, and chyde with Nicodemus for takinge his parte.

Chap. VIII.—A woman is taken in adoutrie: Christ delyuereth her. The fredome of such as folowe Christ, whom they accuse to haue the deuel within him, and go aboute to stone him.

Chap. IX.—Christ maketh the man to se that was borne blynde, where thorow he getteth him self more displeasure amonge the Iewes and Pharises.

Chap. X.—Christ is the true shepherde, and the dore of the shepe. Some saye: Christ hath the deuell, and is madd, some saye: he speaketh not the wordes of one that hath the deuell. Because he telleth the trueth, the Iewes take vp stones to cast at him, call his preachinge blasphemy, and go aboute to take him.

Chap. XI.—Christ rayseth Lazarus frō death. The hye prestes & the pharysees gather a counsell, and cast their heades together agaynst him, therefore he getteth him out of the waye.

Chap. XII.—Mary anyonteth Christes fete, Iudas murmureth, Christ excuseth her, rydeth in to Ierusalem, and is lounge receaued of the thankfull, but vtterly despyed of the vngodly.

Chap. XIII.—Christ washeth the disciples fete, telleth them of Iudas the traytoure, and commaundeth thē earnestly to loue one another.

Chap. XIIIII.—He armeth his disciples with consolacion agaynst trouble for to come, taketh frō thē the heynesne that they had because of his departinge, and promiset them the holy goost, the spirite of comforte.

Chap. XV.—The true vyne, the huszbandman & the braunches. A doctryne of loue, and a swete comforte agaynst persecucion.

Chap. XVI.—Cōsolacion agaynst trouble. Prayers are herde thorow Christ.

Chap. XVII.—The most hartely & louinge prayer of Christ vnto his father, for all such as receaue the trueth, and be his awne.

Chap. XVIII.—Christ is betrayed. The wordes of his mouth smyte the officers to the grounde. Peter smyteth of Malchus eare. Iesus is brought before Anna, Caiphās, and Pilate.

Chap. XIX.—Christ is crucified. He commendeth his mother vnto Ihon, sheddeth his bloude, and is buried.

Chap. XX.—The resurreccion of Christ, which appeareth to Mary Magdalene and to all his disciples, to their greate comforte.

Chap. XXI.—He appeareth to his disciples agayne by the see of Tyberias, and commaundeth peter earnestly to fede his shepe.

The gospell of S. Ihon.

The first Chapter.

IN the begynnyng was the worde, and the worde was with God, and God was f worde. The same was in the begynnyng with God.* All thinges were made by the same, and without the same was made nothinge that was made. In him was the f life, and the life was the f light of men: and the light shyneth in the darknesse, and the darknesse comprehended it not.

There was sent from God a man, whose name was Ihon. The same came for a witnessse, to beare witnessse of f light, that thorow him they all might beleue. f He was not that light, but that he might beare witnessse of f light. That was the true light, which lighteth all men, that come in to this worlde. He was in the worlde, t the worlde was made by him, and f worlde knewe him not. He came in to his awne, and his awne receaued him not. But as many as receaued him, t to them gaue he power to be the children of God: euen such as beleue in his name. Which are not borne of bloude, ner of the wyl of the flesh, ner of the wyl of man, but of God.

33 a And the worde became flesh, and dwelt amonge vs: f and we sawe his glory, a glory as of the onely begottē sonne of the father, full of grace and trueth.

Ihon bare witnessse of him, cryed, and sayde: f It was this, of whom I spake: After me shal he come, that was before me, For he was or euer I: and  of his fulnesse haue all we receaued grace for grace. For the lawe was geuen by Moses, grace and trueth came by Iesus Christ. c No man hath sene God at eny tyme. The onely begottē sonne which is in the bosome of the father, he hath declared the same vnto vs.

And this is the recorde of Ihon, when the Iewes sent prestes and Leuites frō Ierusalem, to axe him: Who art thou? And t he confessed and denyed not. And he confessed, and sayde: I am not Christ. And they axed him: What thē? Art thou Elias? He sayde: I am not. Art thou the t Prophet? And he answered: No. Then sayde they vnto him: What art thou thē, f we maye geue answer vnto thē that sent vs? What sayest thou of thy self? He sayde: f I am f voyce of a cryer in the wyldernesse. Make straight f waye of the LORDE. §§ As f prophet Esay sayde.

And they that were sent, were of f Pharises. C And they axed him, t sayde vnto him: Why baptysest thou then, yf thou be not Christ, ner Elias, ner a prophet? Ihon answered them, and sayde: f I baptyse with water, but there is one come in amonge you, whom ye knowe not. It is he that cometh after me, which was before me: whose shue lachet I am not worthy to vnlowse. This was done at Bethabara beyonde Iordane, t where Ihon dyd baptyse.

The nexte daye after, Ihon sawe Iesus commynge vnto him, and sayde: Beholde the f labe of God, which taketh awaye the synne of the worlde. This is he, of whom I sayde vnto you: After me commeth a man, which was before me. For he was or euer I, and I knewe him not: but that he shulde be declared in Israel, therefore am I come to baptysse with water.

¶ And Ihon bare recorde, ⁊ sayde: "I sawe the sprete descende from heauen like vnto a doue, and abode vpon him, ⁊ I knewe him not. But he that sent me to baptysse with water, ⁊ same sayde vnto me: Vpon whom thou shalt se the sprete descende and tary styll on him, the same is he, that baptyseth with the holy goost. And I sawe it, and bare recorde, that this is the sonne of God.

The nexte daye after, Ihon stode agayne, and two of his disciples. And whā he sawe Iesus walkynge, he sayde: Beholde the *lābe of God. And two of his disciples herde him speake, and folowed Iesus. And Iesus turned him aboute, and sawe them folowinge, and sayde vnto thē: What seke ye? They sayde vnto him: Rabbi, (which is to saye by interpretation, Master.) Where art thou at lodginge? He sayde vnto them: Come and se it. They came and sawe it, ⁊ abode with him the same daye. It was aboute the tenth houre.

One of the two, which herde Ihon speake, and folowed Iesus, was Andrew the brother of Symon Peter: the same founde first his brother Symon, and sayde vnto him: We haue founde Messias (which is by interpretation, ⁊ Anoynted) and brought him to Iesus. Whan Iesus behelde him, he sayde: Thou art Symon the sonne of Ionas,† thou shalt be called Cephas, which is by interpretation, a stone.

¶ The nexte daye after, wolde Iesus go agayne in to Galile, and founde Philippe, and sayde vnto him: † Folowe me. Philippe was of Bethsaida the cite of Andrew and Peter. Philippe founde Nathanael, and sayde vnto him: We haue founde him, of whō‡ Moses in the lawe, and ⁊ § prophetes haue wrytten, euen Iesus the sonne of Ioseph of Nazareth. And Nathanaell sayde vnto him: ¶ What good can come out of Nazareth? Philippe sayde vnto him: Come, and se.

Iesus sawe Nathanael cōmyng to him, and sayde of him: Beholde, a righte Israelite, in whom is no gyle. Nathanael sayde vnto him: From whence knowest thou me? Iesus answered, and sayde vnto him: Before ⁊ Philippe called the, whan thou wast vnder the fygge tre, I sawe the. Nathanaell answered, and sayde vnto hī: Rabbi, thou art ⁊ sonne of God, thou art ⁊ kyng of Israel. Iesus answered, ⁊ sayde vnto him: Because I sayde vnto the, that I sawe the vnder the fygge tre, thou beleuest: thou shalt se yet greater thinges thē these. And he sayde vnto him: Verely verely I saye vnto you:¶ Frō this tyme forth shal ye se the heauen open, and the angels of God goinge vp ⁊ downe ouer the sonne of man.

The ij. Chapter.

¶ AND vpon the thirde daye there was a ¶ marriage at Cana in Galile, and the mother of Iesus was there. Iesus also and his disciples was called vnto ⁊ marriage. And whan the wyne fayled, the mother of Iesus saide vnto him: They haue no wyne. Iesus sayde vnto her: ¶ Womā, what haue I to do with the? Myne houre is not yet come. His mother sayde vnto ⁊ mynisters: Whatsoeuer he sayeth vnto you, do it. There were set there sixe water pottes of stone, after ⁊ maner of the purifieng of ⁊ Iewes, euery one cōteyninge two or thre measures.

Iesus sayde vnto thē: Fyll the water pottes with water. And they fylled thē vp to ⁊ brymme. And he sayde vnto thē: Drawe out now, ⁊ brynge vnto the Master of the feast. And they bare it. Whā the master of ⁊ feast had taisted ⁊ wyne which had bene water, and knewe not whence it came (but the mynisters that drue ⁊ water, knewe it) the Master of the feast called the brydegrome, and sayde vnto him: Euery man at the first geueth the good wyne: ⁊ whan they are dronken, thē that which is worse. But thou hast kepte backe the good wyne vntyll now.

This is the first token that Iesus dyd at Cana in Galile, and shewed his glory, and his disciples beleued on him. ¶ Afterwarde wente he downe to Capernaum, he, his mother, his brethrē, and his disciples, and taried not longe there.

¶ And the Iewes Easter was at hande. And Iesus wēte vp to Ierusalem, and founde syttinge in the tēple, those that solde oxen, shepe, and doues, and chaungers of money.

His disciples remembered it, that is writtē: *The zeale of thine house hath euen eaten me.

Then answered the Iewes, and sayde vnto him: "What token shewest thou vnto vs, that thou mayest do these thinges? Iesus answered and sayde vnto thē: "Breake downe this temple, and in thre dayes wil I set it vp agayne. Then sayde the Iewes: "Sixe and fourtye yere was this temple abyldinge, and wilt thou set it vp in thre dayes? But he spake of y^e tēple of his body. Now whā he was rysen agayne from the deed, his disciples remembered that he thus sayde, and they beleued the scripture, and the wordes which Iesus spake.

Whā he was at Ierusalē at Easter in y^e feast, many beleued on his name, when they sawe y^e tokēs y^e he dyd. But Iesus cōmytted not himself vnto thē, for he knewe thē all, and neded not y^e eny mā shulde testifie of man, y^e for he knewe well what was in man.

The iij. Chapter.

THERE was a man of the Pharises, named Nicodemus^a a ruler amōge the Iewes. The same came vnto Iesus by night, and sayde vnto hi: Master, we knowe y^e thou art come a teacher frō God: for l^o mā can do these tokēs y^e thou doest, excepte God be with him. Iesus answered, and sayde vnto him: Verely verely I saye vnto the: Excepte a man be borne a new, he can not se the kyngdome of God. Nicodemus sayde vnto him: How can a man be borne, whan he is olde? Can he entre in to his mothers wombe, and be borne agayne? Iesus answered: Verely verely I saye vnto the: ¶ Excepte a mā be borne of water and of the sprete, he can not come in to y^e kyngdome of God.

 That which is borne of flesh, is flesh: and that which is borne of the sprete, is sprete. Maruell not, that I sayde vnto y^e: Ye must be borne of new. The wynde bloweth where he wyl, and thou hearest his sounde: ^{††}but thou canst not tell whēce he cometh, and whither he goeth. So is euery one, that is borne of the sprete.

Nicodemus answered, and sayde vnto him: How maye these be? Iesus answered, and sayde vnto hi: Art thou a Master in Israel, and knowest not these? Verely I saye vnto y^e: We speake that we knowe, and testifie that we haue sene, and ye receaue not oure wyttesse. Yf ye beleue not whan I tell you of earthly thinges, how shulde ye beleue, whā I speake vnto you of heauenly thinges?

^{††} And noman ascendeth vp in to heauen, but he that is come downe from heauē, (namely) the sonne of man which is in heauen. [†] And like as Moses lift vp the serpent in the wyldernes, euen so must the sonne of man be lift vp, that who so euer beleueth in him, shulde not perish, but haue euerlasting life.

[†] For God so loued the worlde, that he gaue his onely sonne, that who so euer beleueth in hi, shulde not perishe, but haue euerlasting life. ^{§§} For God sent not his sonne in to y^e worlde to condempne the worlde, but that the worlde might be saued by him. He that beleueth on him, shal not be cōdemned. But he that beleueth not, is cōdemned already: because he beleueth not on the name of the onely sonne of God. But this is y^e cōdempnacion, [†] that the light is come in to the worlde, and men loued the darknesse more thē y^e light: for their workes were euell. Whoso euer doth euell, hateth the light, and cometh not to the light, that his dedes shulde not be reprobud. But he that doth the truth, cometh to the light, that his workes maye be knowne: for they are done in God.

Afterwarde came Iesus and his disciples in to the lōde of Iewry, and had his beyng there with them, and [†] baptysed. ^{|||} Ihon baptysed also in Enon besyde Salem: for there was moch water there. And they came thither, and were baptysed: for Ihon was not yet put in preson.

Then wente they out of the cite, and came vnto him: In the meane whyle his disciples prayed him, and sayde: Master, eate. But he sayde vnto them: I haue meate to eate, that ye knowe not of. Then sayde the disciples amōge them selues: Hath eny man brought him meate? Iesus sayde vnto the: My meate is this, that I do the wyll of him that sent me, and to finish his worke. Saye not ye youre selues: There are yet foure monethes, and then cometh the haruest? Beholde, I saye vnto you: lift vp youre eyes, and loke vpon the felde, *for it is whyte already vnto the haruest.

¶ And he that reapeth, receaueth rewarde, and gathereth frute to euerlastinge life, that both he that soweth and he that reapeth, maye reioyse together. For herin is the proverbe true: One soweth, another reapeth. I haue sent you to reape that, wheron ye bestowed no laboure. Other haue laboured, and ye are come in to their laboures.

Many Samaritans of the same cite beleued on him, for the sayenge of the woman, which testified: He hath tolde me all that euer I dyd. Now whan the Samaritans came to him, they besought him, that he wolde tary with them. And he abode there two dayes, and many mo beleued because of his worde, and sayde vnto the woman: We beleue now hence forth, not because of thy sayenge, †we haue herde him oureselues, and knowe, that this of a trueth is Christ the Sauoure of the worlde.

After two dayes he departed thence, and wente in to Galile. ‡For Iesus himself testified, that a prophet is nothinge set by at home. Now whā he came in to Galile, the Galileās receaued him, which had sene all that he dyd at Ierusalem in the feast: for they also were come thither in the feast. And Iesus came agayne vnto Cana in Galile,§ where he turned the water vnto wyne.

¶ And there was a certayne ruler, whose sonne laye sicke at Capernaum. This herde that Iesus came out of Iewry in to Galile, and wente vnto him, and besought him, that he wolde come downe, and helpe his sonne, for he laye deed sicke. And Iesus sayde vnto him: Excepte ye se tokens and wonders, ye beleue not. The ruler sayde vnto him: Come downe Syr, or euer my childe dye. Iesus sayde vnto him: Go thy waye, thy sonne lyueth. The man beleued the worde, that Iesus sayde vnto him, and wente his waye. And as he was goinge downe, his seruantes mett him, and tolde him, and sayde: Thy childe lyueth. Then enquired he of them the houre, wherin he beganne to amende. And they sayde vnto him: Yesterdaye aboute the seuth houre the feuer left him. Then the father perceaued, that it was aboute the same houre, wherin Iesus sayde vnto him: Thy sonne lyueth.¶ And he beleued with his whole house. This is now the seconde token that Iesus dyd, whan he came from Iewry in to Galile.

The 6. Chapter.

AFTERWARDE, there was a feast of the Iewes, and Iesus wente vp to Ierusalem. There is at Ierusalem by the slaughter house a pole, which in Hebrue is called Bethesda, ¶ hath fyue porches, wherin laye many sicke, blynde, lame, wythred, which wayted, whan the water shulde moue. For the angell wente downe at his tyme in to the pole, and stered the water. Who so euer now wente downe first, after that the water was stered, ‡same was made whole, what soeuer disease he had. And there was a man, which had lyen sicke eight and thirtie yeares. Whan Iesus sawe him lye, ¶ knewe that he had lyen so long, he saide vnto him: Wilt thou be made whole? The sicke answered him: Syr, I haue no man, whan the water is moued, to put me in to the pole. And whan I come, another steppeth downe in before me.

Iesus sayde vnto him: Aryse, take vp thy bed, and go thy waye. And immediatly the man was made whole,¶ and toke vp his bed and wente his waye. * But vpon the same daye it was the Sabbath. Then sayde the Iewes vnto him that was made whole: To daye is y^e Sabbath, it is not lafull for the to cary the bed. He answered them: He that made me whole, sayde vnto me: Take vp thy bed, and go thy waye. Then axed they him: What man is that, which sayde vnto the: Take vp thy bed, and go thy waye? But he that was healed, wyst not who he was: for Iesus + had gottē him self awaye, because there was moche people.

33 Afterwarde founde Iesus him in the tēple, and sayde vnto him: Beholde, thou art made whole, † synne nomore, lest a worse thinge happen vnto the. The mā departed, and tolde the Iewes, that it was Iesus, which had made hi whole. Therefore dyd y^e Iewes persecute Iesus, and sought to slaye him, because he had done this vpō y^e Sabbath.

But Iesus answered them: § My father worketh hither to, and I worke also. Therefore sought the Iewes the more to slaye hi: because he brake not onely y^e Sabbath, but said also, that God was his father, and made him self equall with God. Thē answered Iesus, and sayde vnto them: Verely verely I saye vnto you: || The sonne can do nothinge of himself, but that he seyth the father do. For what soeuer he doeth, that doeth y^e sonne also. The father loueth the sonne, & sheweth him all that he doth, and wyll shewe him yet greater workes, so that ye shal marueyle. For as the father rayseth vp the deed, and maketh them lyue, euē so the sonne also maketh lyuynge whom he wyll. For the father iudgeth no man, but ¶ hath geuen all iudgmēt vnto the sonne, that they all might honour the sonne, euen as they honourē y^e father. Who so honoureth not the sonne, the same honoureth not the father which hath sent him.

C Verely verely I saye vnto you: Who so heareth my worde, * and beleueth him that sent me, hath euerlastinge life, and  cōmeth not in to damnacion, but is passed thorow from death vnto life.

Verely verely I saye vnto you: †† The houre cōmeth, & is now allready, y^e the deed shal

For ‡ as the father hath life in him self, so likewise hath he geuen vnto the sonne, to haue life in him self: & hath geuē hi power also to execute iudgmēt because he is the sonne of mā. Maruaile not ye at this: §§ for y^e houre cōmeth, in y^e which all that are in y^e graues, shal heare his voyce, and shal go forth, they that haue done good, vnto the resurreccion of life: but they that haue done euell, vnto the resurreccion of damnacion.

I can do nothinge of my self. As I heare, so I iudge: & my iudgmēt is iust. For I seke not myne owne wyll, but the wyll of the father which hath sent me. ||| Yf I beare wytnesse of my self, my wytnesse is not true. There is another that beareth wytnesse of me, and I am sure, that the wytnesse which he beareth of me, is true.

¶¶ Ye sent vnto Ihon, and he bare wytnes of the trueth. As for me, I take no recorde of mā, but these thinges I saye, that ye might be saued. He was a burnynge and shynynge light, but ye wolde haue reioysed a litle whyle in his light. Neuertheles I haue a greater wytnesse then the wytnesse of Ihon. For the workes* which the father hath geuē me to fynish, the same workes which I do, beare wytnesse of me, that the father hath sent me. And y^e father him self which hath sent me, beareth wytnesse of me. Ye haue nether herde his voyce at eny tyme, ner sene his shappe: and his worde haue ye not abydinge in you, for ye beleue not him, whom ye hath sent.

The vi. Chapter.

AFTER this wente Iesus ouer the see vnto the cite Tiberias in Galilee. And moch people folowed him, because they sawe the tokens that he dyd vpon thē which were diseased. But Iesus wēte vp in to a mountayne, and there he sat with his disciples. And Easter & feast of the Iewes was nye. Then Iesus lift vp his eyes, and sawe y there came moch people vnto him, and he sayde vnto Philippe: Whence shal we bye bred, y these maye eate? But this he sayde to proue him, for he himself knewe, what he wolde do.

Philippe answered him: Two hundreth peny worth of bred is not ynough amonge thē, y euery one maye take a litle. Thē sayde vnto hī one of his disciples, Andrew y brother of Symō Peter: There is a lad here, y hath fyue barlye loaues, and two fishes, but what is that amōge so many? Iesus sayde: Make the people syt downe. There was moch grasse in the place. Then they sat thē downe, aboute a fyue thousande men. Iesus toke the loaues, thanked, and gaue them to the disciples: the disciples (gaue) to them that were set downe. Likewyse also of the fishes as moch as they wolde.

Whan they were fylled, he sayde vnto his disciples: Gather vp the broken meate that remaineth, that nothinge be lost. Thē they gathered, and fylled twolue baskettes with the brokē meate, that remainyd of the fyue barlye loaues, vnto them which had eaten. Now whan the men sawe the token y Iesus dyd, they saide: † This is of a trueth the Prophet, y shulde come into the world. Whan Iesus now perceaued that they wolde come, and take him vp, to make him kynge, he gat him awaye agayne in to a mountayne himself alone.

At euen wente his disciples downe to y see, and entred in to the shippe, and came to the other syde of y see vnto Capernaū. And it was darcke already. And Iesus was not come to thē. And y see arose thorow a greate wynde. Now whan they had rowed vpō a fyue and twētie or thirtie furlonges, they sawe Iesus goinge vpon the see, and came nye to the shippe. And they were afraied. But he sayde vnto them: It is I, be not afraied. Then wolde they haue receaued him in to y shippe. And immediatly y shippe was at the londe whither they wente.

The nexte daye after, the people which stode on the other syde of the see, sawe that there was none other shippe there saue that one, wherinto his disciples were entred: and that Iesus wēte not in with his disciples in to the shippe, but y his disciples were gone awaie alone. Howbeit there came other shippes from Tiberias, nye vnto y place where they had eatē the bred, after y the LORDE had geuen thanks. Now whan the people sawe that Iesus was not there, nether his disciples, they toke shippe also, and came to Capernaum, and sought Iesus.

And whan they founde him on the other syde of the see, they sayde vnto him: Master, whan camest thou hither? Iesus answered thē, & sayde: Verely verely I saye vnto you: Ye seke me not because ye sawe y tokē, but because ye ate of the loaues, and were fylled. Laboure not for the meate which perisheth but y endureth vnto euerlastinge life, which the sonne of mā shal geue you: For him hath God the father sealed.

Thē sayde they vnto him: What shal we do, that we maye worke y workes of God? Iesus answered, and sayde vnto thē: This is the worke of God, that ye beleue on him, whom he hath sent. Then sayde they vnto him: y What token doest thou thē, that we maye se and beleue y? What workest thou? Oure fathers ate Māna in the wyldernes, as it is wryttē: † He gaue thē bred frō heauen to eate. Then sayde Iesus vnto thē: Verely verely I saye vnto you: Moses gaue you not bred from heauē, but my father geueth you the true bred from heauen: For this is that bred of God, which commeth from heauen, and geueth life vnto the world.

Thē sayde they vnto him: † Syr, geue vs allwaye soch bred. But Iesus sayde vnto thē: I am y bred of life. He that cometh vnto me, shal not hūger: & he that beleueth on me, shal neuer thyrst. But I haue sayde vnto you, y ye haue sene me, and yet ye beleue not. All that my father geueth me, cometh vnto me: and who so cometh vnto me, him wyl not I cast out: for I am come downe from heauē, not to do myne awne wyll, but the wyll of him that hath sent me.^e

E This is \hat{y} will of the father, which hath sent me,^b that of all that he hath geue me, I shulde lose nothinge, but shulde rayse it vp agayne at the last daye. This is the wyl of him which hath sent me,^c that, who soeuer seyth the sonne and beleueth on him, haue euerlastinge life, and I shal rayse him vp at the last daye.

The murmured the Iewes ther ouer, that he sayde: I am \hat{y} bred which is come downe from heauē, and they sayde: Is not this Iesus, Iosephs sonne, whose father and mother we knowe? How sayeth he then, I am come downe from heauen? Iesus answered, and sayde vnto them: Murmur not amonge youre selues. ^aNo man can come vnto me, excepte the father which hath sent me, drawe him. And I shal rayse him vp at the last daye. It is written in the prophetes:^d They shal all be taught of God. Who so euer now heareth it of the father, and lerneth it, cometh vnto me.

^f Not that eny man hath sene the father, saue he which is of the father, the same hath sene the father.

J Verely verely I saye vnto you:^g He that beleueth on me, hath euerlastinge life. I am that bred of life. Your fathers ate Manna in the wyldernes, and are deed. This is that bred which cometh from heauen, that who so eateth therof, shulde not dye. I am that luyunge bred, which came downe frō heauen: Who so eateth of this bred, shal lyue for euer. And the bred that I wil geue, is my flesh \hat{y} which I wil geue for \hat{y} life of the worlde.

Then stroue the Iewes amonge them selues, and sayde: How cā this felowe geue vs his flesh to eate? Iesus sayde vnto the: Verely verely I saye vnto you: Excepte ye eate \hat{y} flesh of \hat{y} sonne of man and drynke his bloude, ye haue no life in you. Who so eateth my flesh, and drynketh my bloude, hath euerlastinge life: and I shal rayse him vp at the last daye. For my flesh is \hat{y} very meate, and my bloude is \hat{y} very drynke. Who so eateth my flesh, and drynketh my bloude,^e abyde in me, and I in him. As the luyunge father hath sent me, and I lyue for the fathers sake: Euen so he that eateth me, shal lyue for my sake. This is \hat{y} bred which is come frō heauen: Not as youre fathers ate Manna, and are deed. He that eateth of this bred, shal lyue for euer.

G These thinges sayde he in the synagoge, whā he taught at Capernaum. Many now of his disciples that herde this, sayde: This is an harde sayenge, who maye abyde the hearynge of it? But when Iesus perceaued in hi self, that his disciples murmured therat he sayde vnto them: Doth this offende you? What and yf ye shal se the sonne of man ascende vp thither, where he was afore? It is \hat{y} sprete that quyckeneth, \hat{y} flesh profiteth nothinge. The wordes that I speake, are sprete, and are life. But there are some amōge you, that beleue not. For Iesus knewe well from the begynnyng, which they were that beleued not, and who shulde betraye him. And he sayde: Therefore haue I sayde vnto you:^h No man can come vnto me, excepte it be geuen him of my father.

From that tyme forth, many of his disciples wente backe, and walked nomore with him. Then sayde Iesus vnto the twolue: Wyll ye also go awaye? Then answered Simon Peter: LORDE, Whither shal we go? Thou hast the wordes of euerlastinge life: and we haue beleued \hat{g} knowne, that thou art Christ the sonne of the luyunge God. Iesus answered them. Haue I not chosen you twolue, and one of you is a deuell? But he spake of Iudas Symon Iscariot: the same betrayed him afterwarde, and was one of the twolue.

The viij. Chapter.

AFTER that wente Iesus aboute in Galile, A for he wolde not go aboute in Iewry, because the Iewes sought to kyll him. But the Iewes feast of Tabernaclesⁱ was at hande. Then sayde his brethren vnto him: Get the hēce, and go in to Iewry, that thy disciples also maye se thy workes, that thou doest. He that seketh to be openly knowne, doth nothinge in secrete. Then sayde Iesus vnto them: My tyme is not yet come, but youre tyme is allwaye ready. Then the worlde can not hate you, but me it hateth: because I testifie of it, that the workes of it are euell. Go ye vp vnto this feast, I wyll not go vp yet vnto this feast, for my tyme is not yet fulfilled. When he sayde this vnto them, he abode styll in Galile. But as soone as his brethren were gone vp, then wente he vp also vnto the feast, not openly, but as it were secretly. Then sought him ¶ Iewes at ¶ feast, and sayde: †Where is he? And there was a greate murmur of him amonge the people. Some sayde: He is good. But other sayde: No, he doth but disceauce the people. †Howbeit no man spake frely of him, for feare of the Iewes.

¶ But in the myddes of the feast wete Iesus vp in to the temple, and taught. And the Iewes marueyled and sayde: How can he ¶ scripture, seynge he hath not lerned it? Iesus answered them, and sayde: My doctryne is not myne, but his that hath sent me. Yf eny man wyl do his will, he shal knowe, whether this doctryne be of God, or whether I speake of my self. He that speaketh of himself, seeketh his awne prayse: but he that seeketh the prayse of him that sent him, the same is true, ¶ there is no vnrighteousnes in him. †Hath not Moses geuen you the lawe, and none of you kepeth the lawe? Why go ye aboute to kyll me? The people answered, and sayde: Thou hast the deuell, who goeth aboute to kyll the? Iesus answered and sayde: †One worke haue I done, and ye all maruayle. Moses gaue you the circumcision, (not because it cometh of Moses, but of ¶ fathers:) Yet do ye circumcyse a man vpon the Sabbath. Yf a man receaue circūcision vpon the Sabbath, that the lawe of Moses shulde not be broken, diszdayne ye then at me, because I haue made a mā euery whyt whole on the Sabbath? †Iudge not after the vtter appearance, but iudge righteous iudgment.

¶ Then sayde some of them of Ierusalem: Is not this he, whō they go aboute to kyll? And beholde, he speaketh boldly, and they saye nothinge to him. Do oure rulers knowe in dede, that he is very Christ? Howbeyt ¶

we knowe, whence this is. But whā Christ cometh, no man shal knowe whence he is.

¶ Then cryed Iesus in the temple as he taught, and sayde: Yee ye knowe me, and whence I am ye knowe, ¶ and of my self am I not come, but he ¶ sent me, is true, whom ye knowe not. But I knowe him, for I am of him, and he hath sent me. Then sought they to take him, ¶ but no man layed handes vpon him, for his houre was not yet come. ¶ But many of the people beleued on him, and sayde: Whan Christ cometh, shall he do mo tokens, then this doth?

¶ And it came to the Pharises eares, ¶ that ¶ people murmured soch thinges of him. And the Pharises and hye prestes sent out seruantes, to take him. Then sayde Iesus vnto them: I am yet a litle whyle with you and then go I vnto him that hath sent me. Ye shal seke me, ¶ not fynde me: ¶ and where I am, thither can ye not come. Then sayde the Iewes amonge them selues: Whyther wil he go, that we shal not fynde him? Wyl he go amōge the Grekes that are scatred abroad, and teach the Grekes? What maner of sayenge is this, that he sayeth: ye shal seke me, and not fynde me: and where I am, thither can not ye come?

¶ But in the last daye which was ¶ most solempne daye of the feast, Iesus stode vp, cried, and sayde: ¶ Who so thyrsteth, let him come vnto me, and drynke. He that beleueth on me, as the scripture sayeth, out of his body shal flowe ryuers of the water of life. (But this spake he of the ¶ sprete, which they that beleue on him, shulde receaue. For the holy goost was not yet there, because Iesus was not yet glorified.) Many of the people now whan they herde this sayenge, sayde: This is a very prophet. ¶ Other sayde: ¶ He is Christ. But some sayde: Shal Christ come out of Galile? Sayeth not the scripture, ¶ that Christ shal come of the sede of Dauid, and out of the towne of ¶ Bethleem, where Dauid was? Thus was there disencion amonge the people for his sake. Some of them wolde haue taken him, but no man layed handes on him.

The viij. Chapter.

¶ IESUS wente vnto mount Oliuete,^b and early in the mornynge came he agayne in to the temple, and all the people came vnto him. And he sat downe, and taught them. And § scribes and Pharises brought vnto him a woman taken in adoutrye, and set her there openly, and sayde vnto him: Master, this woman was taken in adoutrye, euē as the dede was adoyng. ^c Moses in the lawe commaunded vs to stone soch. What sayest thou? This they sayde, to tempte him, that they might haue wherof to accuse him. But Iesus stouped downe, and wrote with his fynger vpō the grounde. Now whyle they contynued axynge him, he lift him self vp, and sayde vnto them: He that is amonge you without synne, let him cast the first stone at her. And he stouped downe agayne, and wrote vpon the grounde. But whan they herde that, they wente out, one after another: the eldest first, and left Iesus alone, and the woman standinge before him. Iesus lift himself vp, and whan he sawe noman but the woman, he sayde vnto her: Woman, where are thine accusers? Hath noman condemned the? She sayde: LORDE, no man. Iesus sayde: Nether do I cōdempne the,^d Go thy waye, and synne nomore.

¶ Then spake Iesus agayne vnto them, and sayde: I am the light of the worlde.^e He that foloweth me, shal not walke in darknesse, but shal haue the light of life. Then sayde the Pharises vnto him: Thou bearest recorde of thy self, thy recorde is not true.

Iesus answered, and sayde vnto them: Though I beare recorde of my self, yet my recorde is true: for I knowe whence I came, and whither I go: but ye can not tell whence I come, and whither I go. Ye iudge after the flesh, I iudge no man: but yf I iudge, my iudgment is true: for I am not alone, but I and the father that hath sent me. It is wrytten also in youre lawe, § that the testimony of two men is true. I am one that beare wytnesse of my self: And the father that sent me,^f beareth wytnes of me also. Then sayde they vnto him: Where is thy father? Iesus answered: ^g Ye nether knowe me ner yet my father. Yf ye knewe me, ye shulde knowe my father also. These wordes spake Iesus vpon the Godschest, as he taught in the tēple. And noman toke him,^h for his houre was not yet come.

Then sayde Iesus agayne vnto them: ⁱ I go my waye, and ye shal seke me, and shal dye in youre synnes: whither I go, thither can not ye come. Then sayde ^j Iewes: Wyl he kyll him self then, that he sayeth: whither I go, thither can not ye come? And he sayde vnto them: Ye are from beneth, I am from aboue: Ye are of this worlde, I am not of this worlde. Therefore haue I sayde vnto you, that ye shal dye in youre synnes. ¶ For yf ye beleue not that I am he, ye shal dye in youre synnes.

Then sayde they vnto him: Who art thou then? And Iesus sayde vnto thē: Euē the very same thinge that I saye vnto you. I haue many thinges to saye and to iudge of you. But he that sent me, is true: ^k and loke what I haue herde of him, that speake I before the worlde, Howbeit they vnderstode not, that he spake of the father.

Then sayde Iesus vnto them: Whan ye haue lift vp an hye the sonne of man, then shal ye knowe that I am he, and that I do nothinge of my self:^l but as my father hath taught me, euen so I speake. And he that sent me, is with me. The father leaueth me not alone, for I do alwaie that pleaseth him. Whan he thus spake, ^m many beleued on him. knowe the trueth, and the trueth shal make you * fre.

Then answered they him: We are Abrahams sede, we were neuer bonde to eny man, how sayest thou then: Ye shal be fre? Iesus answered them, and sayde: Verely verely I saye vnto you: † Who so euer doth synne, is the seruaunt of synne: As for the seruaunt, he abydeyth not in the house for euer, but the sonne abydeyth euer. Yf the sonne therfore make you fre, then are ye fre in dede. I knowe that ye are Abrahams sede, but ye seke to kyll me. For my worde taketh not amonge you. I speake that I haue sene of my father, & ye do that ye haue sene of youre father.

¶ They answered, and sayde vnto him: Abraham is oure father. Iesus sayde vnto them: Yf ye were Abrahams children, ye wolde do the dedes of Abraham. But now ye go aboute to kyll me, a man, that haue tolde you the trueth, ‡ which I haue herde of God, this dyd not Abraham. Ye do the dedes of youre father. Then sayde they vnto him: We are not borne of fornicacion, we haue one father, euen God. Iesus sayde vnto them: Yf God were youre father, then wolde ye loue me. For I am proceded forth, and come from God. For I am not come of my self, but he hath sent me. Why knowe ye not thē my speach? Euē because ye can not abyde the hearinge of my worde.

Ye are of the father the deuell, and after the lustes of youre father wyl ye do. § The same was a murthurer from the begynnyng, and abode not in the trueth: for the trueth is not in him. When he speaketh a lye, then speaketh he of his awne: for he is a lyar, and a father of the same. But because I saye the trueth, ye beleue me not.

Which of you can rebuke me of one synne? Yf I saye the trueth, why do ye not beleue me? ¶ He that is of God, heareth Gods worde. Therfore heare ye not, because ye are not of God.

¶ Then answered the Iewes, and sayde vnto him: Saye we not right, that thou art a Samaritane, ¶ and hast the deuell? Iesus answered: I haue no deuell, but I honour my father, and ye haue dishonoured me. I seke not myne awne prayse, but there is one that seketh it, and iudgeth. Verely verely I saye vnto you: * Yf eny man kepe my worde, he shal neuer se death.

Then sayde the Iewes vnto him: Now knowe we, that  thou hast the deuell. Abraham is deed and the prophetes, and thou sayest: Yf eny mā kepe my worde, he shal neuer taist of death. Art thou greater then oure father Abraham? which is deed, and the prophetes are deed? Whō makest thou thy self? Iesus answered: † Yf I prayse my self, then is my prayse nothinge. But it is my father that prayseth me, which ye saye is youre God, and ye knowe hi not: but I knowe him. And yf I shulde saye, I knowe him not, I shulde be a lyar, like vnto you. But I knowe him, and kepe his worde.

Abraham youre father was glad, that he shulde se my daye, ‡ And he sawe it, and reioysed. Then sayde the Iewes vnto him: Thou art not yet fiftie yeare olde, and hast thou sene Abraham? Iesus sayde vnto thē: Verely verely I saye vnto you: Or euer Abraham was, § I am. Then toke they vp stones, to cast at him. But Iesus hyd himself, and wente out of the temple.

The ix. Chapter.

AND Iesus passed by, and sawe a man ¶ that was borne blynde. And his disciples axed him, & sayde: Master, Who hath synned? this, or his elders, that he was borne blynde? Iesus answered: Nether hath this synned, ner his elders, ||| but that ¶ workes of God shulde be shewed on him. I must worke the workes of him that hath sent me, whyle it is daye. The night commeth, when no man can worke. As longe as I am in the worlde, I am the ¶¶ light of the worlde.

When he had thus sayde, he spat on the grounde, and made claye of the spetle, and rubbed the claye on the eyes of the blynde, and sayde vnto him: Go thy waye to the pole of  Syloha (which is interpreted, sent) and wash the. Then wete he his waye and washed him, and came seynge. The neighbours and they that had sene him before, that he was a begger, sayde: Is not this he that sat, and begged? Some sayde: It is he.

Other sayde: he is like him. But he himself sayde: I am euen he. Then sayde they vnto him: How are thine eyes opened? He answered, and sayde: The mā that is called Iesus, made claye, and anoynted myne eyes, and sayde: Go thy waye to the pole of Siloha, and wash the. I wente my waye, & washed me, and receaued my sight. Then sayde they vnto him: Where is he? He sayde: I can not tell.

33 Then brought they vnto the pharises, him that a litle before was blynde. *It was the Sabbath, whan Iesus made the claye, and opened his eyes. Then agayne the Pharises also axed him, how he had receaued his sight. He sayde vnto thē: He put claye vpon myne eyes, and I washsed me, & now I se.

Then sayde some of the pharises: This man is not of God, seynge he kepeth not ſ Sabbath. †But the other sayde: How can a synfull man do soch tokens? And there was a stryfe amonge thē. They sayde agayne vnto ſ blynde: What sayest thou of him, that he hath opened thine eyes? He sayde: he is a prophet.

The Iewes beleued not hī, that he was blynde, and had receaued his sight, tyll they called the elders of him, that had receaued his sight, and they axed them, and sayde: Is this youre sonne, whom ye saye, was borne blynde? How doth he now se then? His elders answered them, and sayde: We knowe, that this is oure sonne, and that he was borne blynde. But how he now seyth, we can not tell: or who hath opened his eyes, can we not tell. He is olde ynough himself, axe him, let him speake for him self.

Ⓒ This sayde his elders, because they feared the Iewes. †For the Iewes had conspyred already, that yf eny man dyd confesse that he was Christ, the same shulde be excommunicate. Therefore sayde his elders: He is olde ynough, axe him.

Then called they the mā agayne ſ was blynde, and sayde vnto him: ‡Geue God ſ prayse, we knowe that this man is a synner. He answered, & sayde: Whether he be a synner or no, I can not tell: one thinge am I sure off, that I was blynde, and now I se. Thē sayde they vnto him agayne: What dyd he vnto the? How opened he thine eyes?

He answered them: I tolde you right now. Herde ye it not? What, wil ye heare it agayne? Will ye also be his disciples? Then rayted they him, and sayde: Thou art his disciple. We are sure that God spake with Moses: As for this felowe, we know not whēce he is.

The man answered, and sayde vnto thē: D This is a maruelous thinge, that ye wote not whence he is, and he hath opened mine eyes. For we knowe that God heareth not ſ sinners: but yf eny mā be a fearer of God, and doth his will, him heareth he. Sens ſ worlde beganne was it not herde, that eny man opened the eyes of one that was borne blynde. Yf this man were not of God, he coulde haue done nothinge. They answered, and sayde vnto him: Thou art altogether borne in synne, and teachest thou vs? And they thrust him out.

Iesus herde, ſ they had thrust him out, and whā he had founde him, he sayde vnto him: Beleuest thou on the sonne of God? He answered, and sayde: LORDE, who is it, ſ I might beleue on him? Iesus sayde vnto him: Thou hast sene him, and he it is, that talketh with the. He sayde: LORDE, I beleue. And he worshipped him.

And Iesus sayde: I am come to iudgmēt in to this worlde, that they which se not, might se: and that they which se, might be made blynde. And some of the Pharises ſ were with him, herde this, and sayde vnto him: Are we then blynde also? Iesus sayde vnto thē: Yf ye were blynde, ye shulde haue no synne. But now that ye saye, we se, therefore youre synne remaineth.

him: for they knowe not the voyce of straungers. This prouerbe spake Iesus vnto them, but they vnderstode not what it was, that he sayde vnto them.

Then sayde Iesus vnto them agayne: Verely verely I saye vnto you: *I am the dore of the shepe. All they that are come before me, are theues and murthurers. But y shepe harkened not vnto them. I am the dore. Yf eny man entre in by me, he shalbe saued, and shal go in and out, and fynde pasture. A thefe cometh not, but for to steale, kyll, and destroye. I am come, y they might haue life, and haue it more abundantly.

B I am a good shepherde. A good shepherde geueth his life for the shepe. *But an hyred seruaunt, which is not the shepherde, nether the shepe are his awne, seyth y wolfe comynge, and leaueth y shepe, and flyeth. And the wolfe catcheth & scattereth y shepe. But the hyred seruaunt flyeth, because he is an hyred seruaunte, and careth not for the shepe. I am a good sheperde, †and knowe myne, and am knowne of myne. Euē as my father knoweth me, and I knowe y father. And †I geue my life for my shepe. And I haue yet other shepe, which are not of this folde, and those same must I brynge also, and they shal heare my voyce, and there shalbe one flocke and one shepherde.

Therefore doth my father loue me, because I leaue my life, that I maye take it agayne. No mā taketh it fro me, but I leaue it of my self. I haue power to leaue it, and haue power to take it agayne. This commaundement haue I receaued of my father. Then was there discension amōge the Iewes for these sayenges. †Many of the sayde: He hath the deuell, and is madd, why heare ye him? Other sayde: These are not wordes of one that is possessed. Can the deuell also open y eyes of the blynde?

C It was the dedicacion of the tēple at Ierusalem, † & was wynter, and Iesus walked in † Salomōs porche. The came y Iewes rounde aboute hī, & saide vnto hī: How lōge dost thou make vs doute? Yf thou be Christ, tell vs plainly. Iesus answered the: I tolde you, & ye beleue not. The workes y I do in my fathers name, they beare wytnesse of me. But ye beleue not, because ye are not of my shepe as I sayde vnto you. My shepe heare my voyce, & I knowe the, & they folowe me. And I geue the euerlastinge life, & they shal neuer perishe, and nomā shal plucke the out of my hande. My father which gaue the me, is greater the all: & noman is able to plucke them out of my fathers hande. †I and the father are one. Then the Iewes toke vp stones agayne, to stone him. Iesus answered the: Many good workes haue I shewed you fro my father, for which of the stone ye me?

The Iewes answered hī, and sayde: For the good worke sake we stone the not, but for the blasphemy: and because y thou beynge a man, makest thy self God. Iesus answered the: Is it not wyrtten in youre lawe: I haue sayde, Ye are Goddes?†† Yf he call them Goddes, vnto whom the worde of God came († the scripture can not be brokē) saye ye the vnto hī, whō y father hath sanctified & sent in to y worlde: †thou blasphemest God, because I sayde: I am y sonne of God? ††Yf I do not y workes of my father, beleue me not: but yf I do the, the (yf ye beleue not me) yet beleue y workes, y ye maye knowe & beleue, y the father is in me, & I in y father.

They wente aboute agayne to take him, but he escaped out of their hādes, and wēte awaye agayne beyōde Iordane, in to y place §§ where Ihō had baptysed before, & there he abode. And many came to hī, and sayde: Ihō dyd no tokēs, but all y Ihon spake of this man, is true. And many beleued on him there.

that he was sicke, he abode two dayes in ȝ place where he was.

After warde sayde he vnto his disciples: Let vs go agayne i to Iewry. His disciples sayde vnto him: Master, *lately wolde the Iewes haue stoned the, ȝ wilt thou go thither agayne? Iesus answered: Are there not twoules houres in ȝ daye? He ȝ walketh in the daye, stobleth not, for he seyeth ȝ light of this worlde. But he that walketh in the night, stöbleth: for there is no light in him.

13 This he spake, ȝ after warde sayde he vnto thē: Lazarus oure frende †slepeth, but I go to wake him out of slepe. Thē sayde his disciples: LORDE, yf he slepe, he shal do well ynough (Howbeyt Iesus spake of his death but they thought ȝ he had spokē of ȝ bodely slepe.) Thē sayde Iesus vnto thē planely: Lazarus is deed, ȝ I am glad for youre sakes, ȝ I was not there, that ye maye beleue. Neuertheles let vs go vnto hī. Thē sayde Thomas (which is called Didimus)* vnto ȝ disciples: Let vs go also, ȝ we maye dye with hī.

Thē came Iesus, ȝ founde ȝ he had lyen in ȝ graue fourē dayes already. Bethanye was nye vnto Ierusalē, aboutē fiftene furlōges. And many of the Iewes were come to Martha ȝ Mary, to cōforte thē ouer their brother. Now whā Martha herde ȝ Iesus came, she wēte to mete him. But Mary sat styl at home.

14 Thē sayde Martha vnto Iesus: LORDE, yf thou haddest bene here, †my brother had not bene deed. But neuertheles I knowe also, what soeuer thou axest of God, that God wyl geue it the. Iesus sayde vnto her: Thy brother shal ryse agayne. Martha sayde vnto hī: I knowe, ȝ he shal ryse agayne in the resurreccion at ȝ last daye. Iesus saide vnto her: I am the resurreccion ȝ the life.† He ȝ beleueth on me, shal lyue, though he were deed already: ȝ whosoever lyueth and beleueth on me, shal neuer dye. Beleuest thou this? She saide vnto him: Yee LORDE, I beleue, that thou art Christ the sonne of God, which shulde come in to the worlde. And whā she had sayde this, she wēte hir waye, ȝ called Mary hir sister secretly, ȝ saide: The maister is come, ȝ calleth for the. She whan she herde that, rose vp quickly, and came vnto him: For Iesus was not yet come in to ȝ towne, but was yet in the place, where Martha met him. The Iewes that were with her in the house and comforted her, whan they sawe Mary, that she rose vp haistely, ȝ wente out, they folowed her, ȝ saide: She goeth to the graue, to wepe there.

Now whā Mary came where Iesus was 15 ȝ sawe him, she fell downe at his fete, ȝ sayde vnto hī: †LORDE, yf thou haddest bene here, my brother had not bene deed. Whā Iesus sawe her wepe, ȝ the Iewes wepinge also ȝ came with her, he groned in the sprete, ȝ was sory with in himself, ȝ saide: Where haue ye layed him? They sayde: LORDE come, ȝ se it. And †Iesus wepte. Then sayde ȝ Iewes: Beholde how he loued him. But some of thē saide: Coule not he †which opened the eyes of ȝ blynde, haue made also, that this mā shulde not haue dyed? But Iesus groned agayne in himself, and came to the graue. It was a caue, and a stone layed on it. Iesus saide: Take awaye ȝ stone. Martha the sister of him ȝ was deed, saide vnto hī: LORDE, he stynketh already, for he hath bene deed fourē dayes. Iesus sayde vnto her: Sayde I not vnto the, that yf thou dyddest beleue, thou shuldest se the glory of God?

Then toke they awaye the stone, where the 16 deed laye. Iesus lift vp his eyes, and sayde: Father, I thāke ȝ, that thou hast herde me. Howbeit I knowe, that thou hearest me allwaye: but †because of ȝ people that stonde by, I sayde it, that they maye beleue, that thou hast sent me.

Whan he had sayde this, he cryed loude: Lazarus come forth. And ȝ deed came forth bounde hande ȝ fote with graue clothes, ȝ his face bounde with a napkyn. Iesus sayde vnto thē: Lowse him, ȝ let him go. Many now of ȝ Iewes which were come vnto Mary, and sawe what Iesus dyd, beleued on him. But some of thē wente their waye vnto the pharises, and tolde thē what Iesus had done.

them, named Caiphas, which was hye prest that same yeaere, sayde vnto them: Ye knowe nothings nether considre ye eny thinge at all.* It is better for us that one mā dye for the people, then that all the people shulde perishe.

¶ This spake he not of himself, but for so moch as he was hye prest of the same yeaere, he prophecied. For Iesus was for to dye for the people, and not for the people onely, but that he shulde gather together the children of God, which were scatered abroad: From that daye forth they toke coucell, how they might put him to death. Iesus walked nomore openly amonge the Iewes, but wente from thence in to a cowntre by the wyldernesse, to a cite called Ephraim, & there had he his beyenge with his disciples.

The Iewes Easter was nye at hande. And there wente vp many to Ierusalē out of that cowntre before y^e Easter, to purifye them selues. Then stode they vp, and axed after Iesus, and spake amonge them selues in the temple: What thynke ye, that he cōmeth not to y^e feast? The hye prestes & pharises had geuen a commaundement, that yf eny man knewe where he were, he shulde shewe it, that they might take him.

The xij. Chapter.

¶ SIXE dayes before Easter came Iesus vnto Bethanye, where Lazarus was, which was deed, whom Iesus raysed vp from the deed. There they made him a supper, and Martha serued. But Lazarus was one of them, that sat at the table with him. ¶ Then toke Mary a pounce of oyntment of pure and costly Nardus, and anoynted Iesus fete, & dried his fete with hir heer. The house was full of the sauoure of the oyntment. Then sayde one of his disciples, Iudas Iscarioth Symons sonne, which afterwarde betrayed him: Why was not this oyntment solde for thre hundred pens, and geuen to the poore? (This sayde he not that he cared for the poore, but because he was a thefe, and shad the bagge, and bare that which was geue.) Then sayde Iesus: Let her alone, this hath she kepte agaynst the daye of my buryenge. For the poore haue ye allwaye with you, but me haue ye not allwaye.

Then moch people of the Iewes had knowledge, that he was there, and they came not for Iesus sake onely, but also y^e they might se Lazarus, whom he had raysed from the deed. But y^e hye prestes were adysed to put Lazarus to death also: because y^e for his sake many of the Iewes wēte awaye and beleued on Iesus.

¶ Vpon the nexte daye moch people which were come vnto the feast, whan they herde that Iesus came towarde Ierusalem, they toke braunches of palme trees, and wēte out to mete him, and cryed: Hosianna, ¶ Blessed be he, that in the name of the LORDE cometh kynge of Israel. Iesus gat a yonge Asse, and rode thereon, As it is wryttē:  Feare not thou daughter of Sion, beholde, thy kynge cōmeth rydinge vpō an Asses foale. Neuertheles his disciples vnderstode not these thinges at the first, but whan Iesus was glorified, then remēbred they that soch thinges were wryttē of him, and that they had done soch thinges vnto him.

The people that was with him whan he called Lazarus out of y^e graue and raysed him from the deed, commended the acte. Therefore the people met him, because they herde, that he had done soch a miracle. But the pharises sayde amonge them selues: Ye se, that we preuayle nothinge, beholde, all y^e worlde runneth after him.

There were certayne Grekes (amonge thē that were come vp to Ierusalē to worshipe at the feast) the same came vnto Philippe, ¶ which was of Bethsaida out of Galile, & prayed him, and sayde: Syr, we wolde fayne se Iesus. Philippe came, & tolde Andrew. And agayne, Philippe and Andrew tolde Iesus. Iesus answered thē, and sayde: ¶ The houre is come, that the sonne of man must be glorified.

Verely verely I saye vnto you: Excepte the wheatecorne fall in to the grounde, and dye, it bydeth alone: But yf it dye, it bryngeth forth moch frute. ¶ He that loueth his life, shal lose it: and he that hateth his life in this worlde, shal kepe it vnto life euerlastinge. “Now is my soule heuy, and what shal I saye? Father, helpe me out of this houre. But therefore am I come in to this houre. Father, glorifye thy name.

¶ Then came there a voyce from heauen: I haue glorified it, and wyl glorifye it agayne. Then sayde the people that stode by and herde: It thundereth. Other sayde: An angell spake vnto him. Iesus answered, and sayde: * This voyce came not because of me, but for youre sakes.

Now goeth the iudgment ouer the worlde. Now shal the prynce of this worlde be thrust out. And I whan I am lift vp from the earth, wyl drawe all vnto me. (But this he sayde, to signifye, what death he shulde dye.) Then answered him the people: We haue herde in the † lawe, that Christ endureth for euer: and how sayest thou then, that the sonne of man must be lift vp? Who is this sonne of man?

¶ Then sayde Iesus vnto them: The light is yet a litle whyle with you, walke whyle ye haue the light, that the darknesse fall not vpo you. He that walketh in the darknesse, woteth not whither he goeth. Beleue ye on the light, whyle ye haue it, that ye maye be the children of light.

These thinges spake Iesus, and departed awaye, and hyd himself from them. And though he had done soch tokens before the, yet beleued they not on him, that the sayenge of Esay the prophet might be fulfilled,^c which he spake: LORDE, who beleueth oure preachinge? Or to whom is the arme of the LORDE opened? Therefore coulde they not beleue, for Esay saide agayne: He hath blynded their eyes,^d and hardened their hert, that they shulde not se with the eyes, ner vnderstonde with the hert, & shulde be conuerted, and he shulde heale them. This sayde Esay, whan he sawe his glory, and spake of him.

¶ Neuertheles many of the chefe rulers beleued on him,^e but because of the Pharisees they wolde not be knowne of it,^f lest they shulde be excommunicate, ‡ For they loued more the prayse with men, then with God.

Iesus cryed and sayde: He that beleueth on me, beleueth not on me, but on him that sent me. And he that seyth me, seyth him † sent me. † I am come a light in to the worlde, that whosoer beleueth on me, shulde not hyde in darknesse. And he that heareth my wordes and beleueth not, I iudge him not, for I am not come to iudge the worlde,^g but to saue the worlde. He that refuseth me, and receaueth not my wordes, hath one already that iudgeth him. § The worde that I haue spoken, that shall iudge him at the last daye, For I haue not spoken of my self: but the father that sent me, hath geuen me a commaundement, what I shulde do and saye. And I knowe that his commaundement is life euerlastinge. Therefore loke what I speake, that speake I euē so, as the father hath sayde vnto me.

The xiiij. Chapter.

BEFORE the feast of Easter whan Iesus ^a knewe that his tyme was come, that he shulde departe out of this worlde vnto † father, as he loued his which were in the worlde, euen so loued he them vnto the ende. And after supper, whan the deuell had already put in to † hert of Iudas Iscariot^h Symons sonne, to betraye him, Iesus knowinge that the father had geuen all thinges in to his handes,ⁱ & that he was come from God, and wente vnto God, he rose from supper, and layed asyde his vpper garmentes, and toke a towell, and gyrded it aboute him. Afterwarde poured he water in to a basen, and beganne to wash the disciples fete, and dryed them with the towell, † he was gyrded withall.

Then came he vnto Symon Peter, and † same sayde vnto him: LORDE, shalt thou washe my fete? Iesus answered and sayde vnto him: What I do, thou knowest not now, but thou shalt knowe it hereafter. The sayde Peter vnto him: Thou shalt neuer wash my fete. Iesus answered him: Yf I wash † not, thou shalt haue no parte with me. Symon Peter sayde vnto him: LORDE, not the fete onely, but the handes also and the heade.

Iesus sayde vnto him: He that is waszhē, ^b nedeth not, saue to washe † fete, but is cleane euery whytt. And ye are cleane ‖ but not

Now when he had waschen their fete, and taken his clothes, he sat him downe agayne, and sayde vnto the: Wote ye what I haue done vnto you? Ye call me master and LORDE, and ye saye right therin, for so I am. Yf I then your LORDE and master haue waschen youre fete, ye ought also to wash one anothers fete. ¹I haue geue you an ensample, that ye shulde do as I haue done vnto you. Then the disciples loked one vpon another, and were in doute, of whom he spake. And he dypte in the soppe, and gaue it vnto Iudas Iscarioth Symons sonne. And after y soppe the deuell entred in to him.

Then sayde Iesus vnto him: That thou doest, do quickly. But y same wist no man at the table, for what intent he sayde it vnto him. When he had receaued the soppe, he wente out immediatly, and it was night.

father is in me? The wordes that I speake vnto you, those speake not I of my self: but the father that dwelleth in me, he doth the workes. Beleue me, that I am in the father, and that y^e father is in me: Or els, beleue me at the leest for the workes sake.

¶ Verely verely I saye vnto you: He that beleueth on me, shal do the workes that I do, and shal do greater then these: for I go to the father. And what soeuer ye axe y^e father in my name, that wyl I do, that the father maye be prayed in the sonne. Yf ye axe eny thinge in my name, I wyl do it.

Yf ye loue me, kepe my commaundementes. And I wyl praye the father, and he shal geue you another comforter, that he maye byde with you for euer: euen y^e sprete of trueth, whom y^e worlde can not receaue, for it seyth him not, nether doth it knowe him: but ye knowe him, for he abydeth with you, & shalbe in you.* I wil not leaue you cōfortles, I come vnto you. It is yet a litle whyle, thē shal the worlde se me nomore, but ye shal se me: for I lyeue, and ye shal lyeue also. In y^e daye shal ye knowe, that I am in the father and ye in me, and I in you. He that hath my cōmaundementes, and kepeth them, the same is he that loueth me: and he that loueth me, shalbe loued of my father: & I wyl loue him, and wyl shewe myne awne self vnto him. †Iudas sayde vnto hī: (not that Iscarioth) LORDE, What is the cause thē, that thou wilt shewe thy self vnto vs, and not vnto the worlde?

¶ Iesus answered, and sayde vnto him: He that loueth me, wyl kepe my worde, and my father wyl loue him: and we wyl come vnto him, and wyl make oure dwellynge with him. But he that loueth me not, kepeth not my sayenges. And the worde that ye heare, is not myne, but the fathers which hath sent me.

This haue I spoken vnto you, whyle I was with you. †But that comforter euen y^e holy goost, § who my father shal sende in my name, he shal teache you all thinges, & bringe all to youre remembraunce, what soeuer I haue tolde you.

Peace I leaue vnto you, my peace I geue you: I geue not vnto you, as the worlde geueth. Let not youre hert be troubled, nether let it be afraied. Ye haue herde, that I sayde vnto you: I go, & come agayne vnto you. Yf ye loued me, ye wolde reioyse, because I saide, I go to the father: for y^e father is greater thē I. And now haue I tolde you, before it come, that whan it is come to passe, ye maye beleue: Here after wyl not I talke moch with you. †For the pryncie of this worlde cōmeth, and hath nothinge in me. But that the worlde maye knowe that I loue y^e father. And as the father hath cōmaunded me, so do I. Aryse, let vs go hence.

The xv. Chapter.

I AM a true vyne, and my father is an huszbande man. Euery braunch that bringeth not forth frute in me, shal he cut of: and euery one that bryngeth forth frute, shal he poure, y^e it maye bringe forth more frute. Now are ye cleane, because of the worde, that I haue spokē vnto you. Byde ye in me, and I in you. Like as y^e braunch can not brynge forth frute of it self excepte it byde in the vyne, Euen so nether ye also, excepte ye abyde in me.

I am the vyne, ye are the braunches. He that abydeth in me, and I in him, the same bryngeth forth moch frute: for without me can ye do nothinge. He that abydeth not in me, is cast out as a vyne braunce, and it wythereth, and men gather it vp, and cast it in to the fyre, and it burneth. Yf ye abyde in me, and my wordes abyde in you, ye shal axe what ye wyl, & it shal be done vnto you. Herin is my father prayed, that ye brynge forth moch frute, and become my disciples. Like as my father hath loued me, eue so haue I loued you. Cōtinue ye i my loue.†† Yf ye kepe my cōmaundementes, ye shal cōtinue in my loue: like as I haue kepte my fathers cōmaundementes, and cōtinue in his loue.

These thinges haue I spoken vnto you, that my ioye might remayne in you, and y^e youre ioye might be perfecte. †This is my cōmaundement, that ye loue together, as I haue loued you. seruaunt knoweth not what his lorde doeth. But I haue sayde that ye are frendes: For all that I haue herde of my father, haue I shewed vnto you. "Ye haue not chosen me, but I haue chosen you, and ordeyned you, that ye go, and *bringe forth frute, and that youre frute contynue, that what soeuer ye axe the father in my name, he shulde geue it you.

Howbeit because ye are not of the worlde, but I haue chosen you from the worlde, therefore the worlde hateth you. Remembre my worde, that I sayde vnto you: ^bThe seruaunt is not greater then his lorde. Yf they haue persecuted me, they shal persecute you also: Yf they haue kepte my worde, they shal kepe yours also.

But now haue they nothing to cloake their synne withall. He ^γ hateth me, hateth my father also. Yf I had not done amōge thē the workes which no other mā dyd, they shulde haue no synne. But now haue they sene it, and yet haue they hated both me ^τ my father. Neuertheles that the sayenge might be fulfilled, which is wrytten in their lawe: "They haue hated me without a cause.

But whā the comforter commeth, whō "I shal sende you from the father euē the sprete of trueth which procedeth of the father, he shal testifie of me [†]and ye shal beare wytnesse also: for ye haue bene with me from the begynnyng.

The xvi. Chapter.

A THESE thinges haue I sayde vnto you, that ye shulde not be offended. They shal excommunicate you. The tyme commeth, that who soeuer putteth you to death, shal thinke that he doth seruyce vnto God.^c And soch thinges shal they do vnto you, because they haue nether knowne ^γ father ner yet me. But these thinges haue I sayde vnto you, [†]that whan the tyme cometh ye maye thinke theron, that I tolde you. But these thinges haue I not sayde vnto you from the begynnyng: For I was with you.

But now I go vnto him that sent me, ^τ none of you axeth me: Whither goest thou? but because I haue sayde these thinges vnto you, youre hert is full of sorowe. Neuertheles I tell you the trueth, It is better for you ^γ I go awaye: For yf I go not awaye that comforter commeth not vnto you: but yf I departe, [†]I wil sende hī vnto you. And whan he commeth, he shal rebuke the worlde of synne, and of righteounes, ^τ of iudgment. Of synne, because they beleue not on me. Of righteounes, because I go to the father, and ye shal se me nomore. Of iudgmēt, because the [†]prynce of this worlde is iudged already.

I haue yet moch to saye vnto you, but ye can not now beare it awaye: howbeit whan he (the sprete of trueth) commeth [†]he shal lede you in to all trueth. For he shal not speake of himself, but what soeuer he shal heare, that shal he speake: and he shall shewe you, what is for to come. He shal glorifye me: for he shal receaue of myne, and shal shewe vnto you. [†]All that the father hath, is myne. Therefore haue I sayde: he shal receaue of myne, and shewe vnto you.

After a litle whyle, and ye shal not se me: and agayne after a litle whyle, and ye shal se me: for I go to the father. Thē saide some of his disciples amonge them selues: What is this that he sayeth vnto vs, After a litle whyle, and ye shal not se me: ^τ agayne after a litle whyle, ^τ ye shal se me: for I go to the father? Then sayde they: What is this, that he sayeth: After a litle whyle? We can not tell what he sayeth. Then perceaued Iesus that they wolde axe him, and he sayde vnto them: Ye enquire of this amonge youre selues, that I sayde: After a litle whyle, and ye shal not se me: ^τ agayne after a litle whyle, and ye shal se me.

C Verely verely I saye vnto you: Ye shal wepe and lamente, but the worlde shal reioyse: Ye shal be sory, but youre sorowe shal be turned in to ioye. A woman whan she trauallyeth, hath sorowe, for hir houre is come. But whan she is deliuered of the childe, she Neuertheles the tyme commeth, that I shal speake nomore by prouerbes, but I shal shewe you planely of my father.

^eIn that daye shal ye axe in my name. And I saye not vnto you, that I wyl praye vnto the father for you: for the father himself loueth you, because ye haue loued me, ^fand beleued that I am come out from God. ^gI wente out from the father, and came in to the worlde: Agayne, I leaue ^hye worlde, and go to the father.

His disciples sayde vnto him: Beholde, now talkest thou planely, and speakest no prouerbe. Now are we sure ⁱye thou knowest all thinges, and nedest not that eny mā shulde axe the. Therefore beleue we, that thou camest out from God: Iesus answered them: Now ye do beleue: ^jBeholde, the houre draweth nye, and is come already, that ye shalbe scatred, every man in to his awne, and shal leaue me alone: ^kand yet am I not alone, for the father is with me.

These thinges haue I spoken vnto you, that in me ye might haue peace.^l In ^mye worlde haue ye trouble, but be of good comforte, I haue ouercome the worlde.

¶ WHAN Iesus had thus spokē,^c he wētē forth with his disciples ouer the broke Cedron, where there was a gardē, in to the which Iesus entred and his disciples. But Iudas [†] betrayed hī, knewe the place also. For Iesus resorted thither oft tymes with his disciples. ^a Now han Iudas had takē vnto him the cōpany, [†] mynisters of the hye prestes and Pharises, he came thither with creshettes, with lanternes, and with weapens. Iesus now knowinge all [†] shulde come vpon him, wētē forth, and sayde vnto the: Whom seke ye? They answered him: Iesus of Nazareth. Iesus sayde vnto them: I am he: Iudas also which betrayed him, stode with the. Now whan Iesus sayde vnto the: I am he, they wētē bacwardes, and fell to the grounde. Then axed he the agayne: Whom seke ye? They sayde: Iesus of Nazareth. Iesus answered: I haue tolde you, that I am he. Yf ye seke me, then let these go their waye. That the worde might be fulfilled, which he sayde: Of them whō thou gauest me,^c haue I not lost one. Then had Symon Peter a swerde, and drewe it out, and smote the hye prestes seruāūt, and cut of his right eare. And [†] seruāutes name was Malchus.

¶ 13 Then sayde Iesus vnto Peter: Put vp thy swerde in to the sheeth. Shal I not drynke of [†] cuppe, which my father hath geuē me? Then the company and the captayne [†] the officers of the Iewes toke Iesus, and bounde him, [†] led him awaye first vnto Annas, that was fatherlawe vnto Caiphas, which was hye prest [†] same yeaere. It was Caiphas, which gaue coucell vnto [†] Iewes that it were good, that one man shulde dye for the people.

As for Symon Peter, he and another disciple folowed Iesus. The same disciple was knowne vnto the hye prest, and wētē in with Iesus in to the hye prestes palace. But Peter stode without at the dore. Then [†] other disciple which was knowne vnto the hye prest, wente out, and spake to the damsell [†] kepte the dore, and brought in Peter. Then the damsell that kepte the dore, sayde vnto Peter: Art not thou also one of this mans disciples? He sayde: I am not.

The seruantes [†] officers stode, and had made a fyre of coles (for it was colde) ^c warmed the selues. Peter also stode with them, and warmed him self. The hye prest axed Iesus of his disciples, and of his doctryne. Iesus answered him: ^a I haue spoken openly before the worlde, I haue euer taught in the synagoge and in the tēple, whither all the Iewes resorted, [†] in secrete haue I spokē nothinge. Why axest thou me? Axe the [†] haue herde, what I haue spoken vnto the: beholde, they can tell what I haue sayde. But whan he had thus spokē,^a one of the officers that stode by, smote Iesus on the face, and sayde: Answerest thou the hye prest so? Iesus answered him: Yf I haue euell spokē, the beare wytnesse of euell: but yf I haue well spoken, why smyttest thou me? And Annas sent him bounde vnto Caiphas [†] hye prest.

^a Symō Peter stode and warmed him self. The sayde they vnto him: Art not thou one of his disciples? He denyed, and sayde: I am not. A seruāūt of the hye prestes, a kynszmā of his, whose eare Peter had smytten of, sayde vnto him: Dyd not I se the in the gardē with him?

¶ Then Peter denyed agayne. And immediately the ^bcock crew. ^c Then led they Iesus from Caiphas in to the comon hall. And it was early in the mornyng. And they them selues wētē not in to the comō hall, lest they shulde be defyled, but [†] they might eate [†] Pascall lambe. Then wente Pilate out vnto the, and sayde: What accusacion brynge ye agaynst this man? They answered, and sayde vnto him: Yf he were not an euell doer, we had not deluyered him vnto the. Then sayde Pilate vnto thē: Take ye him, and iudge him after youre lawe. Then sayde ŷ Iewes vnto him: It is not lauffull for vs to put eny mā to death. That ŷ worde of Iesus might be fulfilled,* which he spake, when he signified, what death he shulde dye.

Then entred Pilate in to the comon hall agayne, and called Iesus, ⁊ sayde vnto him: Art thou the kyng of the Iewes? Iesus answered: Sayest thou that of thy self, or haue other tolde it the of me?

¶ Pilate answered: Am I a Iewe? Thy people and the hye prestes haue deluyered the vnto me. What hast thou done? Iesus answered: My kyngdome is not of this worlde. Yf my kyngdome were of this worlde, my nysters wolde fight therfore, ŷ I shulde not be deluyered vnto the Iewes. † But now is my kyngdome not from hence. Thē sayde Pilate vnto hī: Art thou a kyng the? Iesus answered: Thou sayest it, for I am a kyng. For this cause was I borne, and came in to the worlde, that I shulde testifye the trueth. Who so euer is of the trueth, heareth my voyce. Pilate sayde vnto hī: What is the trueth? ‡ And when he had sayde that he wete out agayne to the Iewes, and sayde vnto them: I fynde no gyltnesse in him: § But ye haue a custome, that I shulde geue one vnto you lowse at Easter. Wyl ye now ŷ I lowse vnto you the kyng of ŷ Iewes? Thē cryed they agayne alltogether, and sayde: Not him, but Barrabas. Yet was Barrabas a murthurer.

The xix. Chapter.

¶ THEN Pilate toke Iesus, and scourged him. And the soudyers platted a crowne of thornes,⁹ and set it vpon his heade, and put a purple garment vpon him, and sayde: Hayle kyng of the Iewes. And they smote him on the face. Then wente Pilate forth agayne, and sayde vnto thē: Beholde, I brynge him forth vnto you, ŷ ye maye knowe, ŷ I fynde no faute in hī. So Iesus wente out, ⁊ ware a crowne of thorne and a purple robe. And he sayde vnto them: Beholde, the man. When the hye prestes ⁊ the mynisters sawe him, they cryed, ⁊ sayde: Crucifye, crucifye. Pilate saide vnto thē: Take ye him, and crucifye him, for I fynde no gyltnesse in him. The Iewes answered him: We haue a lawe,⁴ ⁊ after oure lawe he ought to dye, § because he made him self the sonne of God. When Pilate herde that worde, he was the more afraied, and wente agayne in to the comon hall, and sayde vnto Iesus: Whence art thou? But Iesus gaue him no answer. Thē sayde Pilate vnto him: Speakest thou not vnto me? Knowest thou not, ŷ I haue power to crucifye ŷ, ⁊ haue power to lowse ŷ? Iesus answered: Thou shuldest haue no power vpō me, yf it were not ¶ geuē the from aboue. Therfore he that deluyered me vnto ŷ, hath the more synne. From that tyme forth Pilate sought meanes to lowse him. But the Iewes cryed, ⁊ sayde: Yf thou let him go, thou art not the Emperours frēde. For whosoeuer maketh himself kyng, is agaynst the Emperoure.

When Pilate herde ŷ worde,⁵ he brought Iesus forth, ⁊ sat hī downe vpō ŷ iudgmēt seate, in the place which is called the Paument, but in the Hebrue, Gabbatha. It was the daye of preparinge of the Easter aboute the sixte houre. And he sayde vnto the Iewes: Beholde youre kyng. But they cryed: Awaye with him, awaye with him, crucifie him. Pilate saide vnto thē: Shal I crucifye youre kyng? The hye prestes answered: We haue no kyng but ŷ Emperoure. Thē deluyered he him vnto them, to be crucified.

They toke Iesus, and led him awaye. And he bare his crosse,⁶ and wente out to the place called ŷ place of deed mens skulles, which in Hebrue is named Golgatha, where they crucified him, and two other with him, on either syde one, but Iesus in the myddes. Pilate wrote a superscripcion, and set vpon the crosse. And there was written: Iesus of Nazareth, kyng of the Iewes. This superscripcion red many of the Iewes. For ŷ place where Iesus was crucified, was nye vnto the cite. And it was written in Hebrue, Greke ⁊ Latyn. Then sayde the hye prestes of the Iewes vnto Pilate: Wryte not kyng of the Iewes, but ŷ he sayde, I am kyng of the Iewes. Pilate answered: What I haue wrytten, that haue I wrytten.

¶ The soudyers,^a when they had crucified Iesus, toke his garmentes, and made foure partes, to euery soudyer one parte, and the cote also. As for the cote, it was vnswowd frō aboue, wrought thorow and thorow. Then sayde they one to another: Let vs not deuyde it, but cast lottes for it, who shal haue it, that the scripture might be fulfilled, which sayeth: *They haue parted my garmentes amonge them, and on my cote haue they cast lottes. This dyd the soudyers in dede.

There stode by the crosse of Iesus, his mother, and his mothers sister Mary, the wife of Cleophas, and Mary Magdalene. Now whan Iesus sawe his mother, and the disciple stondyng by, whō he loued, he sayde vnto his mother: Woman, beholde, that is thy sonne. Then sayde he to the disciple: beholde, that is thy mother. And from that houre the disciple toke her vnto him.

After that, whan Iesus knewe that all was perfourmed, †that the scripture might be fulfilled, he sayde: I am a thyrst. There stode a vessell full of vyner. They fylled a sponge with vyner and †wonde it aboute with ysoppe, and helde it to his mouth. Now whan Iesus had receaued the vyner, he sayde: It is fynished, and bowed his heade, and gaue vp the goost.

¶ The Iewes then, for so moch as it was the daye of preparinge, that †bodies shulde not remaine vpon the crosse on the Sabbath, (for †same Sabbath daye was greate) besought Pilate, that their legges might be broken, and that they might be taken downe. Then came the soudyers, and brake the legges of the first, and of the other that was crucified with him. But whan they came to Iesus, and sawe that he was deed already, they brake not his legges, but one of the soudyers opened his syde with a speare. ‡And immediatly there wente out bloude and water.

And he that sawe it, bare recorde, and his recorde is true. And he knoweth that he sayeth true, that ye might beleue also. For this is done, †the scripture might be fulfilled: §Ye shal not breake a bone of him. And agayne, another scripture sayeth: ||They shal se him, whom they haue persed.

After that, Ioseph of Arimathia, which was a disciple of Iesus (but secretly^c for feare of the Iewes) besought Pilate, †he might take downe the body of Iesus. And Pilate gaue him lycence. There came also ¶ Nicodemus, (which afore came vnto Iesus by night) † brought of Myrre † Aloes mingled together, aboute an hūdreth pounde weight.

Thē toke they the body of Iesus, † wonde it with linnen clothes, and with the spyces, as the maner of the Iewes is to burye. And by † place where Iesus was crucified, there was a gardē, and in the garden a new sepulchre, where in was neuer man layed: there layed they Iesus, because of the preparinge daye of † Iewes, for the sepulchre was nye at hande.

The xx. Chapter.

V PON one daye of the Sabbath, came Mary Magdalene early (whē it was yet darcke) vnto the sepulchre, † sawe that the stone was takē from the sepulchre. Then ranne she, † came to Symon Peter, and to † other disciple, whom Iesus loued, and sayde vnto them: They haue takē awaye the LORDE out of the sepulchre, † we can not tell where they haue layed him. Thē wēte Peter forth and the other disciple, and came to the sepulchre. They rāne both together, and that other disciple out rāne Peter, and came first to the sepulchre, and loked in, and sawe the linnen clothes layed. But he wēte not in. Thē came Symon Peter after him, and wente in to the sepulchre, † sawe the lynnē clothes lye, and the napkyn that was bounde aboute Iesus heade, not layed with the linnen clothes, but wrapped together in a place by it self. Thē wēte † also † other disciple, which came first to † sepulchre, † he sawe † beleued: for as yet they knewe not † scriptures,^d † he behoued hī to ryse agayne frō † deed. Thē wēte † disciples agayne together.

As for Mary, she stode before † sepulchre † wepte without. Now as she wepte, she loked in to the sepulchre, and sawe two angels in whyte garmentes syttinge, † one at the heade, † the other at † fete, where they had layed the body of Iesus. I wote not where they haue layed hi. And whan she had sayde y, she turned her self backe, & sawe Iesus stondinge, & knewe not y it was Iesus. Iesus sayde vnto her: Woman, why wepest thou? Whom sekest thou? She thought y it had bene y gardener, & sayde vnto him: Syr, yf thou hast borne him hence: then tell me where thou hast layed him? and I wil fetch hi. Iesus sayde vnto her: Mary. Then turned she her aboute, & sayde vnto him: Rabboni, y is to saye: Master. Iesus sayde vnto her: Touche me not, for I am not yet ascended vnto my father. But go thou thy waye vnto my *brethrē & saye vnto thē: I ascēde vp vnto my father and youre father: to my God, & youre God. Mary Magdalene came, & tolde y disciples: I haue sene the LORDE, & soch thinges hath he spoken vnto me.

C The same Sabbath at eue whā y disciples were gathered together, and the dores were shut for feare of y Iewes, came Iesus, and stode i y myddes, & sayde vnto thē: Peace be with you. And whā he had so sayde, he shewed thē his hādes & his syde. †Thē were y disciples glad, y they sawe y LORDE. Thē sayde Iesus vnto thē agayne: Peace be with you. ‡ Like as my father sent me, eue so sēde I you. And whan he had sayde y, he brethed vpō thē, and sayde vnto thē: Receaue the holy goost. Whose synnes soeuer ye remytte, they are remytted vnto thē: and whose synnes so euer ye retayne, they are retayned.

But Thomas one of the twolue§ which is called Didimus, was not with thē whā Iesus came. Thē sayde the other disciples vnto him: We haue sene the LORDE. But he sayde vnto thē: Excepte I se in his handes the prynte of the nailes, and put my hāde in to his syde, I wil not beleue.

D And after eight dayes agayne were his disciples with in, & Thomas with thē. Thē came Iesus (whā y dores were shutt) & stode in the myddes, & sayde: Peace be with you. After y sayde he vnto Thomas: Reach hither thy fynger, and se my handes, and reach hither thy hāde, and put it i to my syde, & be not faithlesse, but beleue. Thomas answered, & sayde vnto him: My LORDE, and my God. Iesus sayde vnto him: Thomas, because thou hast sene me, thou hast beleued. Blessed are they, that se not, and yet beleue.

Many other tokēs dyd Iesus before his disciples, which are not wryttē in this boke. But these are wryttē, y ye shulde beleue, y Iesus is Christ the sonne of God, & that ye thorow beleue might haue life in his name.

The xxi. Chapter.

AFTER that shewed Iesus himself agayne A at the see of Tiberias. But on this wyse shewed he himself. There were together Symō Peter, & Thomas which is called Didimus, & Nathanael of Cana a cite of Galile, & the sonnes of Zebede, & two other of his disciples. Symon Peter sayde vnto thē: I go a fysHINGe. They sayde vnto hi: We also wil go with the. They wēte out, & entred in to a shippe straight waye. And y same night toke they nothinge. But whā it was now morow, Iesus stode on the shore, but his disciples knewe not y it was Iesus. Iesus sayde vnto thē: Childrē, haue ye eny thinge to eate? They answered hi: No. He sayde vnto thē: Cast out the nett on y right syde of the shippe, & ye shal fynde. Thē they cast out, & tolde nomore drawe it for y multitude of fishes. Thē sayde y disciple¶ whō Iesus loued, vnto Peter: It is the LORDE.

B Whan Simon Peter herde that it was the LORDE, he gyrded his mantell about him (for he was naked) and sprang in to y see. But other disciples came by shippe (for they were not farre frō londe, but as it were two hundreth cubytes) and they drewed the nett with the fyszhes. Now whan they were come to londe, they sawe coles layed, and fysh theron, and bred. Iesus sayde vnto thē: Bringe hither of the fyszhes, that ye haue taken now. Symon Peter stepped forth, and drew the nett to the londe, full of greate fyszhes, an hundreth and thre and fyftie. And for all there were so many, yet was not the nett broken.

C Iesus sayde vnto them: Come, and dylne. But none of the disciples durst axe him: Who art thou? For they knewed, that it was the LORDE. Then came Iesus, and toke y bred, and gaue it thē: and the fyszhe likewise. This is now the thirde tyme that Iesus

Now whā they had dyned, Iesus sayde vnto Symon Peter: Symō Iohāna, louest thou me more then these do? He sayde vnto him: Yee LORDE, thou knowest ^ŷ I loue the. He sayde vnto him: Fede my lābes. signifye with what deed he shulde glorifye God.

Whan he had spoken this, he sayde vnto him: Folowe me. Peter turned him aboute, and sawe the disciple folowinge, whom Iesus loued, (^{*}which also leaned vpō his brest at the supper, and sayde: LORDE, who is it that betrayeth the)? Whā Peter sawe him, he sayde vnto Iesus: LORDE, but what shal he do? Iesus sayde vnto him: Yf I wil that he tary tyll I come, what is that to the? Folowe thou me. Then wente there out a sayenge amonge the brethren: This disciple dyeth not. And Iesus sayde not vnto him: He dyeth not, but: Yf I wil that he tary tyll I come, what is that to the? This is the same disciple, which testifyeth of these thinges, and wrote these thinges, and we knowe that his testimony is true.

There are many other thinges also that Iesus dyd, which, yf they shulde be wryttē euery one, I suppose the worlde shulde not contayne the bokes, that were to be wrytten.

The Actes of the Apostles.

The first Chapter.

A THE first treatise (deare Theophilus) haue I made of all that Iesus beganne to do and to teache, vntyll $\frac{1}{2}$ daye that he was taken vp, after that he (thorow the holy goost) had geuen commaundementes to the Apostles, whom he had chosen: to whō also he shewed himself $\frac{1}{2}$ alyue after his passion, by many tokēs, and appeared vnto them fourtye dayes longe, and spake vnto them of the kyngdome of God.

And whan he had gathered them together, he commaunded them that they shulde not departe from Ierusalem, but to wayte for the promyse of the father, wherof (sayde he) ye haue herde^a of me:^{*} For Ihon baptysed with water, but ye shalbe baptysed with $\frac{1}{2}$ holy goost, τ that within this few dayes.

Now whan they were come together, they axed him, and sayde: LORDE, shalt thou at this tyme set vp the kyngdome of Israel agayne? But he sayde vnto them: It belongeth not vnto you to knowe the $\frac{1}{2}$ tymes or seasons, which the father hath kepte in his awne power, but ye shal receaue the power of $\frac{1}{2}$ holy goost,^c which shal come vpon you, and ye shalbe my witnesses at Ierusalem, and in all Iewrye and Samaria, and vnto the ende of the earth.

33 And whan he had spoken these thinges, whyle they behelde, he was taken vp, and a $\frac{1}{2}$ cloude receaued him from their sight. And whyle they looked after him, as he wente in to heauen, beholde, there stode by them two men in whyte garmentes, which also sayde: Ye men of Galile, Why stonde ye gasyngye vp in to heauen? This Iesus which is takē vp from you in to heauen $\frac{1}{2}$ shal come euen so as ye haue sene him go in to heauen.

Then turned they agayne from $\frac{1}{2}$ mount that is called Oliuete, which is nye to Ierusalem, and hath a Sabbath dayes iourney. And whan they came in, they wente vp in to a parler, where abode $\frac{1}{2}$ Peter and Iames, Ihon and Andrew, Philippe and Thomas, Bartilmew and Mathew, Iames the sonne of Alpheus, and Simon Zelotes, and Iudas the sonne of Iames. These all contynued with one acorde in prayer and supplicacion, with the wemen and Mary the mother of Iesu and with his brethren

And in those dayes Peter stode vp in the myddes amonge the disciples, and sayde: C (The company of the names together, was aboute an hundreth and twentye.) Ye men and brethren, this scripture must nedes be fulfilled, which $\frac{1}{2}$ holy goost by the mouth of Dauid spake before of Iudas, which was a gyde of thē that toke Iesus: $\frac{1}{2}$ for he was nombred with vs, and had opteyned the felashippe of this mynistracion. This same trulye possessed the $\frac{1}{2}$ felde for the rewarde of vnrighteousnes, and hanged himself, and brast a sunder in the myddes, and all his bowels guszhed out. And it is knowne vnto all thē that dwell at Ierusalem, in so moch that the same felde is called in their mother tonge Acheldema, that is to saye, the bloude felde.

For it is wrytten in the boke of psalmes: D His habitation be voyde, and noman be dwellinge therin. And: \parallel His bisshoprike another take. Wherefore amonge these men

And they appoynted two (Ioseph^c called Barsabas, whose syrnyme was Iustus, and Mathias,) makinge their prayer and sayenge: Thou LORDE, which knowest the hertes of all men, shewe whether of these two thou hast chosen, that the one maye take the rowme of this mynistracion and Apostelshippe, from the which Iudas by transgression fell, that he might go awaye in to his awne place. And they gaue forth the lottes ouer them, and the lot fell vpon Mathias. And he was counted with the eleuen Apostles.

The ij. Chapter.

AND when the * Whit sondaye was fylled, they were all with one acorde together in one place. And sodenly there came a sounde from heauen, as it had bene the cōmyng of a mightie wynde, and it fylled the whole house where they sat. And there appeared vnto them clouen tungen, like as they had bene of fyre. And he sat vpon ech one of them, and they were all fylled with the holy goost. † And they beganne to preach with other tungen, euen as the sprete gaue them vtterance.

There were dwellinge at Ierusalem Iewes, men that feared God, out of euery nacion that is vnder heauen. Now when this voyce came to passe, the multitude came together, and were astōnyed: For euery one herde, that they spake with his awne tunge. They wondred all and marueyled, and sayde amonge them selues: Beholde, are not all these which speake, of Galile? How heare we thē euery one his awne tunge, wherein we were borne? Parthians and Medes, and Elamites, and we that dwell in Mesopotamia, and in Iewry and Capadocia, Pontus, and Asia, Phrigia and Pamphilia, Egipte, and in the partes of Lybia by Cyren, and straungers of Rome, Iewes and ‡ Proselytes, Cretes and Arabians: we heare them speake with oure awne tungen the greate workes of God.

They were all amased, and wondred, and sayde one to another: What wil this be? But other mocked them, and sayde: They are full of swete wyne. Then stode Peter vp with the eleuen, and lift vp his voyce, and sayde vnto them:

Ye men of Iewry, and all ye that dwell at Ierusalē, be this knowne vnto you, and let my wordes entre in at youre eares. For these are not dronken, as ye suppose, for it is yet but the thirde houre of y daye: but this is it, that was spokē before by the prophet Ioel: And it shal come to passe in the last dayes, sayeth God, I will poure out of my sprete vpon all flesh, and youre sonnes and youre daughters shal prophecey, and youre yonge men^d shal se visions § and youre olde men shall dreame dreames, and on my seruautes and on my handmaydens wyll I poure out of my sprete in those dayes, ¶ they shal prophecey.

And I wil shewe wonders in heauen aboue, and tokens on the earth beneth, [¶] bloude and fyre, and the vapoure of smoke. The Sonne shalbe turned in to darknesse, and the Moone in to bloude, before that greate and notable daye of the LORDE come. And it shal come to passe, /Who so euer shal call vpō the name of the LORDE, shalbe saved.

Ye men of Israel, heare these wordes: Iesus of Nazareth, y man approued of God amonge you with miracles, and wonders and tokens, which God dyd by him in the myddes amonge you, as ye youre selues knowe also, || him (after that he was deliuered by the determinate counsell and foreknowledge of God) haue ye taken by the handes of vnrighteous persones, and crucified him, ¶ slayne him, whō God hath raysed vp, [¶] and lowsed the sorowes of death, for so moch as it was vnpossible that he shulde be holden of it. For Dauid speaketh of him: [¶] A fore honde haue I set the LORDE allwayes before me, for he is on my right hōde, that I shulde not be moued. Therefore dyd my hert reioyse, and my tunge was glad: For my flesh also shal rest in hope. For thou shalt not leaue my soule in hell, nether shalt thou suffer thy Holy to se corrupcion. Thou hast shewed me the wayes of life, thou shalt make me full of ioye with thy countenance.

Ye men and brethren, let me frely speake vnto you of the Patryrke Dauid: For he is deed and buried,^a and his sepulchre is with vs vnto this daye. Wherefore now seinge \hat{y} he was a prophet, and knewe that God had promised him with an ooth, that the frute of his loynes shulde syt on his seate,^b he sawe it before, and spake of the resurrection of Christ: for his soule was not left in hell, nether hath his flesh sene corrupcion. This Iesus hath God rayseed vp,^c wherof we all are witnesses.

Seynge now that he by the right hande of God \hat{y} is exalted, and hath receaued of \hat{y} father \hat{y} promyse of the holy goost, he hath shed forth this, that ye se and heare. For Dauid is not ascended in to heauen, but he sayde: The LORDE sayde vnto my LORDE: Syt thou on my righte hande,^d vntyll I make thine enemies thy fote stole. So therfore let allthe house of Israel knowe for a suertye, \hat{y} God hath made this same Iesus (whom ye haue crucified) LORDE and Christ.

¶ Whan they herde this, their hert pricked them, and they sayde vnto Peter and to the other Apostles: Ye men and brethren, \dagger What shal we do? Peter sayde onto them: Amede youre selues, and let euery one of you be baptysed in the name of Iesus Christ, for the remission of synnes, and ye shal receaue the gifte of the holy goost. For this \dagger promyse was made vnto you and youre children, and to all that are farre of, whō so euer the LORDE oure God shal call. And with many other wordes bare he hennesse, and exhorted them, and sayde: Saue youre selues from this vntowarde generacion. They that gladly receaued his preachinge, were baptysed, \dagger the same daye there were added vnto them aboute thre thousande soules.

They contynued in the Apostles doctryne, and in the felashippe, and in breakynge of bred, and in prayer. And feare came vpō euery soule, and many wonders and tokens were done by \hat{y} Apostles. But all they that beleued, were together,^e and had all thinges commen. They solde their goodes and possessions, and parted them out amonge all, acordinge as euery mā had nede. And they contynued daylie with one acorde in the tēple, and \S brake bred in euery house: they toke their meate with ioye \dagger synglenesse of hert, praysinge God, and had fauoure with all \hat{y} people. And the LORDE added to the congregacion daylie such as shulde be saued.

The iij. Chapter.

PETER and Ihon wente vp together in to the temple aboute the nyenth houre to praye. And there was a certayne man halt from his mothers wombe, whom they brought and layed daylie at the gate of the tēple, which is called, the Bewtyfull, that he might axe almesse of them that wēte in to the temple. Now whan he sawe Peter and Ihon, that they wolde in to the temple, he desyred to receaue an almesse. Peter behelde him with Ihon, and sayde: Loke on vs. And he gaue hede vnto them, hopeynge to receaue some thinge of them. Howbeit Peter saide: Syluer and golde haue I none: but such as I haue geue I the. ¶ In the name of Iesus Christ of Nazareth ryse vp \dagger walke. And he toke him by the righte hande and lifte him vp. Immediately his legges \dagger ancle bones were made strōge, and he sprange, stode and walked, and entred with them in to the tēple, walkynge, and leapinge and praysinge God.

And all the people sawe him walke and prayse God. And they knewe him, \hat{y} it was he, which sat for almesse at the bewtyfull gate of the temple. And they were fylled with wondrynge, and were astonnyed at that, which had happened vnto hī. But as this halt which was healed helde him to Peter and Ihon, all the people ranne vnto them in to the \P porche, which is called Salomōs, and wondred.

Whan Peter sawe that, he answered vnto the people: Ye men of Israel, why maruayle ye at this, or why loke ye so at vs, as though we by oure awne power or deseruynge, had made this man to walke? The God of Abraham and of Isaac, and of Iacob, \hat{y} God of oure fathers hath glorified his childe Iesus, whom ye delyuered and denyed in the presence of Pilate, whan he had iudged him to be lowsed. The iij. Chapter.

¶ BUT as they spake to \hat{y} people, there came vnto thē the prestes and the rulers of the tēple, and the Saduces, whō it greued \hat{y} they taught the people, τ preached in Iesu \hat{y} resurreccion frō the deed and they layed handes vpon them, and put thē in holde tyll the morow: for it was now euentide. Howbeit many of thē which herde the worde, beleued, and the nombre of \hat{y} men was aboute fyue thousande.

And it chaunced on \hat{y} morow, that their rulers and Elders and scribes (as Annas \hat{y} hye prest and Caiphas, and Ihon τ Alexander, and as many as were of the hye prestes kynred) gathered them selues together at Ierusalem, and set them before them, and axed them: By what auctorite, ^d Or in what name haue ye done this?

Peter full of the holy goost, sayde vnto them: Ye rulers of the people, and ye Elders of Israel, Yf we this daye be examyned concerninge this good dede vpon the sicke mā, by what meanes he is made whole, be it knowne then vnto you and to all the people of Israel, ^e that in \hat{y} name of Iesus Christ of Nazareth, whom ye crucified, whō God hath raysed vp from the deed, stōdeth this man here before you whole. ^f This is the stone refused of you buylders, which is become the heade corner stone, nether is there saluacion in eny other: ^g Ner yet also is there geuē vnto mē eny other name, wherin we must be saued.

They sawe the boldnesse of Peter τ Ihon and marueyled, for they were sure \hat{y} they were vnlearned men and laye people. And they knewe thē also, that they were with Iesu. As for the man \hat{y} was made whole, they sawe hi stōdinge by thē, τ coulde not saye agaynst it. Then cōmaunded they thē to stōde asyde out of \hat{y} counsell, τ cōmened amōge thē selues, τ saide: ^h What shal we do to these mē? for a manyfest token is done by them, and is openly knowne vnto thē that dwell at Ierusalem, and we can not denye it. But that it breake out no farther amōge the people, let vs threatē them earnestly, that hence forth they speake of this name vnto noman.

And they called them, and cōmaunded thē, that in eny wyse they shulde not speake ner teache in the name of Iesu. Whā they herde that, they lifte vp their voyce with one acorde vnto God, and sayde: LORDE, thou that art the God which made heauen and earth, and the see, and all that therin is thou that by the mouth of Dauid thy seruaut hast sayde: Why do the Heythē rage? and ȝ people ymagin vayne thinges? The kynges of the earth stonde vp,^a and the prynces haue gathered them selues together agaynst ȝ LORDE, and agaynst his Christ. Of a trueth agaynst thy holy childe Iesus, whom thou hast anoynted, both Herode t Pontius Pilate with the Heythen and people of Israel, haue gathered thē selues together, to do what soeuer thy hande and thy counsell determyned before to be done. And now LORDE, beholde their threatenynge, and graunte vnto thy seruauentes with all stedfast boldnesse to speake thy worde: and stretch out thine hande, that healinge and tokēs and wonders maye be done by the name of thy holy childe Iesus.

B And whā they had prayed, the place moued where they were gathered together, t they were all fylled with ȝ holy goost, t spake the worde of God boldly. The multitude of them that beleued, were of one hert and of one soule. Also none of them sayde of his goodes, that they were his awne, but had all thinges cōmen. And with greate poyer gaue the Apostles witness of the resurreccion of the LORDE Iesu, and greate grace was with them all. Nether was there eny amonge them that lacked. For as many as were possessors of londes or houses, solde thē and brought ȝ money of the goodes that were solde, and layed it at the Apostles fete. And distribucion was made vnto euery mā, acordinge as he had nede.

Ioses which was also called of ȝ Apostles, Barnabas (that is to saye, the sonne of consolacion) a Leuite, of the cōuntre of Cypers, had londe, and solde it, t brought the money, and layed it at the Apostles fete.

The 6. Chapter.

BUT a certayne man named Ananias with Saphira his wife, solde his possession, and kepte awaye parte of the money (his wife knowinge of it) and broughte one parte, t layed it at the Apostles fete. But Peter sayde: Ananias, Wherfore hath Sathan fylled thine hert, that thou shuldest lye vnto the holy goost, and withdrawe awaye parte of the money of the lyuelod? Mightest thou not haue kepte it, whan thou haddest it? And whan it was solde, the money was also in thy power: Why hast thou then concealed this thinge in thine hert? Thou hast not lyed vnto mē, but vnto God. Whan Ananias herde these wordes, he fell downe, t gaue vp the goost. And there came a greate feare vpon all thē that herde of this. The yonge men rose vp, and put him asyde, and caried him out, and buried him.

And it fortunēd as it were aboute ȝ space of thre houres after, his wife came in, and knewe not what was done. But Peter answered vnto her. Tell me, solde ye the londe for somoch? She sayde: Yee, for so moch. Peter sayde vnto her: Why haue ye agreed together, to tempte the sprete of the LORDE? Beholde, the fete of thē which haue buried thy huszbande, are at the dore, t shal carye the out. And immediatly she fell downe at his fete, and gaue vp the goost. Then came in the yonge men, and founde her deed, and caried her out, and buried her by hir huszbande. And there came a greate feare ouer the whole congregacion, and ouer all thē that herde it.

Many tokens and wonders were done amonge the people by the hādes of the Apostles (and they were all together with one acorde in ^{*} Salomons porche: but of other there durst no man ioyne him self vnto thē, neuer theles the people helde moch of them. The multitude of the men and wemen that beleued in the LORDE, grewe more and more) In so moch that they brought out the sycke in to the stretes, and layed them vpon beddes and barowes, that at the leest waye the shadowe of Peter (whan he came by) might ouershadowe some of thē. There came many also out of ȝ cities rounde aboute vnto Ierusalem, and brought the sicke and thē that were vexed with vnclene spretes, and they were healed euery one.

But the hye prest rose vp, and all they ȝ were with him, [¶] which is the secte of the Saduces, and were full of indignacion, t layed handes on the Apostles, and put them in the comon preson. But the angell of ȝ LORDE by night opened the preson dores, and brought thē out, and sayde: Go youre waye and steppe vp, and speake in the temple to the people all the wordes of this life. When they herde that, they entred in to the temple early in the mornynge: and taught.

But the hye prest came, and they † were with him, and called the counsell together, ¶ all † Elders of the children of Israel, and sent to the preson to fet them. The mynisters came and founde them not in the preson, came agayne, and tolde, and sayde: The preson founde we shut with all diligence, and the keepers standinge without before the dores: but whā we had opened, we founde noman therein. When the hye prest, and the rulers of the temple and the other hye prestes herde these wordes, they doutd of them, wher vnto this wolde growe.

Then came there one, which tolde them: Beholde, the men that ye put in preson, are in the temple, standinge and teachinge the people. Then wēte † rulers with their mynisters, and fetcht them without violence: * for they feared the people, lest they shulde haue bene stoned. And whan they had brought them, they set thē before the counsell. And the hye prest axed them, and sayde: Dyd not we † cōmaunde you strately, that ye shulde not teache in this name. And beholde, ye haue fylled Ierusalem with youre doctryne, and ye intēde to brynge this mans bloude vpon vs.

But Peter and the Apostles answered, and sayde: We ought more to obeye God then men. The God of oure fathers hath rayسد vp Iesus, whō ye slewe, and hanged on tre. Him hath the righte hande of God exalted, to be a prynce and Sauoure, to geue repentaunce and forgeuennesse of synnes vnto Israel. And we are his recordes of these wordes, and the holy goost, whō God hath geuen vnto thē that obeye him. Whā they herde that, it wente thorow the hertes of them, and they thoughte to slaye them.

Then stode there vp in † counsell a pharyse, † named Gamaliel, a scribe, had in greate reputation before all † people, and bad put the Apostles asyde a litle, and sayde vnto them: Ye men of Israel, take hede to youre selues, what ye do as touchinge these men.

Before these dayes rose vp one Theudas, boostinge himself. (And there cleued vnto him a nōbre of mē, aboute a foure hundredth) which was slayne, and all they † enclyned vnto him, were scatred abroad, and brought to naught. After this stode vp Iudas of Galile in † dayes of trybute, and drewe awaye moch people after him, ¶ he also perished, ¶ all they that enclyned vnto him, are scatred abroad. And now I saye vnto you: refrayne youre selues frō these men, and let thē go. † Yf this counsell or worke be of mē, it wil come to naught: but yf it be of God, ye are not able to destroye it, lest ye be founde to be the men, that wil stryue agaynst God. Then they agreed vnto him, and called the Apostles, and bet them, and commaunded them, that they shulde speake nothinge in the name of Iesu, and let them go.

But they departed from the presence of the counsell, reioysinge, † that they were worthy to suffre rebuke for his names sake. And daylie in the temple and in euery house they ceased not, to teache and to preache the Gospell of Iesus Christ.

IN those dayes whan the nombre of the disciples increased, there arose a grudge amōge the Grekes agaynst the Hebrues, because their wyddowes were not loked vpon in the daylie handreachinge. Then the twolue called the multitude of the disciples together, and sayde: It is not mete that we shulde leaue the worde of God, and to serue at the tables. Wherefore brethren, loke out amonge you seuē men, † that are of honeste report, and full of the holy goost and wyszdome, whom we maye appoynte to this nedefull busynes. But we wil geue oure selues vnto prayer, and to the mynistracion of the worde of God. And the sayenge pleased the whole multitude. And they chose Steuen, a man full of fayth and of the holy goost, and Philippe, and Procorus, and Nicanor, and Thimon, and Parmenas, and Nicolas the Proselite of Antioche. ¶ These they set before † Apostles, and they prayed, and layed their handes vpon them. THEN sayde the hye prest: Is it euē so? He sayde: Deare brethren and fathers, herken to, The God of glorie appeared vnto oure father Abrahā, whyle he was yet in Mesopotamia, before he dwelt in Haran, and sayde vnto him: Get f out of thy cōtre, and frō thy kynred, and come in to a londe which I wil shewe f . And the Patriarkes had indignacion at Ioseph,[¶] and solde hi in to Egipte. And God was with him, and delynered him out of all his troubles, and gaue him fauoure ad wysdome i the sight of Pharaō kynge of Egipte ¶ which made him prynce ouer Egipte and ouer all his house.

[¶]But there came a derth ouer all the londe of Egipte and Canaan, and a greate trouble, and oure fathers founde no sustenance. But Jacob herde that there was corne in Egipte, and sent oure fathers out the first tyme. ¶ And at the seconde tyme was Ioseph knowne of his brethren, and Iosephs kynred was made knowne vnto Pharaō. But Ioseph sent out, and caused his father and all his kynred to be broughte, euē thre score and fyftene soules. [¶]And Jacob wente downe in to Egipte, and dyed, both he and oure fathers [¶]and were brought ouer vnto Sichē, and layed in the sepulcre, [¶]that Abraham boughte for money of the children of Hemor at Sichem.

[¶]Now whā the tyme of the promes drue nye (which God had sworne vnto Abrahā) the people grewe and multiplied in Egipte, tyll there rose another kynge, which knewe not of Ioseph. The same dealte suttly with oure kynred, and intreated oure fathers euell and made them to cast out the yonge children, that they shulde not remayne alyue.

[¶]At the same tyme was Moses borne, and was a proper childe before God, and was norished thre monethes in his fathers house. But whan he was cast out, Pharaos daughter toke him vp, and norished him vp for hir awne sonne. And Moses was learned in all maner wysdome of the Egipcians, and was mightie in dedes t wordes.

But whan he was fortye yeare olde, it came in to his mynde to vyset his brethren the children of Israel. And whan he sawe one of them suffre wrōge, he helped him, and delynered him, that had the harme done vnto him, and slewe the Egipcian. But he thoughte that his brethren shulde haue vnderstonde, how that God by his hande shulde saue the, howbeit they vnderstode it not.

¶ And on the nexte daye he shewed himself vnto them as they stroue together, and wolde haue set them at one agayne, and sayde: Syrs, ye are brethren, why hurte ye one another? But he that dyd his neighbour wronge, thrust him awaye, and sayde: "Who made the a ruler and iudge ouer vs? Wilt thou slaye me also, as thou slewest the Egypcian yesterdaye? But Moses fled at that sayenge, and was a straunger in the lande of Madian, where he begat two sonnes.

"And after fourtye yeares, the angell of f LORDE appeared vnto him vpon mount Sina, in a flamme of fyre in a buszhe. Whā Moses sawe it, he wondred at the sighte. But as he drue nye to beholde, f voyce of f LORDE came vnto him: I am the God of thy fathers, the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Iacob. Howbeit Moses trebled, and durst not beholde. But f LORDE sayde vnto hi: *Put of thy shues from thy fete, for f place where thou stondest, is an holy grounde. I haue well sene the trouble of my people in Egipte, and haue herde their gronyng, and am come downe to delyuer them. And now come, I wil sende the in to Egipte.

¶ This Moses, whom they refused, and sayde: "Who made f a ruler and iudge ouer vs? him had God sent to be a ruler a delyuerer by the hande of the angell, that appeared vnto him in the buszhe. The same broughte them out, and dyd wonders and tokens in Egipte, and in the reed see, and in f wyldernesse fortye yeares. This is that Moses, which sayde vnto the children of Israel: "A prophet shal the LORDE youre God rayse vp vnto you euen from amonge youre brethren, like vnto me. Him shal ye heare. This is he," that was in the congregacion in the wyldernesse with the angell, which talked with him, vpō mount Sina, and with oure fathers. This man receaued the worde of life to geue vnto vs, vnto whom oure fathers wolde not be obediēt, but thrust him frō the, and in their hertes turned backe agayne in to Egipte, and sayde vnto Aaron: "Make vs goddess to go before vs, for we can not tell what is become of this Moses, f broughte vs out of the lande of Egipte. And they made a calfe at the same tyme, and offered sacrifice vnto the ymage, and reioysed in the workes of their awne handes.

But God turned himselfe, a "gaue them vp, so that they worshipped the hooste of heauē, as it is wryten in the boke of the prophetes: "O ye house of Israel, gaue ye me sacrifices and catel those fortye yeares in the wyldernesse? And ye toke vnto you f tabernacle of Moloch, and the starre of youre god Remphan, ymages which ye youre selues made to worshippinge the. And I wil cast you out beyonde Babilon.

Oure fathers had the tabernacle of witness in f wyldernesse, like as he appoynted them, f whan he spake vnto Moses, that he shulde make it (acordinge to the patrone, f he had sene.) which oure fathers also receaued, and brought it with Iosue in to the londe that the "Heythē had in possession, whom God droue out before the face of oure fathers, vntyll the tyme of Dauid, which founde fauoure with God, and desyred that he might fynde a tabernacle for the God of Iacob.

But Salomon buylte hi an house. ¶ Howbeit f Hyst of all dwelleth not in temples that are made with handes: As he sayeth by the prophete: "Heauē is my seate, and the earth is my fote stole. on the righte hande of God, and sayde: Beholde, I se the heauens open, and the sonne of mā standinge on y^e righte honde of God. But they cried out with a loude voyce, & * stopped their eares, and rāne violently vpon him all at once, and thrust him out of the cite, and stoned him. † And y^e witnesses layed downe their clothes at the fete of a yonge man, which was called Saul. And they stoned Steuen, which cryed, & sayde: LORDE Iesu, receaue my sprete. And he kneled downe, & cried with a loude voyce: † LORDE, laye not this synne to their charge. And whā he had thus spoken, he fell a slepe.

The viij. Chapter.

¶ SAUL had pleasure in his death. At y^e same tyme there was a greate persecucion ouer the congregacion at Ierusalē. And they were all scattered abroad in the regions of Iewrye & Samaria, excepte the Apostles. As for Steuen, men y^e feared God dressed him, and made greate lamentacion ouer him. † But Saul made hauocke of the congregacion, entred in to euery house, and drue out men & women, & deluyered thē to prison. They now y^e were scattered abroad wēte aboute & preached the worde. Thē came Philippe in to a cite of Samaria, and preached Christ vnto them. And the people gaue hede with one acorde vnto y^e thinges that Philip spake, hearinge him, and seynge the tokēs that he dyd. For the vnclene spretes cryed loude, and departed out of many y^e were possessed. And many that were sick of the palsie and lame, were healed. And there was greate ioye in the same cite.

But afore there was in y^e same cite a certayne mā, called Simon, which vsed witche craft, and bewitched y^e people of Samaria, sayenge, that he was a man which coulde do greate thinges. And they all regarded him from the leest vnto y^e greatest, & sayde: This is the power of God which is greate. But they regarded him, because that of longe tyme he had bewitched them with his sorcery.

¶ Howbeit whā they beleued Philips preachinge of y^e kyngdome of God, and of the name of Iesu Christ, they were baptysed both mē & wemē. Then Symon himself beleued also, and was baptysed, and cleued vnto Philippe. And whā he sawe the dedes and tokens that were done, he wondred.

Whan the Apostles which were at Ierusalem, herde, that Samaria had receaued y^e worde of God, they sent vnto thē Peter and Ihon. Which, whā they were come, prayed for thē, y^e they might receaue the holy goost. For as yet he was come vpon none of them but they were baptysed onely in the name of Christ Iesu. † Then layed they their hādes on them, and they receaued the holy goost.

But whan Simon sawe, that by the layenge on of the Apostles hādes y^e holy goost was geuen, he offred thē money, and sayde: Geue me also this power, that, on whomsouer I put the hōdes, he maye receaue the holy goost. Howbeit Peter sayde vnto him: Perishe thou with thy money, y^e because thou thinkest that y^e gifte of God maye be optayned with money. Thou shalt haue nether parte ner felashipe in this worde, for thy hert is not righte before God. Repente therfore of this thy wickednesse, and praye vnto God, yf happily the thought of thy hert maye be forgeuē y^e. For I se, y^e thou art full of bytter gall, and wrappen in with vnrighteousnesse.

Then answered Simon, & sayde: ¶ Praye ye vnto the LORDE for me, y^e none of these thinges wherof ye haue spoken, come vpon me. And they, whā they had testified and spokē the worde of the LORDE, turned agayne to Ierusalem, and preached the Gospel in many townes of the Samaritanes.

But the angell of the LORDE spake vnto Philippe, and sayde: Aryse, & go towarde the South, vnto the waye that goeth downe from Ierusalem vnto Gaza, which is deserte. And he rose, and wente on. And beholde, a mā of the Morians lōde (a chamberlayne and of auctorite with Candace y^e quene of the londre of the Morians) which had the rule of all hir treasures, y^e same came to Ierusalē to worships. And returned home agayne, and satt vpon his charet, and red the prophet Esay.

The sprete sayde vnto Philippe: Go neare, and ioyne thy selfe to yonder charet. Thē ranne Philippe vnto him, and herde him rede the prophet Esay, and sayde: Vnderstōdest thou what thou readeest? He sayde: How can I, excepte some mā enfourme me?

them bounde vnto the hye prestes? But Saul increased in strength, ⁊ cōfounded ꝑ Iewes which dwelt at Damascōn, and affirmed ꝑ this was very Christ.

¶ And after many dayes the Iewes helde a counsell together to kyll him. But it was tolde Saul, that they layed wayte for him. And they wayted at ꝑ gates daye ⁊ night, that they might kyll him. *Then the disciples toke him by nighte, ⁊ put him thorow the wall, and let him downe in a baskett.

¶ But whan Saul came to Ierusalem, he assayed to ioyne himself to ꝑ disciples. And they were all afayed of him, and beleued not, ꝑ he was a disciple. Neuertheles Barnabas toke him, and broughte him to the Apostles, and tolde them how he had sene the LORDE in the waye, and how he spake to him, ⁊ how he had done boldly at Damascōn in the name of Iesu. And he was with them, and wente out and in at Ierusalē, and quyte him selfe boldly in ꝑ name of ꝑ LORDE Iesu. He spake also, and disputed with ꝑ Grekes. But they wēte aboute to slaye him. Whan the brethren knewe ꝑ, they brought him to Cesarea, and sent him forth to Tharsis. So the congregacions had rest thorow out all Iewry, and Galile, and Samaria, ⁊ were edified, and walked in the feare of the LORDE, and were fylled with the comforte of the holy goost.

¶ It chaunced that as Peter walked thorow all quarters, he came also vnto ꝑ sayntes which dwelt at Lydda. There founde he a man named Eneas, which had lyen vpon his bedd eight yeaeres sicke of ꝑ palsy. And Peter sayde vnto him: Eneas, Iesus Christ make the whole, aryse, and make thy bedd for thy self. And he arose immediatly. And all they that dwelt at Lydda and at Saronā, sawe him, and turned vnto the LORDE.

At Ioppa there was a certayne woman that was a disciple, named Tabitha, which by interpretation is called Dorcas: ꝑ same was full of good workes and almesse dedes, which she dyd. But it chaunced at the same tyme, that she was sicke, and dyed. Then washzed they her, and layed her in a chāber. But for so moch as Lydda was nye vnto Ioppa, and the disciples herde that Peter was there, they sent two men vnto him, and desyred him, ꝑ he wolde take it for no grefe to come vnto them.

Peter rose, and came with thē. And whā he was come, they broughte him in to the chamber, and all the wyddowes stode rounde aboute him, wepyng, and shewed him the cotes and garmētes, which Dorcas made whyle she was with them. And whā Peter had put them all forth, he kneeled downe, made his prayer, and turned him vnto the body, and sayde: Tabitha, ryse vp. And she opened hir eyes: and whan she sawe Peter[†] she sat hir downe agayne. But he gauē her the hande, and lifte her vp, and called the sayntes and the wedowes, and shewed her there alnye. And it was knowne thorow out all Ioppa, ⁊ many beleued on ꝑ LORDE. And it fortunēd, ꝑ he taried a lōge season at Ioppa by one Simō, which was a tanner.

The i. Chapter.

THERE was a man at Cesarea, named Cornelius (a captayne of ꝑ cōpany, which is called ꝑ Italianysh) a deuoute man, ⁊ one that feared God with all his house, ⁊ gauē moch almesse to ꝑ people, and prayed God alwaye. The same sawe in a vision openly (aboute the nyenth houre of the daye) an angell of God entringe in to him, and sayenge vnto him: Cornelius. He loked vpon him, and was afayed, and sayde: LORDE, what is it? He sayde vnto him: Thy prayers ⁊ thine almesses are come vp in to remēbraunce before God. And now sende men vnto Ioppa, ⁊ call for Simō, whose syrname is Peter, which is at lodginge with one Symon a tanner, whose house lyeth by ꝑ see syde: he shal tell ꝑ, what thou oughtest to do. And whā the angell which spake to Cornelius, was departed, he called two of his housholde seruauntes, ⁊ a deuoute soudyer, of thē that wayted vpon him: and tolde them all, and sent thē to Ioppa.

On the nexte daye after whan these were goinge on their iourney, and came nye vnto the cite, Peter ꝑ wente vp in to a chamber to praye aboute the sixte houre. And whan he was hōgrie, he wolde haue eatē. But whyle they made ready for him, he fell in to a trance, and sawe heauē open, and a vessell cōmyngē downe vnto him, as it had bene a

And there came a voyce vnto him: Ryse Peter, slaye, & eate. But Peter sayde: Oh no, LORDE, * for I neuer ate eny comen or vnclane thinge. And the voyce spake vnto him agayne y^e secōde tyme: † What God hath clensed, y^e make not thou vnclane. This was done thryse. And y^e vessell was receaued vp agayne in to heauen.

But whyle Peter was combed in him selfe, what maner of vision this shulde be which he had sene, beholde, the men y^e were sent from Cornelius, enquired after Simōs house, and stode before the dore, and called, and axed whether Simon (whose syrname was Peter) were lodged there. Whyle Peter was musinge of the vision, the sprete sayde vnto him: beholde, the men seke the. Arise therfore, and get the downe, & go with thē, and doute not, for I haue sent them.

Then wente Peter downe to the men, y^e were sent vnto him from Cornelius, and sayde: lo, I am he whom ye seke: what is y^e cause, wherfore ye are come? They sayde: Cornelius the capytaine, a iust man and one that feareth God, and of good reporte amōge all the people of the Iewes, was warned by an holy angell, to sende for the in to his house, and to heare wordes of the. † Then called he them in, and lodged them.

The nexte daye after wente Peter forth with them, and certayne brethren of Ioppa bare him company. And y^e daye folowinge came they to Cesarea. Cornelius wayted for thē, and had called together his kynszfolkes and speciaall frendes. And as it chaunced y^e Peter came in, Cornelius mett him, and fell downe at his fete, & worshipped him. But Peter toke him vp, and sayde: † Stonde vp, I am a man also. And as he talked with him, he wente in, and founde many that were come together, and he sayde vnto them: Ye knowe, that it is not lafull for a man beyng a Iewe to ioyne him selfe or to come to a stranger. But God hath shewed me, y^e I shulde call no mā comen or vnclane. Therfore haue I not doutē to come, as soone as I was sent for.

I axe you therfore, for what intent haue ye sent for me?

Cornelius sayde: It is now foure dayes agoo, then fasted I, and at the nyenth houre I prayed in my house, and beholde, there stode a mā before me in a bryghte clothinge, and sayde: Cornelius, thy prayer is herde, and thine allmesse dedes are had in remēbraunce in the sighte of God. Sende therfore to Ioppa, and call for one Simon (whose syrname is Peter) which is at lodginge in y^e house of Simon y^e tāner, by the see syde: y^e same whā he commeth, shal speake vnto y^e. Then sent I vnto the immediatly, and thou hast done well, that thou art come. Now are we all here presente before God, to heare all thinges that are commaunded of the God.

Peter opened his mouth, & sayde: * Now perceauē I of a trueth, that God hath no respecte of personnes, † but in all people he y^e feareth him, and worketh righteousnes, is accepted vnto him. Ye knowe of y^e preachinge that God sent vnto the children of Israel, preachinge thorow Iesus Christ (which is LORDE ouer all) which preachinge was published thorow out all Iewry, & begāne in Galile after y^e baptyme that Ihon preached, how God  anoynted the same Iesus of Nazareth with the holy goost and with power, which wente aboute, & dyd good, and healed all those that were oppressed of the deuell, for God was with him. And we are witnesses of all that he dyd in the londe of the Iewes, & at Ierusalem. Whom they slewe, and hanged on tre.

Him God raysed vp on the third daye, † and caused him be openly shewed, not to all the people, but to y^e chosen witnesses of God euen vnto vs, which ate & dronke with him, after he was rysen vp from the deed. And he commaunded vs to preach vnto the people, and to testifie, that it is he which is ordeyned of God a iudge of the luyngne and of the deed. Of him beare all the prophetes wytnesse, that thorow his name all they y^e beleue in him, shal receaue remysion of synnes. Whyle Peter was yet speakyng these wordes, the holy goost fell vpō all thē that herkened vnto the worde. And the faithfull of the circūcision which came with Peter, were astonnied, because that the giste of f holy goost was shed out also vpon the Heythen. For they herde that they spake with tungen, and magnified God. Thē answered Peter: "Maye eny man forbydde water, that these shulde not be baptysed, which haue receaued the holy goost as well as we? And he commaunded them to be baptysed in the name of the LORDE. Thē prayed they him, that he wolde tary there certayne dayes.

The xi. Chapter.

THE Apostles and the brethren that were in Iewry, herde saye, that the Heythen also had receaued the worde of God. And whan Peter was come vp to Ierusalem, they that were of the circūcision, chode with him, and sayde: * Thou wentest in to men that are vncircumcysed, and hast eaten with them. But Peter beganne, and expounded the thinge in order vnto thē and sayde: I was in f cite of Ioppa prayēge,^a and in a trauunce I sawe a vision, a vessell commynge downe, as it had bene a greate linnen clothe with foure corners, and let downe from heauen, and came vnto me. In to the which I loked, and considered, and sawe foure foted beestes of the earth, and wyld beestes, and wormes, and foules of the ayre. And I herde a voyce, which sayde vnto me: Ryse Peter, slaye, t eate. But I sayde: Oh no, LORDE, for there neuer entred eny comen or vncleane thinge in to my mouth. Neuertheles the voyce answered me agayne from heauen: What God hath clensed, that call not thou vncleane. This was done thre tymes, and all was taken vp agayne in to heauen.

And beholde, immediatly stode there thre men before the dore of the house that I was in, sent from Cesarea vnto me. But the sprete sayde vnto me, that I shulde go with thē and doute nothinge. ^c These sixe brethrē also came with me, and we entred in to the māns house.

33 And he shewed vs, how he had sene an angell stondinge in his house, which sayde vnto him: Sende men to Ioppa, and call for Simon (whose synname is Peter) he shall tell f wordes, wherby thou and all thy house shal be saued. But whan I beganne to speake, the holy goost fell vpō them, t like as vpon vs at f begynnynge. Then thoughte I vpon the worde of the LORDE, how he sayde: t Ihon baptysed with water, but ye shalbe baptysed with f holy goost. For as moch then as God hath geuen them like giftes, as vnto vs, which beleue on the LORDE Iesus Christ, who was I, that I shulde be able to withstōde God? Whan they herde this, they helde their peace, and praysed God, and sayde: Then hath God also to the Heithen graunted repentaunce vnto life.

^e They that were scatred abroad thorow f trouble f rose aboute Steuen, walked on euery syde vntyll Phenices, and Cipers, and Antioche, and spake the worde vnto noman but onely vnto f Iewes. Neuertheles some of thē were men of Cipers and Cyren, which came to Antioche, and spake also vnto the Grekes, t preached the Gospell of the LORDE Iesu. And f hande of the LORDE was with thē. And a greate nombre beleued, and turned vnto the LORDE.

This tydinges of them came to f eares of the cōgregacion at Ierusalem. And they sent Barnabas, that he shulde go vnto Antioche. Which whan he was come thither, t sawe the grace of God, he was glad, t exorted them all, that with purpose of hert they wolde contynue in the LORDE. For he was a good man, full of the holy goost and faith. And there was a greate multitude of people added vnto the LORDE. But Barnabas departed vnto Tharsus, to seke Saul. And whā he had fōude hī, he brought hī to Anthioche. It chaūced, that a whole yeare they were there cōuersaunte together in the cōgregaciō, t taughte moch people, so that the disciples at Antioche were first called Christen.

In those dayes came there prophetes frō Ierusalem vnto Antioche. And one of them (whose name was t Agabus) stode vp, and declared by the sprete a greate derth, that shulde come ouer the whole compass of the earth: which came to passe vnder the Emperoure Claudius. But the disciples cōcludē (euery one acordinge to his abylyte) to sende^g an handreachinge vnto f brethren that were in Iewry: which thinge they also dyd, and sent it by the handes of Barnabas and Saul.

AT the same tyme layed kynge Herode hands vpon certayne of the congregacion, to vexce them. As for * James the brother of Ihon, him he slewe with the swerde. And whan he sawe that it pleased the Iewes, he proceeded farther to take Peter also. But it was Easter. Now whan he had taken him, he put him in preson, and delyuered him vnto foure quaternions of soudyers, to kepe him: and thought after Easter to bringe him forth to the people. And Peter was kepte in the preson. † But prayer was made without ceasinge of the congregacion, vnto God for him. And whan Herode wolde haue broughte him out vnto the people, in the same night slepte Peter betweene two soudiers, bounde with two cheynes. And the keepers before the dore kepte the preson.

33 And beholde, the angell of the LORDE was there presente, and a lighte shyned in the habitacion, and he smote Peter on the syde, and waked him vp, and sayde: Aryse vp quickly. And the cheynes fell of from his hondes. And the angell sayde vnto him: Gyrde the, and put on thy shues. And he dyd so. And he sayde vnto him: Cast thy mantle aboute the, and folowe me. And he wente out, and folowed him, and wyst not, that it was trueth that was done by ‡ angell, but thoughte he had sene a vision. Neuertheles they wente thorow the first and seconde watch, and came to the yron gate, that ledeth vnto the cite, which opened to the by his awne acorde. And they wente out, and passed thorow one strete, and immediatly the angell departed from him.

C And whan Peter was come to himself, he sayde: Now I knowe of a trueth, that § LORDE hath sent his angell, and delyuered me out of the honde of Herode, and from all the waytinge for of the people of the Iewes. And as he considered the thinge, he came to the house of Mary the mother of one Ihon, (which after his synname was called Marke) where many were gathered together, † and prayed. As Peter knocked at the entry dore, there came forth a damsell to herken, named Rhoda. And whan she knewe Peters voyce, she opened not the entrye for gladnes, but rāne in, and tolde, that Peter stode before § entrye. But they sayde vnto her: Thou art mad. Neuertheles she abode by it, that is was so. They sayde: it is his angell. But Peter contynued knockinge. Whan they opened the dore, they sawe him, and were astonnyed. § But he beckened vnto them with the hande, to holde their peace, † tolde them, how the LORDE had broughte him out of the preson. And he sayde: Shewe this vnto James, and to the brethren. And he departed, and wete in to another place.

D Whan it was daye, there was not a little a doo amōge the soudyers, what was become of Peter. Whan Herode had called for him, and founde him not, he caused the keepers to be examyned, and commaunded the to be caried awaye, and he wente downe frō Iewry vnto Cesarea, and there abode. But he was displeased with them of Tyre and Sidō. Neuertheles they came vnto him with one accorde, and made intercession to Blastus the kynges chamberlayne, and desyred peace, because their cōtre was nourished by the kynges londe. But vpon a daye appoynted, Herode put on § kyngly apparell, sat him downe vpon the iudgment seate, and made an oracion vnto them. As for the people, they cried therto: This is a voyce of God, and not of a man. Immediatly the angell of the LORDE smote him, because he gaue not God the honoure: And he was eaten vp of wormes, † and gaue vp the goost. But the worde of God grewe, and multiplyed. As for Barnabas and Saul, they came agayne to Ierusalem, and delyuered † the handreachinge, and toke with them Ihon, whose synname was Marke.

The xiiij. Chapter.

THERE were at Antioche in the congregacion, prophetes and teachers, as Barnabas, and Simon called Niger, and Lucius of Cyren, and Manahen Herodes the Tetrachas norsfelowe, and Saul. As they serued § LORDE, and fasted, the holy goost sayde: Separate me out Barnabas and Saul for the worke, † where vnto I haue called them. Then fasted they and prayed, and layed the handes on them, and let them go. And they beyng sent of the holy goost, came vnto Seleucia, from thence they sayled vnto Cyper. goges of [†] Iewes. And they had ^{*} Ihon to their mynister.

And whan they had gone thorow out the yle vnto the cyte of Paphos, they founde a certayne Sorcerer and false prophete, a Iewe (whose name was Bariesu) which was with Sergius Paulus the ruler of the cowntre, a mā of vnderstandinge. The same called Barnabas and Saul vnto him, and desyred to heare [‡] worde of God. Then the [†] Sorcerer Elimas (for so was his name by interpretacion) withstode thē, and soughte to turne away the ruler frō the faith. But Saul which is also called Paul, beyng full of the holy goost, loked vpon him, and sayde: O thou childe of the deuell, full of all suttyltie and all disceatfulnesse, and enemye of all righteousnes, thou ceasest not to peruerthe the straight wayes of [‡] LORDE. And now beholde, the hāde of the LORDE commeth vpon the, and thou shalt be blynde, and not se the Sonne for a season. And immediatly there fell on him a myst and darknesse, and he wente aboute, and soughte them that shulde lede him by the hande. Whan the ruler sawe what was done, he beleued, and wōdred at the doctryne of the LORDE.

³³ Whan Paul and they that were with him, were departed by shippe frō Paphos, they came to Perga in the londe of Pamphilia. [†] But Ihon departed from them, and wente agayne to Ierusalem. Neuertheles they wandred thorow from Perga, and came to Antioche in the londe of Pīsidia, and wēte in to the synagoge vpon the Sabbath daye, and sat downe. But after the lecture of the lawe and of the prophetes, the rulers of the synagoge sent vnto them, sayenge: Good brethren, yf ye haue eny sermon to exorte the people, saye on. Then stode Paul vp, and [‡] bekened with the hande (that they shulde holde their peace) and sayde:

Ye men of Israel, and ye that feare God, herkē to: The God of this people chose oure fathers, and exalted the people, whan they were straungers in the lōde of Egipte, and [†] with a mightie arme broughte he them out of it. Whan the Iewes were gone out of the synagoge, the Heythen besoughte them, ⁊ they wolde speake ⁊ worde vnto them betwene the Sabbath dayes. And whā the cōgregacion of the synagoge was broken vp, many Iewes and Proselytes ⁊ serued God, folowed Paul and Barnabas, which spake to them, and ⁊ exorted them, that they shulde contynue in the grace of God.

3E On ⁊ Sabbath folowing, came almost the whole cite together, to heare the worde of God. But whan the Iewes sawe the people, they were full of indignacion, and spake agaynst that which was spoken of Paul, speakinge agaynst it, & blasphemynge. But Paul and Barnabas waxed bolde, and sayde: ^dIt behoued first the worde of God to be spoken vnto you: but now that ye thrust it frō you, and counte youre selues vnworthy of euerlastinge life, lo, ^ewe turne to the Gentyles. For so hath the LORDE cōmaunded vs: ^fI haue set the to be a lighte vnto ⁊ Gentyles, ⁊ thou be ⁊ Saluacion vnto the ende of the earth. Whan the Gentyles herde that, they were glad, and praysed the worde of the LORDE, and beleued, euē as many as were ordeyned to euerlastinge life. And the worde of ⁊ LORDE was spred abrode thorow out all the region. ^gHowbeit the Iewes moued the deuoute and honorable wemen, and the chefe men of the cite, and raysted vp a persecution agaynst Paul and Barnabas and expelled them out of their coastes. But they ⁊shoke of the dust of their fete agaynst them, and came to Iconium. And the disciples were fylled with ioye and with the holy goost.

The xiiij. Chapter.

IT fortuned at Iconium, that they wēte both ^A together in to the synagoge of the Iewes, and spake so, that a greate multitude of the Iewes & of the Grekes beleued. But the vnbeleuyng Iewes moued and disquyeted the soules of the Heythē agaynst the brethrē. So they had their beyng there a lōge season, and quyte them selues boldly in the LORDE, which gaue testimony vnto the worde of his grace, and caused tokens and ^hwonders to be done by their handes. Howbeyt the multitude of the cite was deuyded, some helde with the Iewes, and some with the Apostles.

But whan there rose vp an insurreccion of the Heythē and of ⁊ Iewes, and of their rulers, to put them to shame, and to stone thē, they perceaued it, and ⁱfled vnto lystra and Derba cities of ⁊ countre of Licaonia, and vnto ⁊ region that lyeth rounde aboute, and there they preached the Gospell.

And amonge them of Lystra, there was a ^B man, which sat beyng impotent of his fete, and was crepell frō his mothers wombe, and had neuer walked, the same herde Paul speake. And whan he behelde him, and perceaued that he had faith to be made whole, he sayde with a loude voyce: Stonde vp righte on thy fete. And he sprange vp and walked. But whan the people sawe what Paul had done, they lifte vp their voyce, and sayde in ⁊ speache of Lycaonia: The goddes are become like vnto men, and are come downe vnto vs. And they called Barnabas Iupiter, and Paul Mercurius, because he was the preacher. But Iupiters prest which dwelt before their cite, broughte oxen and garlandes before the gate, and wolde haue done sacrifice with the people.

And whan they sayde this, they scarce refrayned the people, that they dyd not sacrifice vnto them.

But there came thither certayne Iewes from Antioche and Iconiū, and perswaded the people, and *stoned Paul, and drue him out of the cite, supposinge he had bene deed. Howbeyt as \hat{y} disciples stode rounde aboute him, he rose vp, and came in to the cite. And on the nexte daye he departed with Barnabas vnto Derba, and preached the Gospell vnto the same cite, and taughte many of them. And they wete agayne vnto Lystra, and Iconium and Antioche, strengthinge the soules of \hat{y} disciples, and exortinge the to cōtynue in the faith: and that we thorow moch tribulation must entre in to the kyngdome of God. And whā they had ordeyned them Elders by eleccion thorow all the congregacions, they prayed and fasted, and cōmended them vnto the LORDE, on whom they beleued.

And they wente thorow Pisidia, and came to Pamphilia, and spake the worde at Perga, and wete downe to Attalia, and frō thence departed they by shippe vnto Antioche: from whence they were delyuered to the grace of God vnto \hat{y} worke, which they had fulfilled. Whan they came there, they gathered the congregacion together, and shewed them, how greate thinges God had done with the, and how he had opened the dore of faith vnto the Heithen. And there they abode a longe tyme with the disciples.

The xv. Chapter.

AND there came certayne frō Iewry, and taughte the brethren: † Excepte ye be circumcysed after the maner of Moses, ye can not be saued. Now whā there rose a discēion, and Paul and Barnabas had set them selues harde agaynst them; they ordeyned, that Paul and Barnabas and certayne other of them shulde go vp to Ierusalem vnto the Apostles and Elders, aboute this questiō. And they were broughte on their waye by \hat{y} cōgregacion, and wente thorow Phenices and Samaria, and declared the \hat{y} conuersacion of the Heythen, and brought greate ioye vnto all the brethren. Whan they came to Ierusalē, they were receaued of \hat{y} cōgregacion, and of the Apostles, and of the Elders, and they tolde how greate thinges God had done with the. Then rose there vp certayne of the secte of \hat{y} Pharises (which beleued) and sayde: They must be circumcysed and cōmaunded, to kepe the lawe of Moses. But the Apostles and Elders came together, to reason vpon this matter.

Now whan there was moch disputinge Peter rose vp, and sayde vnto the: Ye men and brethren, ye knowe that a good whyle agoe, God chose amonge vs, \hat{y} the Heythē by my mouth shulde heare the worde of the Gospell, and beleue. And God the knower of hertes bare wytnesse ouer the, and gaue the the holy goost, like as vn to vs, and put no difference betwixt vs and them, and purified their hertes thorow fayth. Now therefore why tempte ye God, with layenge vpon \hat{y} disciples neckes the yocke, which neither oure fathers ner we were able to beare? But we beleue to be saued thorow the grace of the LORDE Iesu Christ, like as they also. Then all \hat{y} multitude helde their peace, and gaue audience vnto Paul and Barnabas, which tolde how greate tokens and wonders God had done by the amōge the Heythen. Afterwarde whan they helde their peace, Iames answered, and sayde: Ye men and brethren, herke vnto me, Simō hath tolde, how God at the first vysited to receaue a people vnto his name from amonge the Heythen. And vnto this agree \hat{y} wordes of the prophetes, as it is wrytē: After this wyl I returne and wyl buylde agayne \hat{y} tabernacle of Dauid, that is fallen downe, and that which is fallen in decaye therof, wyl I buylde agayne, and wyl set it vp, that the residue of men maye seke after the LORDE: and also the Heythen vpon whom my name is named, sayeth the LORDE, which doth all these thinges. ¶ We the Apostles and Elders ⁊ brethren, wyshe health vnto the brethrē of the Heythē which are at Antioche, and Syria and Celcicia.
For so much as we haue herde that certayne

the ⁊ offeringes of Idols, and from bloude, and from strangled, and from whordome.
From the which yf ye absteyne youre selues, ye shal do well. Fare ye well.

¶ When these were sent forth, they came vnto Antioche, and gathered the multitude together, and delueryed the epistle. Where they had red it, they were glad of that cōsolacion. As for Iudas & Syllas (which were prophetes also) they exorted & brethēre with moch preachinge, and strēghthed them. And when they had taried there for a season, they were let go of the brethren in peace vnto the Apostles. Notwithstandinge Syllas thoughte it good to byde there styll. But Paul and Barnabas cōtynued at Antioche, teachinge and preachinge the worde of the LORDE, with other many.

Neuertheles after certayne dayes Paul sayde vnto Barnabas: let vs go agayne, and vyset oure brethern thorow all the cities (where) we haue shewed the worde of the LORDE) how they do. But Barnabas gaue counsell, that they shulde take with the Ihon, whose synonyme was Marke. Howbeit Paul thoughte it mete, not to take him with them,  which departed from them in Pamphilia, and wente not with them vnto the worke. And so sharpe was the strife betwene them, that they departed asunder y one fro the other, and Barnabas toke Marke vnto him, and sayled vnto Cyper. But Paul chose Sylas, and departed, beyng commytted of the brethern vnto the grace of God. He wente thorow Syria and Celcicia, establishing the congregacions.

The rbi. Chapter.

HE came vnto Derba and to Lystra, and beholde, a certayne discipule was there named Timotheus, the sonne of a Iewish woman, which beleued, but his father was a Greke: ¶ same had a good reporte amonge the brethre of Lystra and at Iconium. Paul wolde that the same shulde go forth with him, and toke and ¶ circumcysed him because of the Iewes that were in those quarters. For they knewe all, that his father was a Greke. But as they wente thorow the cities, they delyuered them the sentence to kepe, ¶ which was concluded of the Apostles and Elders at Ierusalem. Thē were the congregacions stablished in the faith, and increased in nombre daylie.

Howbeit as they came in to Mysia, they proued to take their iourney in to Bithinia, and the sorette suffred them not.

Neuertheles whan they had passed thorow Mysia, they came downe to Troada, and there appeared a vision vnto Paul by night, that there was a man of Macedonia which stode and prayed him, and sayde: Come downe to Macedonia, and helpe vs. Whan he had sene y vision, we soughte immediatly to go, vnto Macedonia, beyng certified, that y^e LORDE had called vs thither, to preach the Gospell vnto them. from Troada, and came the straight course vnto Samothracia, on the nexte daye to Neapolis, and from thence to Philippis, which is the chefe cite of the londe of Macedonia, and a fre cite. In this cite abode we certayne dayes.

On the daye of the Sabbathes wēte we out of the cite besyde the water, where men were wonte to praye, and we sat downe, and spake vnto the women that resorted thither. And a deuoute woman (named Lydia) a seller of purple, out of the cite of Thiatira, herkened to, whose hert the LORDE opened that she gaue hede vnto the thinges that Paul spake. When she was baptysed and hir housholde, she besought vs, and sayde: Yf ye thynke that I beleue on the LORDE, then come in to my house, and a byde there. And she * constraigned vs.

¶ It fortuned when we wente to prayer, † there met vs a damsel, which had a sprete of soythsayenge, and broughte hir master and mastresse greate vauntage with soyth sayenge: ‡ same folowed Paul and vs, and cryed, and sayde: These men are the seruantes of the most hye God, which shewe vs † waye of saluacion. This dyd she many dayes. But Paul was not content with it, and turned him aboute, and sayde vnto the sprete: Icōmaunde the in the name of Iesu Christ, that thou departe out of her. ¶ And he departed out at the same houre.

¶ But whā hir master and mastresse sawe that the hope of their vauntage was gone,^d † they toke Paul and Sylas, drue them in to the market place before † rulers, and broughte thē vnto the officers, and sayde: These men trouble oure cyte, † are Iewes, and preach an ordynance, which is not lafull for vs to receaue, ner to obserue, seyng we are Romaynes. And the people rāne on them, and the officers rente their clothes, and cōmaunded them to be beaten with roddes.^e And when they had beaten them sore, they cast thē in prison, and commaunded the iayler, to kepe them diligēty. Which whan he had receaued soch commaundement, he cast thē in to the ynnere prison, and put their fete in the stocks.

But at mydnight prayed Paul and Sylas, and prayed God. And the presoners herde them. Sodenly was there a greate earth quake, so that the fundacions of the preson were shaken. And immediatly were all the dores open, and all their bondes lousd. Whā the keeper of the preson waked out of slepe, and sawe the preson dores open, he drue out his swerde, and wolde haue kylled him selfe: for he thoughte † presoners had bene fled. But Paul cryed loude, and sayde: Do thy self no harme, for we are all here.

He called for a lighte, and sprange in, and trembled, and fell at the fete of Paul and Sylas, and broughte them out, and sayde: Syrs, what must I do, to be saued? They sayde:^f Beleue on the LORDE Iesus, and so shalt thou and thy housholde be saued. And they preached the worde of the LORDE vnto him, and to all that were in his house.

¶ And he toke them to him in the same houre ¶ of the night, and washed their strypes. And immediatly was he baptysed, and all his. And he broughte them in to his house, and set them a table, and † reioysed with all his housholde, that he was become a beleuer on God.

¶ And when it was daye, the officers of the cite sent mynisters, and sayde: Let those men go. And the keeper of the preson tolde this sayenge vnto Paul: The officers haue sent hither, that ye shulde be lowse. Now therefore get you hēce, and go in peace. But Paul sayde vnto them: They haue beaten vs openly vncondempned (where as we are yet Romaynes) and haue cast vs in prison, and shulde they now thrust vs out preuely? Not so, but let them come them selues, and brynge vs out. The mynisters tolde these wordes vnto the officers. And they feared, when they herde that they were Romaynes, and came and besoughte them, and prayed thē to departe out of the cite. Then wente they out of the preson, and entred in to the house of Lydia. And when they had sene the brethren and comforted them, they departed.

The xviij. Chapter.

AFTER that departed Paul frō Athens, and came to Corinthum, and founde a Iewe named * Aquila, borne in Pōtus, which was lately come out of Italy: and his wife Priscilla (because the Emperoure Claudius had commaunded all Iewes to departe from Rome) and he drue vnto thē. And because he was of the same crafte, he abode with thē, and wroughte. Their crafte was to make tentes. And he preached in the synagoge euery Sabbath daye, and exhorted the Iewes and the Grekes.

Whan Sylas and Timotheus were come fro Macedonia, Paul was constrayned by the sprete to testifye vnto § Iewes, that Iesus was very Christ. But whā they sayde cōtrary and blasphemed, † he shoke his rayment, and sayde vnto them: Yourre bloude be vpon youre awne heade. From hence forth I go blamelesse vnto the Gentyles. And he departed thence, and came in to the house of a man named Iustus, which feared God, and his house was nexte vnto the synagoge. Howbeit Crispus the chefe ruler of the synagoge, beleued on § LORDE with all his housholde. And many of the Corinthians that gaue audience, beleued, and were baptysed

The LORDE spake vnto Paul by a vision in § nighte: Be not afrayed, but speake, and holde not thy peace, for I am with the: and noman shal inuade the that shal hurte the, for I haue moch people in this cite. He contynned there a yere and sixe monethes, and taught them the worde of God.

33 But whan Gallio was ruler of the cōtre of Achaia, the Iewes made insurreccion with one acorde agaynst Paul, & broughte him before the iudgment seate, and sayde: This felowe counceleth men to worships God cōtrary to the lawe. Whan Paul was aboute to open his mouth, Gallio sayde vnto § Iewes: Yf it were a matter of wronge or an euell dede (O ye Iewes) reason wolde that I shulde heare you: but yf it be a question of wordes, and of names, and of § lawe amōge you, loke ye to it youre selues, I thinke not to be iudge there ouer. And he droue them from the iudgmēt seate. Then all the Grekes toke Sosthenes the ruler of the Sinagoge, and smote him before the iudgment seate. And Gallio cared for none of tho thinges.

Paul after § he had taried a good whyle, toke his leue of the brethren, and sayled in to Syria, Priscilla & Aquila bearinge him company. And he shored his heade at Cenchrea (for he had a † voue) & came downe to Ephesus, & lefte them there. But he himselfe wēte in to the synagoge, and reasoned with the Iewes. And they desyred him, that he wolde tary with them a longer season. And he cōsented not, but bad them farwele, and sayde: I must nedes in eny wyse kepe this feast that commeth, at Ierusalem: but § yf God wyl, I wil returne agayne vnto you.

And he departed from Ephesus, and came to Cesarea, and wente vp, and saluted § congregacion, and toke his iourney downe to Antioche, and taried there a certayne tyme, and departed, and walked thorow all § countre of Galatia and Phrigia by ordre, and strenghted all the disciples.

There came vnto Ephesus a certayne Iewe, named || Apollo (borne at Alexādria) an eloquent man, and mightie in the scriptures: the same was infourmed in the waye of the LORDE, and spake feruently in the sprete, and taughte diligently the thinges of the LORDE, and knewe but the baptyme off Ihon onely. The same beganne to speake boldly in the synagoge. Whan Aquila and Priscilla herde him, they toke him vnto thē, and expounded the waye of God vnto him more perfectly. But whan he wolde go in to Achaia, the brethren wrote, and exorted the disciples to receaue him. And whan he was come thither, he helped them moch which beleued thorow grace. For he ouercame the Iewes mightly, and shewed openly by § scripture, that Iesus was Christ.

The xix. Chapter.

A BUT it fortun'd when Apollo was at Corinthum, that Paul walked thorow the vpper coastes, and came to Ephesus, and founde certayne disciples, vn to whom he sayde: Haue ye receaued f holy goost, sence ye beleued? They sayde vnto hi: We haue not herde, whether there be an holy goost. He sayde vnto them: Where with then were ye baptysed? They sayde: With the baptyme of Ihon. Paul sayde: Ihon baptysed with the baptyme of repentaunce, and spake vnto f people, that they shulde beleue on him, which shulde come after him, that is, on Iesus, that the same is Christ. Whan they herde that, they were baptysed in the name of the LORDE Iesu. And whan Paul layed the hādes on thē, the holy goost came vpon them, and they spake with tūges, and prophecied. And all the men were aboute twolue.

He wēte in to f synagoge, and preached boldly thre monethes longe, teachinge, and geuyng the exhortacions of the kyngdome of God. But whan dyuerse waxed herde herted, and beleued not, and spake euell of the waye of the LORDE before the multitude, he departed from them, and separated the disciples, and disputed daylye in the scole of one called Tyrannus. And this was done two yeares lōge, so that all they which dwelt in Asia, herde the worde of the LORDE Iesu, both Iewes & Grekes. And God wroughte no small miracles by the handes of Paul, so that from his body there were broughte napkyns or partlettes vnto the sicke, and the diseases departed from them, and the euell spretes wente out of them.

B But certayne of the vagabounde Iewes which were coniurers, vndertoke to name f name of the LORDE Iesus, ouer those that had euell spretes, and sayde: We charge you by Iesus whom Paul preacheth. They were seuen sonnes of one Sceua a Iewe the hye prest, which dyd so. The euell sprete answered, and sayde: Iesus I knowe, and Paul I knowe, but who are ye? And the mā in whō the euell sprete was, ranne vpon them, and ouercame them, and cast them vnder him, so that they fled out of the same house naked and wounded. This was knowne vnto all the Iewes and Grekes which dwelt at Ephesus, and there fell a feare vpon them all. And f name of the LORDE Iesus was magnified. *Many of thē also that beleued, came and cōfessed, and shewed their workes. But many of them that had vsed curious craftes, broughte the bokes together, and burnte them openly: and they counted the pryce of them, and founde it of money fyftee thousande pens. So mightely grewe f worde of the LORDE, and preuayled.

Whan this was done, Paul purposed in C sprete to take his iourney thorow Macedonia and Achaia, and to go to Ierusalē, and sayde: After that I haue bene there, I must se Rome also. And he sent in to Macedonia two that mynistr'd vnto him, Timotheus and Erastus. But he himselfe remayned in Asia for a season. At the same tyme there rose no litle a doo aboute that waye. For a certayne man named Demetrius a goldsmith, which made syluer shrynes for Diana, and broughte them of the crafte no small vantage. Them he gathered together, and the feloweworkmē of the same occupation, and sayde: Syrs, ye knowe that by this crafte we haue vantage, and ye se and heare, that not onely at Ephesus, but almost also thorow out all Asia, this Paul turneth awaye moch people with his persuadyng, and sayeth: †They be not goddes that are made with hondes. Howbeit it shal not onely brynge oure occupation to this poynte to be set at naught, but also the temple of greate Diana shal from hence forth be despyed, and hir maiesty also shalbe destroyed, whō neuertheles all Asia and the worlde worshippeth.

Whan they herde this, they were full of D wrath, cried out, and sayde: Greate is Diana of the Ephesians. And all f cite was on a roore, and they rushez in with one assent in to the open place, and toke Gaius and Aristarchus of Macedonia, Pauls companions. Whan Paul wolde haue gone in amonge the people, the disciples suffred him not. Certayne also of f chefe of Asia which were Pauls good frendes, sent vnto him, and desyred him, that he shulde not preasse in to the open place. Some cried one thinge, some another. And the congregacion was out of quyetie, and the more parte knewe not wherfore they were come together. Some of the people drue forth Alexander, whan f Iewes thrust him forward. Alexāder beekened with the hande, and wolde haue geuen the people an answer. But whan they knewe that he was a Iewe, there arose a shout of all, and cried the space of two houres: Greate is Diana of the Ephesians.

¶ Whan the towne clarke had styled the people, he sayde: Ye men of Ephesus, what man is it which knoweth not, that the cite of ¶ Ephesiās is a worshipper of the greate goddess Diana, and of the heauenly ymage? Seinge now that this can not be sayde agaynst, ye ought to be contente, and to do nothinge without aduysment. Ye haue broughte hither these men, which are nether church-robbers nor blasphemers off youre goddesses.

But yff Demetrius and they that are craftsmen with him, haue ought to saye vn to eny man, the lawe is open, and there are rulers, let them accuse one another. But yf ye wil go aboute eny other thinge, it maye be determyned in a lauffull congregacion. For we stonde in ioperdy to be accused of this dayes vproure: and yet is there no man giltie, of whom we mighte geue a rekenynge of this vproure. And whan he had sayde this, he let the congregacion departe.

The rr. Chapter.

¶ NOW whan the vproure was ceased, Paul called the disciples vnto him, and toke his leue of them, and departed *to go in to Macedonia. And whan he had gone thorow those partes, and exhorted them with many wordes, he came in to Grekelonde, and there abode thre monethes. But whan the Iewes layed wayte for him, as he was aboute to sayle in to Syria, he purposed to turne agayne thorow Macedonia. There accompanied him in to Asia, Sopater of Berrea: and of Thessalonica, Aristarchus and Secundus: and Gaius of Derba, and Timotheus: but of Asia, Tychicus and ¶ Trophimus. These wente before, and taried for vs at Troada: but we sayled after the Easter dayes from Philippos, vnto ¶ fyfth daye, and came to them vnto Troada, and taried there seuen dayes.

¶ Vpon one of the Sabbathes, whan the disciples came together to breake bred, Paul preached vnto them, wyllinge to departe on the morow, and continued the preachinge

vnto mydnight. And there were many lightes in the chamber, where they were gathered together. There sat a yonge man named Eutychos, in a wyndow, and fell in to a depe slepe (whyle Paul was speakinge) and was ouercome with slepe, and fell downe from the thirde lofte, and was taken vp deed. But Paul wente downe, and fell on him, and embraced him, and sayde: Make nothinge a doo, for his soule is in hi. Then wente he vp, and brake the bred, and ate, and talked moch with thē, tyll the daye brake, and so departed. As for the yōge man, they broughte him alyue, and were not a litle confortid.

But we wente afore in to the shippe, and sayled towarde Asson, wyllinge there to receaue Paul. For so had he appoynted, and wolde himselfe go on fote. Whan he was come to vs vnto Asson, we toke him in, and came to Mitylenes, and sayled from thence, and came on the nexte daye ouer agaynst Chios, and on the daye folowinge we aryued at Samos, and taried at Tragilion, and on the nexte daye came we to Mileton: for Paul had determed to sayle ouer by Ephesus, that he nede not to spende the tyme in Asia: for he haisted to be at Ierusalem vpō the Whitson-daye, yf it were possible for him.

But from Mileton he sent vnto Ephesus, and called for the Elders of the congregacion. Whan they were come to him, he sayde vnto them: Ye knowe sence the first daye: that I came in to Asia, after what maner I haue bene with you at all tyme, and serued ¶ LORDE with all humblenesse of mynde, and with many teares and tentacions, which happened vnto me by ¶ layenges of wayte of the Iewes, how ¶ I haue kepte backe nothinge ¶ was profitable, but that I haue shewed you, and taughte you openly, and priuately from house to house. And haue testified both vnto the Iewes ¶ to the Grekes the repentance towarde God, and faith towarde oure LORDE Iesus.

And now beholde, I go bounde in ¶ sprete vnto Ierusalē, not knowinge what shal happen there vnto me, but ¶ the holy goost ¶ witnesseth in euery cite, and sayeth, that bondes and troubles abyde me there. But ¶ I regarde none of them, nether counte I my life dearer then my selfe, that I maye fulfyll my course with ioye, and the office ¶ I haue receaued of the LORDE Iesu, to testifye the Gospell of the grace of God.

B And now beholde, I knowe that ye shal se my face nomore, all ye, thorow whom I haue gone, and preached the kyngdome of God. Wherefore I take you to recorde this daye, that I am pure from the bloude of all men: For I haue kepte nothinge backe, but haue shewed you all the counsell off God. Take hede therefore vnto youre selues, and to all the flocke, amonge the which the holy goost hath set you to be Bishoppes, to fede the congregacion of God, which he hath purchaced thorow his owne bloude. For this I knowe, * that after my departinge there shal enter in amonge you greuous wolues, which shal not spare the flocke. Yee euē † from amonge youre awne selues shal men aryse, speakynge peruerse doctrine, to drawe disciples after them. Therefore awake, and remembre, that by the space of thre yeres I ceased not to warne euery one off you both nighte and daye with teares.

32 And now brethren I commende you vnto God, and to ‡ worde of his grace, which is mightie to edifye you, and to geue you the enheritaunce amōge all them that are sanctified. "I haue not desyred syluer, golde or rayment off eny off you. For ye youre selues knowe, that † these handes haue mynistrd vnto my necessities, and them that were with me. I haue shewed you all thinges, how that so labouringe ye oughte to receaue the weake, and to remembre the worde of the LORDE, how that he sayde: It is more blessed to geue, then to receaue.

And whan he had sayde this, he kneeled downe, and prayed with them all. But there was moch wepyng amonge them all, and they fell aboute Pauls necke, and kyssed him, and were sory, most of all because of the worde which he had sayde, that they shulde se his face nomore. And they accōpanied him vnto the shippe.

The xxi. Chapter.

A NOW whan it fortuneth that we had launched forth and were departed from them, we came with a straight course vnto Coon, and on the daye folowinge vnto the Rhodes, and from thence vnto Patara. And whan we founde a shippe ready to sayle vnto Phenices, we wente aborde and set forth.

But whā we came within the sighte of Cypers, we lefte it on the lefte hande, and sayled vnto Syria, and came vnto Tyre: for there the shippe shulde laye forth the ware. And whan we had founde disciples, we taried there seuen dayes. And they tolde Paul thorow the sprete, that he shulde not go vp to Ierusalem. And it fortuneth whā we had fulfilled those dayes, we departed, and wente oure wayes, and they all broughte vs on oure waye with wyues and childrē, tyll we were come out of † cite, and we kneeled downe vpo the shore, and prayed. And whan we had taken oure leue one off another, we toke shippe, but they turned agayne vnto theirs. As for vs we ended the course from Tyre, and came to Ptolomaida, and saluted the brethren, and abode with them one daye.

On the nexte daye we ‡ were with Paul, departed, and came vnto Cesarea, ¶ entred in to the house of § Philippe the Euangelist (which was one of the seuē) and abode with him. The same had foure daughters, which were virgins, ¶ and prophecied. And as we taried there mo dayes, there came downe from Iewry a prophet, named ¶ Agabus. Whā he was come vnto vs, he toke Pauls gerdell, and bounde his hādes and fete, and sayde: Thus sayeth † holy goost:  The man whose gerdell this is, shal the Iewes bynde thus at Ierusalem, and shal delyuer him in to the handes of the Heythē. Whan he herde this, both we and they that were of the same place, besoughte him, that he wolde not go vp to Ierusalem. Then answered Paul and sayde: What do ye, wepyng, and breakynge my hert? For I am redye not onely to be bounde, but also to dye at Ierusalem for ‡ name of the LORDE Iesu. But whā he wolde not be persuaded, we ceased, and sayde: †† The will of the LORDE be fulfilled. And after those dayes we were ready, ¶ wente vp to Ierusalem: There came with vs also certayne of the disciples off Cesarea, and broughte with them one of Cypers, named Mnason, an olde disciple, with whom we shulde lodge. Now whā we came to Ierusalem, the brethren receaued vs gladly. But on the nexte daye Paul wente in with vs vnto Iames, and all the Elders came together. And whan he had saluted them, he tolde by order, what God had done amōge the Heythen by his mynistracion.

¶ When they herde that, they prayſed the LORDE, and ſayde vnto him: Brother, thou ſeyſt how many thouſande Iewes there are which beleue, and are all Zelous ouer ſ lawe. But they are enſourmed agaynſt the, that thou teachest all the Iewes which are amōge the Heythē, to forſake Moſes, and ſayeſt that they oughte not to circuncyſe their children, ner to walke after the ſame cuſtome. What is it therfore? The multitude muſt nedes come together, for they ſhal heare that thou art come. Do this therfore that we ſaye vnto the: We haue foure men, which haue a *vowe on them, take them vnto ſ, and puriſye themſelue with them, and do the coſt on them, that they maye ſhaue their heades: and they ſhal knowe, that it is nothinge, wherof they are enſourmed agaynſt the, but that thou alſo walkeſt and kepeſt the lawe. For as touchinge them that beleue amōge the Heythen, †we haue wrytten, and concluded, that they ſhulde obſerue no ſoch, but onely to kepe them ſelues from the offeringes of Idols, from bloude, from ſtrāgled, and from whor-dome. ¶ Then Paul toke the men vnto him, and was puriſhed with them on the nexte daye, and entred in to the temple, declaringe that he fulfilled the dayes of purificacion, tyll there was an offeringe offred for euery one of them.

¶ But whan the ſeuē dayes were almoſt fulfilled, the Iewes of Asia ſawe him in the temple, and moued all the people, layed handes vpon him, and cryed: Ye men of Israel, helpe, this is the man, that teacheth all men euery where agaynſt oure people, the lawe, and this place. He hath broughte Grekes alſo in to the temple, and hath defyled this holy place. For they had ſene † Trophimus the Ephesian with him in the cite, him they thoughte ſ Paul had broughte in to the temple. And all the cite was moued, and the people ranne together. And they toke Paul, and drue him out off the temple, and forth with the dores were ſhut to.

But whan they wēte aboute to kyll him, tydings came to the chefe captayne of the company, that all Ierusalem was moued. Which immediatly toke ſoudyers and cap-taynes vnto him, and ranne in amōge them.

¶ Whan they ſawe the captayne and the ſou-dyers, they leſte ſmytinge of Paul.

¶ Whan the captayne came nye, he toke him, and commaunded him ſ to be bounde with two cheynes, and axed what he was, and what he had done. One cried this, another that amōge the people. But whan he coulde not knowe the certēte becauſe of the rumoure, he commaunded him to be caried in to the caſtell. And whā he came to the ſteppes, it fortuned that he was borne of ſ ſoudyers becauſe of the violence of the people. For the multitude off the people folowed after, and cryed: ¶ Awaye with him. Whan Paul was now to be caried in to the caſtell, he ſayde vnto ſ captayne: Maye I ſpeake vnto the? He ſayde: Canſt thou Greke? Art not thou the Egipcian, which before theſe dayes maydeſt an vproure, ¶ leddeſt out in to the wyldernesſe foure thouſande preuy mur-thurers? Paul ſayde: I am a man which am a Iewe off † Tharſis, a citesyn of a famous cite in Celicia: I beſeke the, ſuffre me to ſpeake vnto the people. Whan he had geuen him lycence, Paul ſtoode on the ſteppes, and bekened with the hande vnto the people. Now whan there was made a greate ſylce, he ſpake vnto them in Hebrue, and ſayde:

me from heauen, and I fell to the earth, and herde a voyce which sayde vnto me: Saul Saul, why persecutest thou me? I answered: Who art thou LORDE? And he sayde vnto me: I am Iesus of Nazareth whom thou persecutest. As for them that were with me, they sawe & lighte and were afraied, but they herde not the voyce of him that spake with me. I sayde: LORDE, what shal I do? The LORDE sayde vnto me: Aryse, and go in to Damascon, there shal it be tolde & of all that is appoynted the to do. But whan I sawe nothinge for the bryghtnesse of the lighte, I was led by the hande of them that were with me, and came to Damascon.

B There was one Ananias, a deuoute man after the lawe,^a which had a good reporte of all the Iewes that dwelt there, the same came, and stepte vnto me, and sayde: Brother Saul, loke vp. And I loked vp vpon him the same houre. He sayde: The God of oure fathers hath ordeyned the before, that thou shuldest knowe his wyll, and se the thinge & is rightfull, and heare the voyce out of his mouth: for thou shalt be his wytnesse vnto all men, of tho thinges which thou hast sene and herde. And now why tariest thou? Aryse, and be baptysed, and wasze away thy synnes, and * call vpon the name of the LORDE.

But it fortuneted, that whan I was come agayne to Ierusalē, and prayed in the temple, I was in a traunce, and sawe him. Then sayde he vnto me: Make haist, † and get the soone out of Ierusalem, for they wyl not receaue the wytnesse that thou bearest of me. And I sayde: LORDE, they thē selues knowe that I put in preson and bett in euery synagoge them that beleued on the. ‡ And whā the bloude of Steuē thy wytnesse was shed, I stode by also, ¶ consented vnto his death, and kepte the clothes of them that slewe him. And he sayde vnto me: Go thy waye, for § I wil sende the farre amonge the Heythen.

C They gaue him audience vnto this worde, and lifte vp their voyce, ¶ sayde: Away with soch a felowe from the earth, for it is not sooth that he shulde lyue. But as they cried, and cast of their clothes, ¶ threue dust in to the ayre, the captayne bad brynge him in to the castell, and commaunded him to be beaten with roddes and to be examyned, that he mighte knowe, for what cause they cried so vpon him. And whan he bounde him with thonges, Paul sayde vnto the vndercaptayne that stode by: Is it laufull for you to scourge a man that is a Romaine, and vncondemned? Whan the vndercaptayne herde that, he wēte to the vpper captayne, and tolde him, and sayde? What wilt thou do? This man is a Romaine. Then came & vpper captayne, and sayde vnto him: Tell me, art thou a Romaine? He sayde: Yee. And the vpper captayne answered: With a greatesumme optayned I this fredome. But Paul sayde: As for me, I am a Romaine borne. The straight waye departed from him, they that shulde haue examyned him. And & chefe captayne was afraied, whan he knewe that he was a Romaine, and because he had bounde him. On the nexte daye wolde he knowe the certentye wherfore he was accused of the Iewes, and he lowsed him from the bondes, and commaunded the hye prestes and all their councell to come together, and broughete Paul forth, and set him amonge them.

The xxiij. Chapter

PAUL behelde the councell, and sayde: A Ye men and brethren, ¶ I haue lyued with all good conscience before God vnto this daye: ¶ But the hye prest Ananias commaunded them that stode aboute him, to smyte hī on the mouth. Then sayde Paul vnto him: God shal smyte the thou paynted wall. ¶ Syttest thou and iudget me after the lawe, and commaundest me to be smytten cōtrary to & lawe? And they that stode aboute hī, sayde: Reuylest thou Gods hye prest? And Paul sayde: Brethrē, I wyl not that he was the hye prest. For it is wyrtte:  The ruler of thy people shalt thou not curse.

But whan Paul knewe that the one parte was Saduces, and the other parte Pharises, he cried out in & councell: Ye men and brethren, I am a Pharise, and the sonne of a Pharise, †† Of hope and resurrection of the deed am I iudged. And whan he had so sayde, there arose a dissencion betwene & Pharises and the Saduces, and the multitude was deuyded: for the Saduces saye that there is no resurrection, nether angell, ner sprete: * but the Pharises graūte both. And there was made a greate crye. And † Scribes of the Pharyses secte, stode vp, and stroue, and sayde: We fynde no euell in this mā. But yf a sprete or an angell haue spokē vnto him, let vs not stryue agaynst God.

But whan the discension was greate, ‡ vpper captayne feared, that Paul shulde haue bene pluckte a sonder of them, and commaunded the soudyers to go downe, and to take him from them, and to brynge him in to the castell. But in the nighte folowinge, the LORDE stode by him, and sayde: Be of good cheare Paul, for as thou hast testified of me at Ierusalem † so must thou testifie at Rome also.

Now whan it was daye, certayne of the Iewes gathered them selues together, and made a vowe nether to eate ner drynke, tyll they had kylled Paul. They were mo then fortye, which had made this conspyracion. These came to the hye prestes and Elders, and sayde: We haue bounde oure selues with a vowe, that we wil eate nothinge, tyll we haue slayne Paul. Now therefore geue ye knowlege to the vpper captayne and to the counsell, that he maye brynge him forth vnto you tomorrow, as though ye wolde heare him yet better: As for vs, we are ready to kyll him, or euer he come nye you.

But whan Pauls sisters sonne herde of their layenge awayte, he came, and entred in to the castell, and tolde Paul. So Paul called vnto him one of ‡ vnder captaynes, and sayde: Brynge this yonge man to the vpper captayne, for he hath somewhat to saye to him. He toke him, and broughte him to the vpper captayne, and sayde: Paul the presoner called me vnto him, and prayed me to brynge to the this yonge man, which hath somewhat to saye vnto the. Then the hye captayne toke him by the hande, and wente a syde with him out of the waye, and axed him: What is it, that thou hast to saye vnto me? He sayde: The Iewes are agreed together, to desyre the, to let Paul be broughte forth tomorrow before the counsell, as though they wolde yet heare him better. But folowe not thou their mynides, for there laye wayte for him mo then fortye men off them, which haue bounde them selues with a vowe, nether to eate ner drynke, tyll they haue slayne Paul: and euen now are they redye, and loke for thy promys.

Then the vpper captayne let the yonge man departe, and charged him to tell noman, that he had shewed him this. And he called vnto him two vndercaptaynes, and sayde: Make redye two hundredth soudyers, that they maye go to Cesarea, and thre score and ten horsmen, and two hundredth speare men at the thirde houre of the nighte, and deluyr thē beastes, that they maye set Paul theron, and brynge him safe vnto Felix the debyte, and he wrote a letter on this maner:

Claudius Lysias, vnto the most mightie Debyte Felix, gretynge. † The Iewes had taken this man, and wolde haue slayne him, then came I with soudyers, and rescued him, and perceaued that he is a Romayne. And whan I wolde haue knowne the cause, wherfore they accused hī, I broughte him in to their counsell: then perceaued I, that he was accused aboute questions of their lawe. But there was no accusacion worthy of death or of bondes. And whan it was shewed me, that certayne Iewes layed wayte for him, I sent him straight waye vnto the, and commaunded the accusers also, that loke what they had agaynst him, they shulde tell the same before the. Fare well.

The soudyers (as it was commaunded them) toke Paul, and broughte him to Antipatras. But on the nexte daye, they left ‡ horse men to go with him, and turned agayne to the castell. When these came to Cesarea, they deluyered the letter vnto the Debyte, and presented Paul before him also. Whan the Debyte had red the letter, he axed off what cowntre he was. And whā he vnderstode that he was of Celicia, he sayde: § I wil heare the, whan thine accusers are come also. And he commaunded him to be kepte in Herodes iudgment house.

The xxiij. Chapter.

AFTER fyue dayes the hye prest Ananias came downe with the Elders, and with the Oratour Tertullus, which appeared before the Debyte agaynst Paul. Whan Paul was called forth, Tertullus begūne to accuse him, and sayde: Seynge that we lyue in greате peace by the meanes of ‡, and that many good thinges are done for this people thorow thy prouydence (most mightie Felix) that alowe we euer and in all places with all thanks. Notwithstandinge ‡ I be nomore tedious vnto the, I praye the, that of thy curtesy thou woldest heare vs a few wordes.

We haue founde this man a pestilent fellowe, and a sterer vp of sedicion amonge all the Iewes thorow out all the worlde, and a mainteyner of the secte of the Nazaretes, * and hath taken in hande also to suspende the temple, whom we toke, and wolde haue iudged him accordinge to oure lawe. But Lysias the hye captayne came vpō vs, and with greate violence deliuered him out of oure handes, and commaunded his accusers to come vnto the: of whom (yf thou wilt enquire) thou mayest haue knowlege of all these thinges, wherof we accuse him. The Iewes likewyse affirmed and sayde, that it was euen so.

33 But Paul (whan the debythe had beckened vnto him, that he shulde speake) answered: Seynge I knowe that thou hast bene iudge now many yeares amonge this people, I wil not be afraied to answer for my selfe, because that thou mayest knowe, that there are yet nomore but twolue dayes sence I came vp to Ierusalem for to worshipspe, and that they nether founde me in the temple disputinge with eny man, or makynge eny vproure amonge the people, ner in y synagoges, ner in the cite: nether can they proue the thinges, wherof they accuse me. But this I† confesse vnto the, that after this waye which they call heresy, so worshipspe I the God of my fathers, that I beleue all that is wrytten in the lawe and in the prophetes, and haue hope towardes God, that the same resurrection of the deed (which they them selues loke for also) shalbe, both of the iust and vniust. Therefore studie I to haue allwaye a cleare conscience towarde God and towarde men.*

† But after many yeares I came and broughte allmesse vnto my people, and offerings:† wherupon they founde me purified in the temple without eny manner of rumoure or vnquietnesse. Howbeit there were certayne Iewes out of Asia, which shulde be here presente before the, and accuse me, yf they had oughte agaynst me: or els lett these same here saye, yf they haue founde eny vnrighteousnes in me, whyle I stonde here before y counsell: excepte it be for this one worde, that I cried standinge amonge them: † Of the resurrection off the deed am I iudged of you this daye.

Whan Felix herde this, he dyffered the C (for he knewe very well of that waye) and sayde: Whan Lysias the vpper captayne commeth downe, I wyl knowe y vttemost of youre matter. † But he commaunded the vndercaptayne to kepe Paul, and to let him haue rest, and that he shulde forbydde none of his acquaintance to mynister vnto him, or to come vnto him.

But after certayne dayes came Felix with his wife Drusilla, which was a Iewesse, and called for Paul, and herde him of the faith in Christ. Howbeit whan Paul spake off righteousnesse, and off chastite and off the iudgment to come; Felix trembled, and answered: Go thy waye for this tyme. Whan I haue a conuenient tyme, I wil sende for the. He hoped also, that money shulde haue bene geuen him of Paul, therefore called he oft for him, and commened with him. But after two yeares came Portius Festus in to felix rowme. Yet Felix wyllinge to shewe the Iewes a pleasure, left Paul bounde.

The xvj. Chapter.

NOW whan Festus was come in to the A countre, ouer thre dayes he wente vp from Cesarea to Ierusalem. Then appeared the hye prestes and the chefe of the Iewes before him agaynst Paul, and intreated him, and desyred fauoure agaynst him, that he wolde sende for him to Ierusalem, and layed wayte for him, that they might slaye him by the waye. Then answered Festus, that Paul shulde be kepte at Cesarea, but that he himselfe wolde shortly go thither agayne. Let them therfore (sayde he) which are able amonge you, come downe with vs to accuse the man, yf there be ought in him.

Whan he had taried amonge them more then ten dayes, he wente downe to Cesarea. And on the nexte daye he sat downe on the iudgment seate, and commaunded Paul to be broughte. Whan he was come, y Iewes which were come downe from Ierusalem, stode rounde aboute him, and broughte vp many and greuous quarels agaynst Paul, which they coulde not proue, whyle he answered for himselfe: I haue nether offended ought agaynst the lawe of the Iewes, ner agaynst the tēple, ner agaynst the Emperoure.

But Festus willinge to shewe the Iewes a pleasure, answered Paul, and sayde: Wilt thou go vp to Ierusalem, and there be iudged off these thinges before me? But Paul sayde: I stonde at the Emperours iudgmēt seate, where I ought to be iudged: to the Iewes haue I done no harme, as thou also knowest very well. Yf I haue hurte eny man, or committed eny thinge worthy off death, I refuse not to dye. But yf there are no soch thinges as they accuse me off, then maye no man deliuer me vnto them. I appeale vnto the Emperoure. Then spake Festus with the Councell, and answered: Thou hast appealed vnto the Emperoure, to the Emperoure shalt thou go.

After certayne dayes came kynge Agrippa and Bernice to Cesarea to welcome Festus. And when they had taried there many dayes, Festus rehearsed Pauls cause vnto the kynge, and sayde: There is a man left bounde of Felix, for whose cause the hye prestes and Elders of the Iewes appeared before me whā I was at Ierusalem, and desyred a sentence agaynst him. Vnto whom I answered: * It is not the maner off the Romaynes to deliuer eny man that he shulde perishe, before that he which is accused, haue his accusers presente, and receaue libertie to answer for him selfe to the accusacion. Whā they were come hither together, I made no delaye, but sat the nexte daye in iudgment, and commaunded the man to be broughte forth. Of whom, whā the accusers stode vp, they broughte no accusacion of soch thinges as I supposed: But had certayne questions agaynst him of their awne supersticions, and of one Iesus deed, whom Paul affirmed to be aloue. Howbeit because I vnderstode not the question, I axed hī, whether he wolde go to Ierusalē, and there be iudged of these matters. But whā Paul had appealed, that he might be kepte vnto the knowlege of the Emperoure, I cōmaunded him to be kepte, tyll I mighte sende him to the Emperoure.

Agrippa sayde vnto Festus: I wolde fayne heare the man also. He sayde: Tomorrow shalt thou heare him. And on the nexte daye camē Agrippa & Bernice with greate pompe, and wēt in to the comon hall with the captaynes & chefe mē of the cite. And at Festus cōmaundement, Paul was brought forth. And Festus sayde: Kynge Agrippa, and all ye men which are here with vs, ye se this man, aboute whom all the multitude of the Iewes haue entreated me, both at Ierusalē and here also, and cried, that he ought not to lyue eny lenger. But whā I perceaued that he had done nothinge worthy off death, and that he himselfe also had appealed vnto the Emperoure, I determyned to sende him, of whō I haue no certayne thinge to wryte vnto my lorde. Therfore haue I caused hī to be broughte forth before you, specially before the (O kynge Agrippa) that after examination had, I might haue somewhat to wryte. For me thyinke it an vnreasonable thinge to sende a presoner, and not to shewe the causes which are layed agaynst him.

The xxi. Chapter.

AGRIPPA sayde vnto Paul: Thou hast a leue to speake for thy selfe. Thē Paul stretched forth the hande, and answered for himselfe: I thinke my selfe happye (O kynge Agrippa) because I shal answer this daye before the, of all the thinges wherof I am accused of the Iewes: specially for so moch as thou art experte in all customes and questions, which are amonge the Iewes. Wherefore I beseeche the, to heare me patiently.

My luyunge truly from youth vp (how it was led from the begynnynge amonge this people at Ierusalē) knowe all the Iewes which knewe me afore at the first, yf they wolde testifie, for after the most straye secte of oure Iewysh lawe, I lyued a Pharise. And now stonde I, and am iudged because of the hope of the †promes, that was made of God vnto oure fathers, vnto the which (promes) oure twolue trybes hope to come, seruyng God instāly daye and nighte. For the which hopes sake (O kynge Agrippa) I am accused of the Iewes. Wherefore is this iudged amonge you not to be belened, that God rayseth vp the deed?

I also verely thoughte by my selfe, that I oughte to do many cōtrary thinges cleane agaynst the name off Iesus off Nazareth, † which I dyd at Ierusalem, whā I shut vp many sayntes in preson, whervp I receaued auctorite of ȳ hye prestes. And whā they shulde be put to death, I broughte the sentence. And thorow all the synagoges I punyshed them oft, and compelled thē to blaspheme, and was exceedinge mad vpon them, and persecuted them euen vnto straunge cities. Aboute which thinges as I wente towarde Damascon with auctorite and lycence of the hye prestes, euen at myddaye (O kyng) I sawe in the waye, that a lighte from heauē (clearer then the brightnesse of the Sonne) shyned rounde aboute me, and them that iourneyed with me.

But whan we were all fallen downe to the earth, I herde a voyce speakyng vnto me, and sayēge in Hebrue: Saul Saul, why persecutest thou me? It shalbe harde for the tokycke agaynst the prycke. But I sayde: LORDE, who art thou? He sayde: I am Iesus, whom thou persecutest. But ryse vp, and stonde vpon thy fete, for therefore haue I appeared vnto the, that I mighte ordeyne the to be a mynister and witness of it that thou hast sene, and that I wyll yet cause to appeare vnto the. And I wil deluyre the from the people, and from the Heythen, amonge who I wil now sende the, to opē their eyes, that they maye turne from the darknesse vnto the * lighte, and from the power of ꝑ deuell vnto God, that they maye receaue forgeuenesse of synnes, and the enheritaunce with them that are sanctified by faith in me.

Wherefore (O kyng Agrippa) I was not faithlesse vnto ꝑ heauēly vision, but shewed it first vnto them at Damascon, and at Ierusalē, and in all the coastes of Iewry, and to the Heythen, that they shulde + do pennaunce, and turne vnto God, and to do the righte workes of pennaunce. For this cause the Iewes toke me in the temple, and wente aboute to kyll me. But thorow the helpe of God lent vnto me, I stonde vnto this daye, and testifye both vnto small and greate, and saye no other thinge, thē that ꝑ prophetes haue sayde (that it shulde come to passe) and Moses, that Christ shulde suffre, and be the first of the resurreccion from the deed, and shew light vnto the people, and to the Heythen.

Whan he thus answered for himselfe, Festus sayde with a loude voyce: Paul, thou art besydes thy selfe, moch lernynge maketh ꝑ madd. But Paul sayde: I am not madd (most deare Festus) but speake the wordes of truth and sobernesse: for ꝑ kyng knoweth this well, vnto whom I speake frely. For I thinke that none off these thinges is hyd from him: for this was not done in a corner. Beleuest thou the prophetes, O kyng Agrippa?

I knowe that thou beleuest. Agrippa sayde vnto Paul: Thou persuadest me in a parte to become a Christen. Paul sayde: I wolde to God, that (not onely in a parte but all-together,) I mighte persuade not the onely, but all them that heare me this daye, to be soch I am, these bondes excepte. And whan he had spoken this, the kyng rose vp, and the Debyte, and Bernice, and they that sat with them, and wente asyde, and talked together, and sayde: This man hath done nothinge that is worthy of death or of bondes. But Agrippa sayde vnto Festus: This man mighte haue bene loused, yf he had not appealed vnto the Emperoure.

The xxvij. Chapter.

WHAN it was concluded that we shulde sayle in to Italy, they deluyered Paul and certayne other presoners to the vndercaptayne named Iulius, of the Emperours soudyers. And whan we were entred in to a shippe of Adramitium, to sayle by Asia, we loused from londe. And there was with vs one + Aristarchus out of Macedonia off Thesalonica, and on the nexte daye we came vnto Sidon. And Iulius intreated Paul courteously, and gaue him liberty to go to his frendes, and to refresh himselfe. And from thence launched we, and sayled harde by Cypers (because the wyndes were agaynst vs) and sayled ouer the see of Celicia and Pamphilia, and came to Myra in Lycia.

And there the vndercaptayne founde a shippe of Alexādria, ready to sayle in to Italy, and put vs therin. And whan we had sayled slowly, and in many dayes were scarcely come ouer agaynst Gnydon (for the wynde with stode vs) we sayled by Candy nye vnto the cite off Salmo, and came scarcely beyonde it. Then came we to a place, which is called Goodhauen, nye where vnto was the cite Lasea. Now whan moch tyme was spent, and saylinge was now ioperdous, because that they also had fasted ouerlonge, Paul exhorted them, and sayde vnto them: Syrs, I se that this saylinge wyl be with hurte and moch dammage, not onely of the ladyng and of the shippe, but also of oure lyues.

Neuertheles ꝑ vndercaptayne beleued the gouernoure of the shippe and ꝑ master, more then it that was spoken of Paul. And for so much as the hauē was not comodious to wynter in, the more parte off them toke counsell to de-par-te thēce, yf by eny meanes they might come to Phenices to wynter there, which is an hauen of Candy, towarde the Southwest and North-west wynde. Whan the South wynde blewē, they supposinge to haue had their purpose, lowsed vnto Asson, and sayled past all Candy.

But not longe after, there rose agaynst their purpose a flawe of wynde, which is called the Northeast. And whan the shippe was caught, and coulde not resist þ wynde, we let her go, and draue with the wedder. But we came to an Ile named Claudia, where we coulde scarce get a bote. Which they toke vp, and vsed helpe, and bounde it vnder harde to the shippe, fearinge lest they shulde haue fallen in to the *Syrtes, and let downe the vessell, and so were caried. And whan we had bydden a greate tēpest, on the nexte daye they made an outcasinge. And on the thirde daye with oure awne handes we cast out the tacklynge of the shippe. But whā nether Sonne ner starres appeared in many dayes, and no small tempest laye vpon vs, all the hope of oure life was taken awaye.

C And after longe abstinence, Paul stode forth in the myddes of thē, and sayde: Syrs, ye shulde haue herkened vnto me, and not to haue lowsded from Candy, and not to haue broughte vs this harme and losse. And now I exhorte you to be of good cheare, for there shal none of oure lyues perishe, but the shippe onely.

For this night stode by me the angell off God (whose I am, & whō I serue) & saide: Feare not Paul, thou must be broughte before the Emperoure. And lo, God hath geuen vn to the all thē that sayle with the. Wherefore syrs be of good cheare: for I beleue God, þ it shal come so to passe, as it was tolde me. Howbeit we must be cast in to a certayne ylonde.

But whan the fourteenth night came, as we were caried in Adria aboute mydnight, þ shipmen demed that there appeared some countre vnto them, and they cast out the leade, and founde it twēty feddoms: and whā they were gone a litle farther, they cast out the leade agayne, and founde fyftene feddoms.

D Then fearinge lest they shulde fall on some rocke, they cast foure ankers out of the sterne, and wyszhed for the daye. Whan the shipmen were aboute to flye out of the shippe, and let downe the bote in to the see, (vnder a colour as though they wolde cast ankers out of the fore shippe) Paul sayde to þ vnder-captayne and to the soudyers: Excepte these byde in the shippe, ye can not be saued. Then the soudyers cut of the rope from the bote, and let it fall. And whan it beganne to be daye, Paul exhorted them all to take meate, and sayde: To daye is the fourtene daye that ye haue taried and contynued fastinge, and haue receaued nothinge: Wherefore I praye you to take meate, for youre health: for there shal not one heer fall from the heade of eny of you. And whan he had thus spoken, he toke bred, and † gaue thanks to God before them all, and brake it, and begāne to eate. Then were they all of good cheare, and toke meate also. We were all together in the shippe two hundred thre score and sixtene soules. And whan they had eaten ynough, they lightened the shippe, and cast out the wheate in to the see.

Whan it was daye, they knewe not the londe. But they spyed an hauen with a banke, in to which they were mynded (yf it were possible) to thrust in the shippe. And whan they had takē vp the ankers, they comytted them selues to the see, and lowsded the rudder bandes, and hoysed vp the mayne sayle to the wynde, and drue towarde londe. And whan we chaunced on a place which had the see on both the sydes, the shippe daszhed vpon it. And the fore parte abode fast vnmoued, but the hynder parte brake thorow the violence of the waves.

The soudyers counsell was to kyll þ prisoners, lest eny of them whan he had swymmed out, shulde flye awaye. But the vndercaptayne wyllinge to saue Paul, kepēd them from their purpose, and commaunded that they which coulde swymme, shulde cast them selues first in to the see, and escape vnto londe: and the other, some on bordes, some on broken peces of the shippe. And so it came to passe, that all the soules came safe vnto londe.

The xxiiij. Chapter.

A ND whā we were escaped, we knewe ‡ that the Ile was called Melite. As for the people, they shewed vs no litle kyndnesse:

* Syrtes, are perulous places i the see.

for they kyndled a fyre, and receaued vs all because of the rayne that was come vpo vs, and because of the colde. When Paul had gathered a bondell of stickes, and layed them on the fyre, there came a vyper out of the heate, and leape on Pauls hande. When the people sawe the beest hange on his hande, they sayde amonge them selues: This man must nedes be a murthurer, who vengeance suffreth not to lyue, though he haue escaped the se. But he shoke of y^e best in to the fyre, *and felt no harme. Howbeit they wayted, wha he shulde haue swollen, or fallen downe deed sodenly. But whan they had looked a greete whyle, and sawe y^e there happened no harme vnto him, they chaunged their myndes, and sayde that he was a God.

In the same quarters the chefe man of the Ile whose name was Publius had a lordship: the same reueced vs, and lodged vs three dayes courteously. It fortun'd whā Publius father laye sickē of the feuers and of a bloudy fluxe, Paul wente in vnto him, and prayed, and laved the handes on him, and healed him.

When this was done, other also which had diseases in the Ile, came, and were healed. And they dyd vs greate honoure. And whan we departed, they laded vs with thinges necessary.

After thre monethes we sayled in a shippe of Alexandria, which had wyntred in the Ile, and had a badge of Castor and Pollux. And whan we came to Syracusa, we taried there thre dayes. And whan we had sayled aboute, we came to Rhegium: and after one daye whan the south wynde blew, we came to Putilous, where we founde brethre and were desiroyd of them to tarye there seuē dayes, and so came we to Rome. And from thence whan the brethren herde of vs, they came forth to mete vs to Apiforum and to the Thra-tauerns. Whan Paul sawe them, he thāked God, and waxed bolde. But whā we came to Rome, the vnder captayne deliuered the presoners to the chiefe captayne. As for Paul, he had leue to byde alone with one soudyer that kepte him.

¶ After thre dayes it fortuneth, y Paul called y chefe of y Iewes together. And whā they were come, he sayde vnto the: Ye mē brethrē + I haue cōmytted nothinge agaynst oure people, ner agaynst y^e lawes of y^e fathers, yet was I boude, deluyered out of Ierusalē in to y^e Romaines hādes: which whā they haue examyned me, wolde haue let me go, for so much as there was no cause of death ī me.

But whā y^e Lewes spake y^e cōtrary, I was cōstrayned to appeale vnto y^e Emperoure: not as though I had ought to accuse my people of.
For this cause haue I called you, euē to se you, to speake with you: because y^e for y^e hope of Israel, I am bounde with this cheyne.
They sayde vnto hī: We haue nether receaued letter out of Iewry cōcernynge the, nether came there eny of the brethrē, y^e shewed or spake eny harme of y^e. But we wyl heare of y^e, what thou thinkest: for we haue herde of this secte, that euery where sīt it is spoken agaynst. And whā they had appointed hī a daye, there came many vnto hī in to his lodginge: vnto whō he expōundēd y^e kyngdome of God & preached vnto the of Iesu, out of y^e lawe and out of the prophetes, euē frō mornynge vntyll the euē. And some beleued y^e thinge y^e he sayde, but some beleued not.

But whā they agreed not amōge thē selues,
they departed, whā Paul had spokē one worde:
Full well hath the holy goost spokē by ſ

The Epistle of the Apostle S. Paul to the Romaynes.

Chap. I.

Paul declareth his loue toward the Romaynes, sheweth what the gospell is with the frute therof, and rebuketh the beestynesse of the flesh.

Chap. II.

He rebuketh the Iewes, which as touchinge synne are like the Heythē, yee worse then they.

Chap. III.

He sheweth what preferment the Iewes haue, and that both the Iewes and Gētiles are vnder synne, and are iustified only by the grace of God in Christ.

Chap. IIII.

He declareth by the exāple of Abrahā, that faith iustifieth, and not the lawe, ner the workes therof.

Chap. V.

The power of faith, hope, and loue: and how death raigned frō Adā vnto Christ, by who only we haue forgeuenesse of synnes.

Chap. VI.

For so moch as we be deliyuered thorow christ from synne, we must fashion oure selues to lyue as the seruauntes of God, and not after oure awne lustes. The vnlike rewarde of righteousnes and synne.

Chap. VII.

Christ hath deliyuered vs from the lawe and death. Paul sheweth what the flesh and outwarde man is, and calleth it the lawe of the membres.

Chap. VIII.

The lawe of the sprete geueth life. The sprete of God maketh vs Gods children and heyres with Christ. The abundaunt loue of God can not be separated.

Chap. IX.

Paul complayneth vpon the hard hertes of the Iewes, that wolde not receaue Christ, and how the Heythē are chosen in their steade.

Chap. X.

The vnfaithfulnes of the Iewes. Two maner of righteousnesses.

Chap. XI.

All the Iewes are not cast awaye, therefore Paul warneth the Gentiles that be called, not to be hye mynded, ner to despise the Iewes, for the iudgmētes of God are depe and secrete.

Chap. XII.

The swete conuersacion, loue, and workes of soch as beleue in Christ.

Chap. XIII.

The obedience of men vnto their rulers. Loue fulfilleth the lawe. It is now no tyme to folowe the workes of darknesse.

Chap. XIII.

The weake ought not to be despysed. No man shulde offende anothers conscience. Agayne, for outward thinges shulde no man condemne another.

Chap. XV.

The infirmite and fraynesse of the weake ought to be borne with all loue and kyndnesse, after the ensample of Christ.

Chap. XVI.

A chapter of salutacions. He warneth them to bewarre of mens doctryne, and commendeth vnto them certayne godly men, that were louers and brethren in the trueth.

The Epistle of the Apostle S. Paul to the Romaynes.

The first Chapter.

PAUL the seruaunte of Iesus Christ, called to be an Apostle, * put aparte to preach the Gospell of God (which † he promysed afore by his prophetes in ‡ holy scriptures) off his sonne, which was begottē † of ‡ sede of Dauid after the flesh: and mightely declared to be the sonne of God after the sprete which sanctifieth, sence the tyme that he rose agayne from the deed, namely, Iesus Christ oure LORDE, by whom we haue † receaued grace and Apostelshippe amonge all Heythen, to set vp the obedience of faith vnder his name, of whom ye are a parte also, which are called of Iesus Christ.

To all you that be at Rome, beloued of God, and sayntes by callynge † Grace be with you and peace frō God oure father, and the LORDE Iesus Christ.

First, I thanke my God thorow Iesus Christ for you all, that youre faith is spoken of thorow out all the worlde. For God is my witnesse (¶ whom I serue in my sprete in the Gospell of his sonne) that without ceassynge I make mencion of you  beseking allwayes in my prayers, that I mighte once haue a prosperous iourney (†† by the will off God) to come vnto you. For I longe to se you, that I mighte bestowe vpon you some spirituall gifte to strēghth you (that is) that I mighte be comforted with you, thorow youre faith † myne, which we haue together.

But I wolde ye shulde knowe (brethren) how that I haue often tynes purposed to come vnto you (but haue bene †† let hither to) that I mighte do some good amonge you, like as amonge other Gentyles. I am detter both to the Grekes, and to the vngrekes, to the wyse and to the vnwyse. Wherefore (as moch as I me is) I am ready to preach the Gospell vnto you at Rome also.

¶ For I am not ashamed of the Gospell of Christ: for it is the † power of God, which saueth all that beleue theron, the Iewe first † also the Greke: for in it ‡ righteousness that is of value before God, is opened, which cōmeth out of faith I to faith. As it is wryttē:

¶ The iust shal lyue by his faith. For ‡ wrath of God is declared from heauen vpon all vngodlynes and vnrighteousnes of mā, which witholde the trueth of God in vnrighteousnes: because that it, which maye be knowne of God, is manifest with thē. For God hath shewed it vnto thē, that the inuisible thinges of God (that is, his euerlasting power and Godheade) mighte be sene † while they are considered by the workes from the creacion of the worlde: so that they are without excuse, in as moch as they knewe, that there is a God, and haue not prayed him as God ner thanked him, but became wayne in their ymaginacions, and ¶ their foolish hert was blynded. When they counted them selues wyse, they became fooles: and turned  † glory of the incorruptible God in to ‡ symilitude of ‡ ymage of a corruptible mā, † of byrdes, † of foure foted, ††† of crepinge beestes ††† Wherefore God likewyse gaue them vp vnto their hertes luster in to vnclennes, to defyle their awne bodies in them selues, which turned the trueth of God vnto a lye, † worshipped and

D Therefore God gaue the vp vnto shamefull luses. *For their women chaunged the naturall vse in to the vnnaturall: likewise ¶ mē also lefte the naturall vse of the woman, and brent in their luses one on another, and man with man wrought fylthines, and receaued in them selues the rewarde of their erreure, as it was acordinge. †And as they regarded not to knowe God, euen so ‡God gaue the vp in to a lewde mynde, to do those thinges which were not comly, beyng full of all vnrighteousnes, whordome, wickednes, couetousnes, maliciousnes, full of enuye, murthur, strife, disceate, euell cōdicioned whisperers, backbiters, despyers of God, doers of wronges, proude, boosters, bryngers vp of euell thinges, disobedient to their Elders, without vnderstandinge, couenaunt breakers, vnlouynge, stubborne, vnmerefull: which men, though they knowe the righteousness of God (that they which do soch, are worthy of death) yet not onely do the same, but also haue pleasure in those that do the.

The ij. Chapter.

A THEREFORE canst thou not excuse thy selfe (O mā) who soeuer thou be that iudgest: for §loke wherin thou iudgest another, thou condemnest thy selfe, in so moch as thou that iudgest, doest euen the same. For we are sure that the iudgment of God is (acordinge to the trueth) ouer them that do soch. But thinkest thou this O thou man, that iudgest them which do soch thinges, and doest euen the very same thy selfe, that thou shalt escape ¶ iudgmēt of God? Or despyest thou the riches of his goodnesse, pacience, and lōge sufferinge? ¶ Knowest thou not, that ¶ louynge kyndnesse of God leadeth the to repentance?

But thou after thine harde and impenitent hert, heapest vnto thy selfe a treasure of wrath, agaynst the daye of wrath and of the openynge of the righteous iudgment of God, ¶ which shal rewarde euery man acordinge to his dedes: namely, praye ¶ honoure, and vncorruption, vnto them that with pacience in doinge good, seke euerlastinge life: But vnto them that are contentious  ¶ not obedient vnto the trueth, but obeye vnrighteousnes, shal come indignacion and wrath, trouble and anguysh vpō all the soules of mē that do euell, of the Iewe first and also of the Greke: But vnto all the that do good (shal come) praye and honoure, and peace, vnto the Iewe first, and also to the Greke.

†† For there is no respect of personnes ¶ before God: Who so euer haue synned without lawe, shal perish also without lawe: and whosoer haue synned in the lawe, shalbe iudged by the lawe. †† For before God, they are not righteous, which heare ¶ lawe: but they that do the lawe, shalbe iustified. For yf the Gentyles which haue not the lawe, do of nature the thinges conteyned in the lawe, then they hauynge not the lawe, are a lawe vnto them selues, in that they shewe, that the worke of ¶ lawe is wrytē in their hertes: whyle their conscience beareth witness vnto the, and also the thoughtes which accuse or excuse them amonge them selues, in the daye when God shal iudge the secretes of men by Iesus Christ, acordinge to my Gospell.

But take hede,§§ thou art called a Iewe, and trustest in the lawe, ¶ makest thy boast of God, and knowest his will: ¶ for so moch as thou art enfourmed out of ¶ lawe, thou prouest what is best to do, and presumest to be a leader of the blynde: a lighte of them ¶ are in darenkes: an enformer of ¶ vnwyse: a teacher of ¶ symple: which hast the ensample of knowlege ¶ of the trueth in the lawe.

Now teachest thou other, and teachest not thy selfe. Thou preachest that a man shulde not steale, and thou stealest. Thou sayest, that a man shulde not breake wedlocke, and thou breakest wedlocke. Thou abhorrest ymages, and robbest God of his honoure. Thou makest thy boast of the lawe, and thorow breakynge of the lawe thou dishonorest God. For thorow you is the name of God euell spoken of amonge the Gentyles, ¶ as it is wryten.

The circūcision verely awayleth, yf thou kepe the lawe: but yf thou breake the lawe, then is thy circūcision become vncircūcision. Therefore yf the vncircūcision kepe the righte thinges conteyned in the lawe, shal not his vncircumcision be counted for circumcision? And so it that of nature is vncircumcision, and fulfilleth the lawe shal iudge the, which vnder the letter and circumcision trasgresseth the lawe. For he is not a Iewe which is a Iewe outwarde: nether is that circumcision which is done outwardly in \hat{y} flesh: "But he is a Iewe, which is hydd within. And * the circumcision of \hat{y} hert is the circumcision, which is done in the sprete and not in the letter: whose prayse is not of men, but of God.

The iij. Chapter.

❧ WHAT furtheraunce then haue the Iewes? Or what avauntageth circicision? Surely very moch. First † Vnto them was commytted what God spake. But where as some of them dyd not beleue theron, what then? shulde their vnbeleue make the promes of God of none effecte? God forbyd. Let it rather be thus, that † God is true,† and all mē lyers. As it is wrytten: That thou mayest be iustified in thy sayenges, and shuldest ouercome, whā thou art iudged.

But yf it be so, that our vnrighteousnes prayseth \hat{y} righteousnesses of God, what shal we saye? Is God then vnrighteous, that he is angrie therfore? (I speake thus after the maner off men) God forbyd. How mighte God the iudge \hat{y} worlde? For yf the trueth of God be thorow my lye the more excellent vnto his prayse, why shulde I thē be iudged yet as a synner? † not rather to do thus (as we are euell spoken of, and as some reporte, that we shulde saye) Let vs do euell, \hat{y} good maye come therof. Whose dānaciō is iuste.

❧ What saye we then? Are we better then they? No, in no wyse: for we haue proued afore, \hat{y} both the Iewes and Grekes are all vnder synne. † As it is wryttē: There is none righteous, no not one. There is none \hat{y} vnderstonde, there is none that seketh after God. They are all gone out of the waye, they are altogether become vnprofitable: there is none that doeth good, no not one. § Their throte is an open sepulchre, with their tungen they haue disceaued, † the poyson off Aspes is vnder their lippes. Their mouth is full of cursynge and bytternesse. || Their fete are swifte to shed bloude. Destruction † wrechidnes are in their wayes, and \hat{y} waye of peace haue they not knowne. † There is no feare of God before their eyes.

But we knowe, \hat{y} , what soeuer the lawe sayeth, it sayeth it vnto them which are vnder the lawe, \hat{y} euery mouthe maye be stopped, † \hat{y} all the worlde maye be deter vnto God,  because \hat{y} by \hat{y} dedes of the lawe no flesh maye be iustified in his sighte. †† For by the lawe commeth but the knowlege of synne. But now without addinge to of \hat{y} lawe is the righteousness which avayleth before God, declared, hauynge witness of \hat{y} lawe and the prophetes: but I speake of \hat{y} righteousness before God, which cometh by the faith on Iesus Christ, vnto all, and vpo all them that beleue.

For here is no difference. For they are all synners, and wāte the prayse that God shulde haue of thē, but without deseruynge are they made righteous euē by his grace, thorow the redemption that is done by Christ Iesu, whom God hath set forth for a † Mercy seate thorow faith in his bloude, to shewe the righteousness which avayleth before him, in that he forgeueth the synnes, which were done before vnder the sufferaunce of God, which he suffred, that at this tyme he mighte shewe \hat{y} righteousness which avayleth before him: \hat{y} he onely mighte be righteous, † the righteous maker of him which is of the faith on Iesus.

Where is now then thy reioysynge? It is excluded. By what lawe? By the lawe of workes? Nay, but by the lawe of faith. We holde therfore that a man is iustified § by faith, without the workes of the lawe. Or is God the God of the Iewes onely? Is he not also the God of the Heythen? Yēs verely the God of the Heythen also, for so moch as he is the God onely that iustifieth the circumcision which is of faith, and the vncircūcision thorow faith. Destroye we then the lawe thorow faith? God forbyd. But we mantayne the lawe.

dyd fynde? This we saye: Yf Abraham were made righteous thorow workes, then hath he wherin to reioyce, but not before God. But what sayeth \hat{y} scripture? * Abrahā beleued God, τ \hat{y} was counted vnto him for righteousness. Vnto hi \hat{y} goeth aboute with workes, is the rewarde not rekened of fauoure, but of dutye: Howbeit vnto him, \hat{y} goeth not aboute with workes, but beleueth on him \hat{y} iustifieth the vngodly, is his faith counted for righteousness. Euen as Dauid sayeth also, that blessednes is onely that mans, vnto whō God counteth righteousness without addinge to of workes, where he sayeth: "Blessed are they, whose vnrighteousnes are forgiven, and whose synnes are couered. Blessed is the man, vnto whom the LORDE imputeth no synne.

¶ Now this blessednes, goeth it ouer the circūcision, or ouer the vncircūcision? We must nedes graunte, \hat{y} Abrahā's faith was couēted vnto hi for righteousness. How was it thē rekened vnto him? In the circūcision, or in the vncircūcision? Doubtes † not in the circūcision, but in the vncircūcision. As for the tokē of circūcision † he receaued it for a seale off the righteousness off faith, which he had yet in \hat{y} vncircūcision, \hat{y} he shulde be a father of all thē \hat{y} beleue, beinge in \hat{y} vncircūcisiō, \hat{y} it might be couēted vnto thē also for righteousness: τ that he might be a father of circūcision, not onely of thē that are of \hat{y} circūcision, but of them also that walke in the fotestepes of the faith, which was in the vncircūcision of oure father Abraham.

¶ For the promes (that he shulde be \hat{y} heyre of the worlde) was not made vnto Abraham or to his sede thorow the lawe, but thorow the righteousness of faith. § For yf they which are of the lawe be heyres, thē is faith vayne, and the promes of none effecte, for so moch as the lawe causeth but wrath. For where the lawe is not, there is also no transgression. Therefore was the promes made thorow fayth, that it myght come off fauoure, wherby the promesse myghte be made sure vnto all the sede: not onely vnto him which is off the lawe, but also vnto him that is of the faith of Abrahā || which is the father of vs all. As it is written: ¶ I haue made the a father of many Heythē before God, whom thou hast beleued: which quyeneth the deed, and calleth it which is not, that it maye be.

And he beleued vpō hope, where nothinge was to hope, that he shulde be a father of many Heythen. Acordinge as it was sayde vnto him:  Euen so shal thy sede be. And he was not faynte in faith, nether cōsidred his awne body, which was deed already, whyle he was almost an hundreth yeare olde, nether the deed wombe of Sara. For he doubted not in the promes of God thorow vnbeleue, but was strōge in faith, and gaue God the prayse: τ was sure, that loke what God promyseth, he is able to make it good. And therefore was it rekened vnto him for righteousness. † But this is not wryttē onely for his sake, \hat{y} it was counted vnto him, but also for oure sakes: vnto whō it shalbe counted, yf we beleue on him, that raysed vp oure LORDE Iesus from the deed. Which † was geuen for oure synnes, and raysed vp for oure righteousness sake.

The 6. Chapter.

BECAUSE therfore that we are iustified α by faith, we haue peace with God thorow oure LORDE Iesus Christ, by whō also we haue an inтраunce in faith vnto this grace, wherin we stonde, τ §§ reioyce in the hope of \hat{y} glorie for to come, which God shal geue. Not onely \hat{y} , but we reioyce also i troubles, for so moch as we knowe, \hat{y} || trouble bryngeth paciēce, paciēce bryngeth experieñce, experieñce bryngeth hope: As for hope, is letteth vs not come to cōfusiō, because the loue of God is shed abroad in oure hertes, by the holy goost which is geuen vnto vs. For whan we were yet weake acordinge to the tyme, \hat{y} Christ dyed for vs vngodly. Now dyeth there scarce eny man for the righteous sake: Peraduenture for a good man durst one dye. ¶¶ Therefore doth God set forth his loue toward vs, in \hat{y} Christ dyed for vs, whan we were yet synners: Moch more then shal we be saued from wrath by him seynge we are now made righteous thorow his bloude.

reioyse also in God thorow oure LORDE Iesus Christ, by whom we haue now receaued the attonement.

Wherefore * as by one man synned entred in to the worlde, and death by \hat{y} meanes off synne: euen so wente death also ouer all men, in so much as they all haue synned. For synne was in \hat{y} worlde vnto the lawe: but where no lawe is, there is not synne regarded. Neuertheles death reigned from Adam vnto Moses, euen ouer them also that synned not with like transgression as dyd Adam, which is \hat{y} ymage of him \hat{y} was to come.

But it is not with the gifte as with the synne: for yf thorow the synne of one many be deed, yet moch more plenteously came the grace and gifte of God vpon many \dagger by the fauoure that belonged vnto one man Iesus Christ.

C And the gifte is not onely ouer one synne, as death came thorow one synne of one that synned. For the iudgment came of one synne vnto condemnation, but the gifte to iustifye fro many synnes. For yf by \hat{y} synne of one, death raigned by the meanes of one, moch more shal they which receaue the abūdaunce of grace and of the gifte vnto righteousness, raigne in life by \hat{y} meanes of one Iesus Christ. Likewise thē as by the synne of one, condemnation came on all men, euen so also by the righteousness of one, came the iustifengce off life vpon all men. For as by the disobedience of one, many became synners, euen so by the obedience of one shal many be made righteous.

But the lawe in the meane tyme entred, that synne shulde increace. \ddagger Neuertheles where abūdaunce of synne was, there was yet more plenteousnes of grace: that, like as synne had reigned vnto death, euē so mighte grace reigne also thorow righteousness to euerlastinge life by the meanes of Iesus Christ.

The vi. Chapter.

WHAT shal we saye then? Shal we contynue in synne, that there maye be abūdaunce of grace? God forbyd. How shal we lyue in synne, \hat{y} are deed from it? \S Knowe ye not, that all we which are baptysed in to Iesu Christ, are baptysed in to his death? Therefore are we buried with him by baptyme in to death, that, like as Christ was rayseyd vp from the deed by the glory of the father, I euen so we also shulde walke in a new life. For yf we be grafted with him vnto like death, then shal we be like the resurreccion also: For so much as we knowe, that oure olde man is crucified with him, that the synfull body mighte cease, that hence forth we shulde serue synne nomore. ¶ For he that is deed, is made righteous frō synne.

But yf we be deed with Christ, we beleue, that we shal lyue also with him, and are sure, that Christ rayseyd from the deed, dyeth nomore: Death shal haue nomore power ouer him. For as touchinge that he dyed, he dyed cōcernynge synne once: but as touchinge that he lyueth, he lyueth vnto God. Likewise ye also, counte youre selues to be euen deed concernynge synne, and to lyue vnto God thorow Iesus Christ oure LORDE. Let not synne reigne therfore in youre mortall bodye, that ye shulde obeye vnto the lustes of it. Nether geue ye ouer youre membres vnto synne to be wapens of vnrighteousnes, but geue ouer youre selues vnto God, as they that off deed are become lyuynge, and youre membres vnto God to be wapens off righteousness. For synne shal not haue power ouer you, in so much as ye are not vnder the lawe, but vnder grace.

How then? Shal we synne, because we are not vnder \hat{y} lawe, but vnder grace? God forbyd. $\dagger\dagger$ Knowe ye not, that loke vnto whō ye geue ouer youre selues as seruauntes to obeye, his seruauntes ye are to whom ye obey, whether it be of synne vnto death, or of obediēce vnto righteousness? But God be thanked, that though ye haue bene the seruauntes of synne, ye are now yet obedient of herte to the ensample off the doctryne, whervnto ye are commytted. For now that ye are made fre from synne, ye are become the seruauntes of righteousness.

I wil speake grosly, because of the weaknes of youre flesh. Like as ye haue geuen ouer youre membres to the seruyce of vncleennesse, from one wickednesse to another: Euē so now also geue ouer youre membres to the seruyce of righteousness, that they maye be holy. For whan ye were the seruauntes of synne, ye were lowse from righteousness. What frute

The viij. Chapter.

KNOWE ye not brethren (for I speake vnto them that knowe the lawe) how that y^e lawe hath power vpon a man as longe as he lyueth? ^a For the woman y^e is in subieccion to the man, is bounde vnto the lawe whyle the man lyueth: but yf the man dye, then is she lowsed from the lawe that concerneth the man. [†]Yf she be now with another man, whyle the man lyueth, she shal be called a wedlocke breaker. But yf the man be deed, then is she fre from the lawe, so that she is no wedlocke breaker, yf she be with another man.

Euen so my brethren, ye also are deed vnto the lawe by the body of Christ, that ye shulde be with another (namely with him which is raysed vp from the deed) that we shulde brynge forth frute vnto God. For whan we were in the flesh, the synfull lustes (which were stered vp by the lawe) were mightie in oure membres to brynge forth frute vnto death. But now are we lowsed from the lawe, and deed vnto it, that helde vs captiue, so that we shulde serue in a new conuersacion of the sprete, and not in the olde conuersacion of the letter.

33 What shal we saye then? Is the lawe synne? God forbyd: Neuertheles I knewe not synne, but by y^e lawe. For I had knowne nothinge of lust, yf the lawe had not sayde: [†]Thou shalt not lust. But then toke synne occasion at the commaundement, and stered vp in me all maner of lust. For without the lawe synne was deed. As for me, I lyued some tyme without lawe. Howbeit whan the commaundement came, synne reuyded, but I was deed. And the very same commaundement that was geuen me vnto life, was founde to be vnto me on occasion of death. For synne toke occasion at the cōmaundement, and disceaue me, and slewe me by the same commaundement.[§] The lawe in dede is holy, and the commaundement holy, iust and good. Is that then which is good, become death vnto me? God forbyd. But synne, that it mighte appeare how y^e it is synne, hath wroughte me death thorow good: that synne mighte be out of measure synfull by the commaundement. For we knowe, that the lawe is spirituall, but I am carnall, [¶]solde vnder synne: because I knowe not what I do. For I do not y^e I will, but what I hate, y^e do I. Yf I do now that which I wil not, th^e graunte I, that the lawe is good.

So then it is not I that do it, but synne that dwelleth in me: for I knowe that in me (y^e is, in my [¶]flesh) there dwelleth no good thinge. To wyll is present with me, but to performe y^e which is good, I fynde not. For y^e good that I wyll, do I not: but the euell which I wil not, that do I. Yf I do now that I wil not, then is it not I that do it, but synne that dwelleth in me.

Thus fynde I now by the lawe, y^e whan I wyl do good, euell is present with me. For I delite in the lawe of God after the inwarde man: but I se another lawe in my membres, which stryeth agaynst y^e lawe of my mynde, and taketh me presoner in y^e lawe of synne, which is in my membres. O wretched man that I am, who shal deluyer me from the body of this death? I thanke God thorow Iesus Christ oure LORDE. So then with the mynde I serue y^e lawe of God, but with the flesh the lawe of synne.

The viij. Chapter.

THEN is there now no damnacion vnto ^a th^e that are in Christ Iesu, which walke not after the flesh, but after y^e sprete. For y^e lawe of y^e sprete (y^e bryngeth life iⁿ Christ Iesu) hath made me ^{}fre frō the lawe of synne [¶]death. ^{††}For what vnpossible was vnto y^e lawe (in as moch as it was weake because of the flesh) y^e perfourmed God, [¶]sent his sonne in y^e similitude of synfull flesh, [¶]by ^{††}synne dāned synne in y^e flesh: that the righteousness requyred of the lawe, mighte be fulfilled in vs, which walke not after the flesh, but after the sprete. For they that are fleshly, are fleshly mynded: but they that are gostly, are gostly mynded. To be fleshly mynded, is death: but to be gostly mynded, is life and peace. For to be fleshly mynded is enemyte agaynst God, ^{§§}syth it is not subdued vnto y^e lawe of God, for it can not also. As for th^e that are fleshlye, they can not please God. Howbeit ye are not fleshly, but goodly, yf so be that the sprete of God dwell in you. But who so hath not the sprete of Christ, the same is not his. Neuertheles yf Christ be in you, then is the body deed because of synne. But the sprete is life for righteousness sake.

35 Wherefore yf the sprete of him, that rayseed vp Iesus from the deed, dwell in you, then shal euen he also that rayseed vp Christ from the deed, quykē youre mortal bodies, because yf his sprete dwelleth in you. Therefore brethrē we are now detters, not to the flesh, to lyue after the flesh: for yf ye lyue after yf fleshe, ye must dye: but yf ye mortyfy the dedes of the body thorow the sprete, ye shal lyue. For who so euer are led by the sprete of God, are Gods childrē: for ye haue not receaved the sprete of bondage to feare eny more, but ye haue receaved yf sprete of adoption, wherby we crye: Abba, deare father.* The same sprete certifieth oure sprete, that we are the childrē of God. Yf we be childrē, then are we heyres also, namely the heyres of God, and heyres annexed with Christ, yf so be that we suffer together, that we maye be also glorified together.

C For I suppose, that the afflictions off this tyme, are not worthy of yf glorie, which shalbe shewed vpon vs. For the feruent lōginge of yf creature loketh for the appearinge of the children of God, because the creature is subdued vnto vanyte agaynst hir will, but for his wyll that hath subdued her vpon hope. For the creature also shal be fre from the bondage of corrupcion, vnto the glorious libertye of the childrē of God. For we knowe, that euery creature groneth, and †trauayleth with vs in payne vnto the same tyme.

Not they only, but we oure selues also, which haue the first frutes of the sprete, grone within in oure selues for the childshippe, and loke for yf delyuerance of oure bodye. For we are saued i dede, howbeit i hope: but yf hope that is sene, is no hope: for how can a man hope for that which he seyth? But yf we hope for that which we se not, thē do we thorow pacience abyde for it.

36 Likewyse the sprete also helpeth oure weakness: for we knowe not what we shulde desyre as we oughte: § neuertheles yf sprete

it selfe maketh intercession mightely for vs with vnoutspeakable gronynge. Howbeit he yf searcheth the hert, knoweth what the mynde of the sprete is: for he maketh intercession for the sayntes accordinge to the pleasure of God. But sure we are, that all thinges serue for the best vnto them that loue of God, which are called of purpose. For those whom he knewe before, hath he ordeyned also before, yf they shulde be like fashioned vnto yf shappe of his sonne, yf he mighte be the first begottē amōge many brethrē. As for those whom he hath ordeyned before, them hath he called also: and whom he hath called, thē hath he also made righteous: and whom he hath made righteous, them hath he glorified also.

What shal we saye then vnto these thinges? Yff God be on oure syde, who can be agaynst vs. Which spared not his owne sonne, but hath geuen him for vs all: how shal he not with him geue vs all thinges also? Who wyl laye eny thinge to yf charge of Gods chosen? Here is God that maketh righteous, who wil then condemne? Here is Christ that is deed, yee rather which is rayseed vp agayne, which is also on yf righte hande of God, and maketh intercession for vs.

Who wil separate vs from the loue of God? Trouble? or anguysh? or persecuciō? or honger? or nakednesse? or parell? or swerde? As it is wrytten: "For thy sake are we kylled all the daye longe, we are counted as shepe appoynted to be slayne. Neuertheles in all these thinges we ouercome farre, for his sake that loued vs. For sure I am, that nether death ner life, nether angell, ner rule, nether power, nether thinges present, nether thinges to come, nether heyth, ner loweth, nether eny other creature shalbe able to separate vs from the loue of God, which is in Christ Iesu oure LORDE.

seruyce of God, and the promyses: whose are also the fathers, off whom (after the flesh) commeth Christ, which is God ouer all, blessed for euer. Amē. But I speake not these thinges, as though the worde of God were of none effecte: for they are not all Israelites, which are of Israel: neither are they all children, because they are the sede of Abraham: but in Isaac shal the sede be called vnto the, that is, They which are children after the flesh, are not the children of God, but the children of the promes are counted for the sede. For this is a worde of the promes, where he sayeth: Aboute this tyne wyl I come, and Sara shal haue a sonne.

Howbeit it is not so with this onely, but also when Rebecca was with childe by one (namely by oure father Isaac) or euer the childre were borne, had done nether good ner bad (that the purpose of God might stōde accordinge to the eleccion, not by the deseruyng of workes, but by the grace of the caller) it was sayde thus vnto her: The greater shal serue the lesse. As it is wrytten: Jacob haue I loued, but Esau haue I hated.

What shal we saye then? Is God then vnrighteous? God forbyd. For he sayeth vnto Moses: I shewe mercy, to whom I shewe mercy: and haue cōpassion, on whō I haue compassion. So lyeth it not then in eny mans wyll or runnyng, but in the mercy of God. For the scripture sayeth vnto Pharaο: For this cause haue I stered the vp, euen to shewe my power on the, that my name mighte be declared in all lōdes. Thus hath he mercy on whom he wyl: and whom he wyl, he hardeneth.

Thou wilt saye then vnto me: Why blameth he vs yet? For who can resiste his will? O thou man, who art thou, that disputest with God? Sayeth the worke to his workman: Why hast thou made me on this fashion? Hath not the potter power, out of one lompe of claye to make one vessell vnto honoure, and another vnto dishonoure? Therefore when God wolde shewe wrath, and to make his power knowne, he broughte forth with greate pacience the vessels off wrath, which are ordeyned to damnacion: that he mighte declare the riches off his glorie on fy vessels of mercy, which he hath prepared vnto glorie, whom he hath called (namely vs) not onely of the Iewes, but also of the Gentyles. As he sayeth also by Osee: I wil call that my people, which is not my people: and my beloued, which is not fy beloued. And it shal come to passe in fy place, where it was sayde vnto them: Ye are not my people, there shal they be called the children of the lyuyng God. But Esay crieth ouer Israel: Though the nombre of the children of Israel be as the sonde of the see, yet shal there but a remnant be sauēd. For there is the worde, that fynisheth and shorteneth in righteousnes: for a shorte worde shal God make vpon earth. And as Esay sayde before: Excepte the LORDE of Sabbaoth had left vs sede, we shulde haue bene as Sodoma, and like vnto Gomorra.

What shal we saye then? This wil we saye: The Heythen which folowed not righteousness, haue ouertaken righteousness: but I speake of the righteousness that commeth of faith. Agayne, Israel folowed the lawe of righteousness, and attayned not vnto the lawe of righteousness. Why so? Euen because they soughte it not out of faith, but as it were out of the deseruyng of workes. For they haue stombled at the stomblinge stone. As it is wrytten: Beholde, I laye in Sion a stone to stōble at, and a rocke to be offended at: and who so euer beleueth on him, shal not be confounded.

The x. Chapter.

BRETHREN, my hertes desyre, a prayer vnto God for Israel is, that they might be sauēd. For I beare them recorde, that they are zelous for Gods cause, but not with vnderstandinge. For they knowe not the righteousness which anyleth before God, and go aboute to manteyne their awne righteousness: and thus they are not subdued vnto the righteousness, that is off value before God. For Christ is the ende of the lawe, vnto righteousness for euery one fy beleueth. Moses wryteth of fy righteousness which commeth of the lawe, that the man which doth fy same, shal lyue therin. But fy righteousness which cometh of faith, speaketh on this wyse: Saye not in thine hert: Who wil go vp in to heauē?

33 For yf thou knowlegest Iesus with thy mouth, that he is the LORDE, and beleuest in thine hert, that God hath raysted him vp from the deed, thou shalt be sauēd. For yf a man beleue from the hert, he shalbe made righteous: and yf a mā knowlege with the mouth, he shal be sauēd. For the scripture sayeth: "Who so euer beleueth on him, shall not be confounded.

Here is no difference, nether of the Iewer of the Gentyle. For one is LORDE of all, which is riche vnto all ſ̄ call vpō him. For who so euer shal call vpon the name of the LORDE, shalbe sauēd. But how shal they call vpō him, on whō they beleue not? How shal they beleue on him, of whō they haue not herde? How shal they heare without a preacher? But how shal they preach, excepte they be sent? As it is writtē: ¹How beutyfull are the fete of thē ſ̄ preach peace, ſ̄ brynge good tidinges? But they are not all obedient vnto the Gospell. For Esaye sayeth: LORDE, who beleueth oure preachinge? So thē faith cōmeth* by hearynge, but hearynge cōmeth by the worde of God.

But I saye: Haue they not herde? "No doute their sounde wēte out in to all londes, and their wordes in to the endes of the worlde. But I saye: Hath not Israel knowne? First, Moses sayeth: "I wil prouoke you to enuye, by them that are not my people: & by a foolish nacion wyl I anger you. Esaye after him is bolde, and sayeth: "I am founde of them, that sought me not: & haue appeared vnto them, that axed not after me. But vnto Israel he sayeth: "All the daye lōge haue I stretched forth my handes vnto a people ſ̄ beleueth not, but speaketh agaynst me.

The xi. Chapter.

A I SAYE then: Hath God thrust out his people? God forbyd:† for I also am an Israelite, of the sede of Abraham out of the trybe of Ben Iamin. God hath not thrust out his people, whom he knewe before. Or wote ye not what the scripture sayeth of Elias, how he maketh intercession vnto God agaynst Israel, and sayeth: ¹LORDE, they haue slayne thy prophetes, & dydged downe thine altares, and I am lefte ouer onely, and they seke my life? But what sayeth the auswere of God vnto him? "I haue reserued vnto me seuen thousande men, which haue not bowed their knee before Baal. Euē so goeth it now at this tyme also with this remnaunt after ſ̄ election of grace.† Yf it be done of grace, thē is it not of deseruyng: els were grace no grace. But yf it be of deseruyng, then is grace nothinge: els were deseruyng no deseruyng.

What thē? Israel hath not optayned ſ̄ 33 which he soughte, but the election hath optayned it. As for ſ̄ other, they are blynded. As it is wrytten: God hath geuen them the sprete of vnquyetnesse, ²eyes that they shulde not se, and eares that they shulde not heare, euē vnto this daye. And Daud sayeth: Let their table be made a snare³ to take thē with all, & an occasion to fall, & a rewarde vnto thē. Let their eyes be blynded that they se not, and euer bowe downe their backes.

I saye then: Haue they therfore stombled, ſ̄ they shulde cleane fall to naughte? God forbyd: but thorow their fall is saluacion happened vnto ſ̄ Heythen, that he mighte prouoke them to be zelous after them. For yf their fall be the riches of the worlde, and the mynishinge of thē the riches of the Heythen: how moch more shulde it be so, yf their fulnesse were there? I speake vnto you Heythen: for in as moch as ⁴I am ſ̄ Apostle of the Heythen, I wil prayse myne office, yf I mighte prouoke them vnto zeale, which are my fleshe, and saue some of them. For yf the losse of them by the recōcylinge of the worlde, what were that els, then as yf life were taken of the deed? Yf the begynnynge be holy, then is all ſ̄ dowe holy:§ and yf the rote be holy, then are the braunches holy also.

But though some of ſ̄ braunches now be C brokē, and thou, whā thou wast a wylde olyue tre, art grafte in amonge them, and made partaker of the rote and sappe of the l̄ olyue tre, boost not thy selfe agaynst the braunches.

LET every soule submytte him selfe to the auctorite off the hyer powers.† For there is no power but of God. The powers that be, are ordeyned of God: so that who so euer resisteth the power, resisteth the ordinance of God. And they that resist, shal receaue to them selues dānacion. For rulers are not to be feared for good workes, but for euell. Yf thou wilt be without feare off the power, do well then, and thou shalt haue prayse of the same: for he is the minister off God for thy wealth. But yff thou do euell, then feare, for he beareth not the swerde for naughte. For he is the mynister of God, a taker of vengeance, to punyshe him that doth euell. Wherefore ye must nedes obeye, not onely for punyshmēt, but also because of conscience. For this cause must ye geue trybute also. For they are Gods mynisters, which māteyne ꝑ same defence.

Geue to euery man therefore his dutye: tribute, to whom tribute belongeth: custome, to whom custome is due: feare, to whom feare belongeth: honoure, to whom honoure pertayneth. Owe nothing to eny man, but to loue one another. †For he that loueth another, hath fulfilled the lawe. For where it is sayde: († Thou shalt not breake wedlocke: thou shalt not kyll: thou shalt not steale: thou shalt not beare false witness: thou shalt not lust) and yf there be eny other commaundement, it is comprehēded in this worde: † Thou shalt loue thy neighbour as thy selfe. Loue doth his neighbour no euell. Therefore is loue ꝑ fulfillynge of the lawe.

And for so moch as we know this, namely the tyme † that the houre is now for vs to ryse from slepe. the LORDE) all knees shal bowe vnto me,^a ⁊ all tūges shal knowlege vnto God. Thus shal every one of vs geue accomptes for him- selfe vnto God. Let vs not therfore iudge one another eny more. But iudge this rather, ⁊ nomā put a stombing blocke or an occasion to fall in his brothers waye. *I knowe, ⁊ am full certified in ⁊ LORDE Iesu, ⁊ there is nothinge cōmen of it selfe: but vnto him ⁊ iudgeth it to be cōmen, to him is it cōmen. But yf thy brother be greued ouer thy meate, thē walkest thou not now after charite. Destroye not with thy meate, him, for whom Christ dyed.

Se therfore that youre treasure be not euell spokē of. For the kyngdome of God is not meate and drynke, but righteounes, ⁊ peace, and ioye in the holy goost. He that in these thinges serueth Christ, pleaseth God, ⁊ is cōmended of mē. Let vs therfore folowe those thinges which make for peace, ⁊ thinges wherwith one maye edifye another. Destroye not ⁊ worke of God for eny meates sake. ^aAll thinges truly are cleane, but it is euell for ⁊ mā, which eateth with hurte of his cōscience.^f It is moch better ⁊ thou eate no flesh, and drynke no wyne, nor eny thinge, wherby thy brother stombeth, or falleth, or is made weake. Hast thou faith, haue it with thy selfe before God. Happye is he, that cōdemneth not him selfe in ⁊ thinge which he aloweth. But he that maketh conscience of it and yet eateth, is dampned: because he doth it not of faith. For † what so euer is not of faith, that same is synne.

The xvj. Chapter.

WE that are stronge ſought to beare ⁊ fraynesse of them which are weake, and not to stonde in oure awne consaytes. Let every one of vs orde himselfe so, that he please his neghboure vn to his welth, and edifyenge: For Christ pleased not himselfe, but as it is written: 'The rebukes of them which rebuked the, are fallen vpon me. ¶ What so euer thinges are wryttē a fore tyme, are wrytten for oure learnynge, that we thorow pacience and comforte off the scriptures, might haue hope. The God of pacience and consolacion graunte you to be like mynded one towarde another, acordinge vnto Iesu Christ, that ye beyng of one mynde, maye with one mouth prayse God the father of oure LORDE Iesu Christ.

Wherefore receaue ye one another, as Christ hath receaued you to the prayse off God. But I saye that Christ Iesus was a mynister of the circumcision for the trueth of God, to cōfirme the promyses made vnto the fathers, and that the Heythen mighte prayse God because of mercy, as it is wrytten: ^aFor this cause wyl I prayse the amōge the Gētyles, and synge vnto thy name. And agayne he sayeth: ' Reioyse ye Heythen with his people. And agayne: † Praise the LORDE all ye Gentiles, and laude him all ye naciōs. And agayne Esay sayeth: There shalbe the rote of Iesse, and he that shal ryse to rule the Gētyles, in him shal the Gētyles trust. The God off hope fyll you with all ioye and peace in beleuyng, ⁊ ye maye be plenteous in hope thorow ⁊ power of the holy goost.

I my selfe am full certified of you (my brethren) that ye youre selues are full of goodnes, fylled with all knowlege, so that ye are able to exhorte one another. Neuertheles (brethrē) I haue somewhat more boldly wrytten vnto you, as one that putteth you in remembraunce, for the grace that is geuē me of God, that I shulde be a mynister of Iesu Christ amonge the Heythen, to declare the gospell of God, that the Heythen mighte be an acceptable offerynge vnto God, sanctified by the holy goost. Therfore maye I boost myselfe thorow Iesu Christ, that I medle with thinges perteyninge vnto God. For I durst not speake ought, excepte Christ had wroughte the same by me, to make the Heythen obediēt thorow worde and dede, thorow the power of tokens and wonders, and thorow the power of the sprete of God, so that from Ierusalē, and roūde aboute vnto Illyricon, I haue fylled all with the Gospell of Christ. So haue I enforced my selfe to preach ⁊ Gospell, not where Christes name was knowne, lest I shulde buylde on another mans foundation, but as it is wrytten: To whom he was not spoken of, they shal se: / and they that haue not herde, shal vnderstonde. This is also the cause, wherfore I haue bene oft tymes let to come vnto you. But now syth I haue nomore place in these countrees, hauyng yet a de-syre many yeares sence to come vnto you,

I COMMENDE vnto you Phebe oure sister, which is a mynister of the congregation of Cenchrea, that ye receaue her in the LORDE, as it be cometh the sayntes, and that ye helpe her in what soeuer busynesse she hath neade off you. For she hath succoured many, and myne awne selfe also.

Grete Prisca and Aquila my helpers in Christ Iesu, which for my life haue layed downe their awne neckes: vnto whom not I onely geue thanks, but all the congregacions of the Heythen. Grete the congregacion also in their house. Salute Epenetos my beloued, which is y first frute amoge the of Achaia i Christ. Grete Mary, which hath bestowed moch labour on vs. Salute Andronicus and Iunia my cosens, and felowe presoners, which are ancient Apostles, and were before me in Christ. Grete Amplias my beloued in y LORDE. Salute Vrbano oure helper in Christ, and Stachis my beloued. Salute Apelles approued in Christ. Salute them which are of Aristobolus housholde. Salute Herodion my kynszman. Grete the which are of Narcissus housholde in the LORDE. Salute Tryphena and Tryphosa, which haue laboured in y LORDE. Salute my beloued Persida, which hath laboured moch and y LORDE. Salute Rufus y chosen in y LORDE: and his mother and myne. Grete Asyncritus, Phlego, Herman, Patrobas, Hermen, and y brethre with the. Salute Philologus and Iulia, Nerius and his sister, and Olympa, and all the sayntes with the. Salute one another with an holy kysse. The cōgregacions of Christ salute you.

I beseke you brethren, marke them which cause deuysion and geue occasions of euell, contrary to y doctrine which ye haue learned, and aveyde them. For they y are soch, serue not the LORDE Iesu Christ, but their awne belly: and thorow swete preachinges and flatering wordes, they diseaue y hertes of y innocentes. For youre obedience is published amonge all men, therefore am I glad of you.

But yet I wolde haue you wyse in that which is good, and symple in euell. The God of peace treade Sathan vnder youre fete shortly. The grace of oure LORDE Iesu Christ be with you. Timothyus my helper, and Lucius, and Iason, and Sopater my kynsmen salute you. I Tertius which haue writte this epistle in y LORDE, salute you. Gaius myne ooste and y oost of y whole cōgregacion saluteth you. Erastus y chāberlaine of y cite saluteth you and Quartus a brother saluteth you. The grace of oure LORDE Iesu Christ be with you all Amē.

To him y is of power to stablyshe you, accordinge to my Gospell and preachinge of Iesu Christ, wherby is vttered y mystery which hath bene kepte secrete, sence y worlde begāne, but now is opened, and shewed by the scriptures of y prophetes, at the cōmaundemēt of the euerlastinge God, to set vp y obediēce of the faith amonge all Heythen: to the same God, which alone is wyse, be prayse thorow Iesu Christ for euer, Amen.

The first Epistle of the Apostle S. Paul, to the Corinthians.

Chap. I.

He commendeth the Corinthians, exhorteth thē to be of one mynde, & rebuketh the diuysion that was amonge them. Wordly wysdome is foolishnes before God, yee there is no wysdome but in the despysed crosse of Christ.

Chap. II.

It is not eloquence and glorious paynted wordes of wordly wysdome, that can edifie and conuerte soules vnto Christ: but the playne wordes of the scripture, for, they make mention of him and his crosse.

Chap. III.

Paul rebuketh the sectes and authores therof. Christ is the foundaciō of his church. No man ought to ioyce in men, but in God.

Chap. IIII.

The preachers are but ministers. Iudgment belongeth onely vnto God.

Chap. V.

After what maner Paul curseth the man, that had committed fornicacion with his mother in lawe.

Chap. VI.

He rebuketh thē for goinge to lawe together before the Heithen, and reproueth vnclennesse.

Chap. VII.

Of mariage, virginite and wyddowheade.

Chap. VIII.

He rebuketh thē that vse their lyberte to the slaunders of other, & sheweth how men ought to behaue thē towarde such as be weake.

Chap. IX.

Loue forbeareth the thinge that she maye do by the lawe. He exorteth them to runne on forth in the course that they haue begonne.

Chap. X.

He feareth them with the ensamples of the olde Testament, and exorteth them to a godly conuersacion.

Chap. XI.

He rebuketh thē for the abuse and misordre that they had aboute the Sacramēt of the body and bloude of Christ, and bringeth them agayne to the first institution.

Chap. XII.

The diuersite of the giftes of the holy goost, geuen to the cōforte and edifieng of one another, as the membres of a mans body serue one another.

Chap. XIII.

The nature and condicions of loue.

Chap. XIIIII.

Paul sheweth that the gift of prophecie, interpretinge, or preachinge, excelleth the gift of tungen, and how they ought both to be vsed.

Chap. XV.

The resurreccion of the dead.

Chap. XVI.

He putteth thē in remembrance of the gadderynge for the poore christē at Ierusalē, and concludeth his epistle with the salutacions of certayne louynge brethren.

The first Epistle

of the Apostle S. Paul, to the Corinthians.

The first Chapter.

A PAUL, called to be an Apostle of Iesus Christ thorow f will of God, and brother * Sosthenes, vnto the congregacion off God which is at Corinthum, to them that are \dagger sanctified in Christ Iesus, sayntes by callinge, with all them that call vpon the name of oure LORDE Iesus Christ, in euery place both off theirs and oures. \dagger Grace be with you and peace from God oure father, and from the LORDE Iesus Christ.

I thanke my God allwayes on youre behalfe, for the faouere of God which is geuē you in Iesus Christ, that in all poyntes ye are made ryche by him, in euery worde, and in all maner of knowlege (euē as f preachinge of Christ is confirmed in you) so that ye wante nothinge in eny gifte, and wayte but for the appearinge of oure LORDE Iesus Christ: which shal strength you also vnto f ende, that ye maye be blamelesse in the daye of oure LORDE Iesus Christ. f For God is faithfull, by whō ye are called vnto the fellowshippe of his sonne Iesus Christ oure LORDE.

33 But I beseke you brethrē thorow the name of oure LORDE Iesus Christ, that ye all speake one thinge, and let there be no discension amonge you, but that ye be perfecte in one maneinge. For it is shewed me (my brethren) of you, by them which are of f housholde of Cloes, that there is stryfe amonge you. I speake of that, which euery one of you sayeth: I holde of Paul. Another, I holde of f Apollo. The thirde, I holde of Cephas. The fourth, I holde off Christ. Is Christ then deuyded in partes? Was Paul crucified for you? Or were ye baptysed in f name of Paul? I thanke God that I haue baptised none of you, but Crispus and Gaius: lest eny shulde saye, f I in myne awne name had baptised. I baptysed also f housholde of Stephana. Farthermore knowe I not, whether I baptysed eny other. For Christ sent me not to baptysse, but to preach the Gospell, not with wyszdome of wordes, lest f crosse of Christ shulde haue bene made of none effecte.

For the worde of f crosse is foolishnesse to thē that perishe f but vnto vs which are saued, it is the power of God. For it is wryttē:  I wyl destroye the wyszdome of the wyse, f wil cast away the vnderstandinge of f prudēt. Where are the wyse? Where are f scribes? where are f disputers of this worlde? Hath not God made the wyszdome of this worlde foolishnesse? For in so moch as the worlde by the wyszdome therof knewe not God in his wyszdome, it pleased God thorow foolish preachinge to saue them f beleue. For f the Iewes requyre tokens, and the Grekes axe after wyszdome. But we preach Christ the crucified: to the Iewes an occasion off fallinge, and vnto the Grekes foolishnes. But vnto them that are called (both Iewes and Grekes) we preach Christ the power of God and f the wyszdome off God.

For the foolishnes of God is wyser then men: and the weaknes of God is strōger thē men. Brethren loke on youre callinge, how that f not many wysemē after the flesh, not many mightie, not many of hye degre are called: but that foolish is before the worlde, hath God chosē, that he mighte cōfounde the wyse: And that weake is before f worlde, hath God chosen, † he mighte confounde the mightye. And the vyle and despyed before the worlde hath God chosen, yee and that which is nothinge, that he mighte destroye that which is oughte, that no flesh shulde reioyse in his presence. Of the same are ye also in Christ Iesu, which of God is made vnto vs wyszdome and *righteousnes, and †sanctificatione and redēpcion, that, acordinge as it is wrytten : ‡ He that reioyseth, shulde reioyse in the LORDE.

The ij. Chapter.

AND I brethrē, whā I came vnto you came not with hye wordes or hye wyszdome, to shewe vnto you the preachinge of Christ. For I shewed not forth my selfe amonge you that I knewe eny thinge, saue onely Iesus Christ, euen the same that was crucified. And I was amonge you in weaknes, and in feare, and in moch tremblinge : § and my worde and my preachinge was not with entysinge wordes of mans wyszdome, but in shewinge of the sprete and of power : that youre faith shulde not stonde in the wyszdome of men, but in the power of God.

That we speake of, is wyszdome amonge thē † are perfecte : not ‡ wyszdome of this worlde, nether of the rulers of this worlde which go to naughte : but we speake of the wyszdome of God, which is in secrete and lyeth hyd : which God ordeyned before the worlde vnto oure glorie : ¶ which none of † rulers of this worlde knewe. For yf they had knowne it, they had not crucified the LORDE of glorie, but as it is wrytten : ¶ The eye hath not sene, and the eare hath not herde, nether hath it entred in to the hert of man that God hath prepared for them that loue him.

But God hath opened it vnto vs by his sprete.  For the sprete searcheth out all thinges, yee euen the depennesses of the Godheade. For what mā knoweth what is in man, saue the sprete of mā which is in him ? Euen so no man knoweth what is in God, saue † sprete of God. As for vs, we haue not receaued the sprete of this worlde, but the sprete which cometh of God, so that we cā knowe what is geuē vs of God : which we also speake, not with connyng wordes of mā wyszdome, but with the cōnyng wordes of the holy goost, and iudge spirituall matters spirituallly. Howbeit the naturall man perceaueth nothinge of † sprete of God. It is foolishnes vnto him, and he can not perceauē it : for it must be spirituallly discerned.†† But he that is spirituall, discusseth all thinges, and he is iudged of noman. †† For who hath knowne † mynde of the LORDE ? Or who shal enfourme him ? But we haue the mynde of Christ.

The iij. Chapter.

AND I brethren, coulde not speake vnto you as vnto spirituall, but as vnto carnall, euen as vnto babes in Christ. §§ I gaue you mylke to drynke, and not meate, for ye mighte not then awaye withall, nether maye ye yet euen now, in so moch as ye are yet fleshye. For ¶ seynge there is enuyenge, stryfe, and discencion amonge you, are ye not fleshy, ¶ walke after † maner of men ? For whan one sayeth : † I holde of Paul : another, I holde of Apollo, are ye not thē fleshye ? What is Paul ? What is Apollo ? Euē mynisters are they, by whom ye are come to the beleue, and the same, acordinge as the LORDE hath geuen vnto euery man. I haue plantēd, Apollo hath watred, ¶¶ but God hath geuen the increace. So then nether is he that planteth, eny thinge, nether he that watreth, but God which geueth the increace. As for him that planteth, and he that watreth, † one is as the other : but yet shal euery one receaue his rewarde acordinge to his labour. For we are Gods labourers, ye are Gods huszbandry, ye are Gods buyldinge.

Acordinge to the grace of God which is geuen vnto me, as a wyse buylder haue I layed the foundacion, but another buyldeth thereon. Yet let euery man take hede how he buyldeth thereon.  For other foudacion can noman laye, then that which is layed, the which is Iesus Christ. But yf eny man buylde vpon this foundacion, golde, syluer, precious stones, tymber, haye, stobble, euery mā's worke shal be shewed. ††† For the daye of the LORDE shal declare it, which shal be shewed with fyre : and the ††† fyre shal trye

* Knowe ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the sprete of God dwelleth in you? Yf eny man defyle the tēple of God, him shal God destroye. For the temple of God is holy, which ye are. Let no mā disceane himselfe. Yf eny man thinke himselfe wyse amōge you, let him become a foole in this worlde, that he maye be wyse. For tthe wysdome off this worlde is foolishnes with God. For it is wyrtēn: † He compaseth the wyse in their craftynesse. And agayne: § The LORDE knoweth the thoughtes of the wyse, that they are vayne. Therefore let no man reioyse in men. For all is yours, whether it be Paul or Apollo, whether it be Cephas or the worlde, whether it be life or death, whether it be presente or for to come. All is yours, but ye are Christes, and Christ is Gods.

The iiij. Chapter.

21 LET every man this wyse esteeme vs, euen for the mynisters of Christ,^a and stewardestes of the secretes of God. Now is there no more requyred of the stewardestes, then, that they be founde faithfull. ¶ It is but a small thinge vnto me, that I shulde be iudged of you, or of mans daye, nether iudge I myne awne selfe. I knowe noughte by my selfe,  yet am I not thereby iustified. It is the LORDE that iudgeth me. Therefore iudge ye nothinge before § tyme, vntyll the LORDE come, which shal brynge it to lighte that is hyd in darknesse, and opē the counceils of § hertes, and thē shal euery one haue prayse of God.

23 These thinges brethern haue I described in myne awne preson ¶ in Apollos for youre sakes, that ye mighte lerne by vs, that noman counthe hygher of him self, then aboue is wrytten, that one be not puffed vp agaynst another for eny mans cause. For who preferreth the? † What hast thou that thou hast not receaved? Yf thou hast receaved it, why makest thou thē thy boost, as though thou haddest not receaved it? Now ye are full, now ye are made riche, ye raigne without vs, and wolde God ye dyd raigne, that we might raigne with you.

Me thynketh that God hath set forth vs Apostles for the lowest off all, † euen as those that are appoynted vnto death. For we are a gasynge stocke vnto § worlde and to the angels, and vnto men. We are fooles for Christes sake, but ye are wyse in Christ: We weake, but ye strōge: Ye honorable, but we despyed. Euen vnto this daye we hōger and thyrst, and are naked, and are boffeted with fystes, and haue no certayne dwellinge place, § and labour and worke with oure awne handes. We are reuyld, † and yet we blesse: we are persecuted, and suffre it: We are euell spoken of, and we praye: We are become as it were the very outswepinges of § worlde, yee the of scowringe of all men vnto this tyme.

I wryte not this to shame you, but as my deare childrē I warne you. For though ye haue ten thousande instructours in Christ yet haue ye not many fathers. For I haue ¶ be- gotten you in Christ Iesu thorow § Gospell? Wherefore I exhorte you,  be ye my folowers. For this cause haue I sent vnto you Timotheus (which is my deare sonne, and faithfull in the LORDE) that he maye put you in remembrance of my wayes, which are in Christ, euen as I teach euery where in all congregacions. Some are puffed vp, as though I wolde come nomore at you. But I wil come to you shortly (††† yf the LORDE wyl) and wyl knowe, not the wordes of thē that are puffed vp, but § power. For the kyngdome of God is not i wordes, but in power. What wil ye? Shal I come vnto you with the rodd, or with loue and the sprete of mekenesse? C

For what haue I to do to iudge them that are without? Do ye not iudge thē that are within? As for them that are without, God shal iudge them.  Put awaye fro you him that is euell.

The vi. Chapter.

8 HOW dare one off you hauynge busynes with another, go to lawe before the vnrighteous, and not before the sayntes? †† Do ye not knowe that the sayntes shal iudge the worlde? Yf the worlde then shalbe iudged off you, are ye not good ynough to iudge small matters? Knowe ye not that we shal iudge the angels? how moch more thinges that pertayne to the tēporall life? Therfore yf ye haue iudgmentes of temporall matters, take them that are despyed in the congrega-cion, and set them to be iudges. This I saye to youre shame. Is there vtterly no wyse man amōge you? What not one at all, that can iudge betwene brother & brother? but one brother goeth to lawe with another, and that before the vnbeleuers?

Now therfore is there vtterly a faute amōge you, that ye go to lawe one with another. †† Why rather suffre ye not wronge? Why suffre ye not youre selues rather to be defrauded? but ye youre selues do wrōge and defraude, and that euen the brethrē. Knowe ye not that ꝑ vnrighteous shal not inheret the kyngdome of God? Be not diseaued. ¶ Neither whoremongers, ner worshippers off ymages, ner breakers off wedlocke, ner weaklings, nether abusers of them selues with mankynde, ner theues, nether the couetous, ner drōkardes, ner cursed speakers, ner extorcioners shal inheret the kyngdome of God. And soch haue some of you bene, but ye are waszhed, ye are sanctified, ye are made righteous by the name of the LORDE Iesus, and by the sprēte of oure God.

I maye do all thinges, but all ꝑꝑ thinges are not profitable. I maye do all thinges, but I wil be broughte vnder no mā's power. Meates are ordeyned for ꝑ bely, & the bely for meates. But God shal destroye both it and them. The body belongeth not vnto whordome, but vnto the LORDE, and the LORDE vnto the body. ¶¶ God hath rayssed vp the LORDE, and shal rayse vs vp also by his power. Knowe ye not that youre bodies are the mēbres of Christ? Shal I now take the mēbres of Christ, and make them the mēbres of an harlot? God forbyd. Or do ye not knowe, that he which cleueth vnto an harlot, is one body? For they shalbe two (¶¶ sayeth he) in one fleszhe. But he that cleueth vnto the LORDE, is one sprēte.

Fle whordome. All synnes ꝑ a man doth, are without the body. But he that commyteth whordome, synneth agaynst his awne body.  Or knowe ye not that youre body is the temple of the holy goost? Whom ye haue of God, and are not youre awne? ††† For ye are dearly boughte. Prayse ye God therfore in youre body & in youre sprēte, which are Gods.

The vij. Chapter.

2 A S concernynge the thinges wherof ye wrote vnto me, I answer: It is good for a man not to touche a woman. Neuertheles to avoyde whordome, let every man haue his awne wife, and let every woman haue hir awne huszbande. Let the mā geue vnto the wife due beneuolence: likewise also the wife vnto ¶ man. The wife hath not power ouer hir awne body, but the huszbande: ¶ likewise the man hath not power ouer his awne body, but the wife. * Withdrawne not youre selues one frō another, excepte it be with the consent of both for a tyme, that ye maye geue youre selues vnto fastinge and prayer, and thē come together agayne, lest Sathan tempte you for youre incontynēcy. But this I saye of fauoure, and not of commaundemēt. Howbeit I wolde rather ¶ all mē were as I am. Neuertheles every one hath his proper gifte of God: one thus, another so. To them verely ¶ are vnmarried and to wedowes I saye: It is good for thē that they abyde also as I do. † But yf they can not absteyne, let them mary. For it is better to mary, then to burne.

3 But vnto them that are married, commaunde not I, but the LORDE, † that the wife separate not her selfe from the huszbande: but yf she separate her selfe, ¶ she remayne vnmarried, or be reconcyled to hir huszbande: and let not the huszbande put away his wife from him.

As for the other, vnto thē saye I, not ¶ LORDE: Yf eny brother haue an vnbeleuyng wife, and she is content to dwell with him, let him not put hir awaye. And yf a woman haue an vnbeleuyng huszbande, and he is content to dwell with her, let her not put him awaye. For the vnbeleuyng huszbande is sanctified by the wife, and the vnbeleuyng wife is sanctified by the huszbande: or els were youre children vnclane, but now are they holy. But yf the vnbeleuyng departe, let him departe. A brother or a sister is not boide in such cases, but God hath called vs in peace. § For what knowest thou O womā, whether thou shalt saue ¶ mā? Or what knowest thou O man, whether thou shalt saue the woman? But euen as God hath distributed vnto euery one ¶ and as the LORDE hath called euery man, so let him walke: and so orden I in all congregacions.

¶ Yf eny man be called beyng circumcysed let him take no Heythenshippe vpon him. Yf eny man be called in the Heythenshippe, let him not be circumcysed. Circumcision is nothinge, and vncircumcision is nothinge, but the kepynge of the commaundementes of God. Let every one abyde in the callynge wherin he is called. ¶ Art thou called a seruaut, care not for it: neuertheles yf thou mayest be fre, vse it rather. For he that is called in the LORDE beyng a seruaut, is a fre man of the LORDE. Likewise he that is called beyng fre, is a seruaut of Christ.  Ye are dearly boughte, be not ye the seruantes of men. Brethren let euery one wherin he is called, therein abyde with God.

As concernynge virgins, I haue no commaundement of the LORDE, neuertheles I saye my goodmeanyng, as I haue optayned mercy of the LORDE to be faithfull. I suppose it is good for ¶ present necessite: for it is good for a man so to be. Art thou bounde vnto a wife, seke not to be loused: Art thou loused frō a wife, seke not a wife. But yf thou take a wife, thou synnest not. And yf a virgin mary, she synneth not. Neuertheles soch shal haue trouble in the fleszhe. But I fauoure you.

Howbeit this I saye brethren: †† the tyme is shorte. Farthermore this is the meanyng, ¶ they which haue wyues, be as though they had none: and they that wepe, be as though they wepte not: and they that reioyse, be as though they reioysed not: ¶ they that bye, be as though they possessed not: ¶ they that vse this worlde, be as though they vsed it not. For the faszion off this worlde passeth awaye. ¶ But I wolde that ye shulde be without care. † He that is syngle, careth for the thinges of the LORDE, how he maye please the LORDE. But he that is married, careth for the thinges of the worlde, how he maye please his wife, and is deuyded. A woman and a virgin that is syngle, careth for the thinges of the LORDE, that she maye be holy both in body ¶ also in sprete. But she that is married, careth for ¶ thinges of the worlde, how she maye please hir huszbande.

E This I saye for youre profit, not that I wil tangle you in a snare, but for that which is honest and comly vnto you, that ye maye cōtynually cleue vnto the LORDE without hynderaunce. But yf eny man thinke that it is vnccomly for his virgin yf she passe the tyme of mariage, and yf nede so requyre, let him do what he lyst, he synneth not, let thē be coupled in mariage. Neuertheles he that purposeth surely in his hert, hauynge no nede, but hath power of his awne wyll, and determineth so in his hert to kepe his virgin, doth well. Fynally, he that ioyneth his virgin in mariage, doth well: but he that ioyneth not his virgin in mariage, doth better. *The wife is bounde to the lawe, as longe as hir huszbande lyueth. But yf hir huszbande slepe, she is at liberty to mary vnto whom she wil, only that it be done in the LORDE. But she is happier yf she so abyde after my iudgment. I thinke verely that I also haue the sprete of God.

The viij. Chapter.

A S touchinge thinges †offred vnto Idols
A †we are sure yf we all haue knowlege. Knowlege puffeth a mā vp, but loue edifyeth. Neuertheles yf eny mā thinke yf he knoweth eny thinge, he knoweth not yet how he oughte to knowe. But yf eny man loue God, the same is knowne of him.

So are we sure now cōcernynge the meates offred vnto Idols, § that an Idoll is nothinge in the worlde, and that there is none other God but one. And though there be that are called goddes, whether in heauen or in earth (as there be goddes many and lordes many) yet haue we but one God, euen the father, ¶ of whō are all thinges, and we in him: ¶ one LORDE Iesus Christ, by whō are all thinges, and we by him.

But euery man hath not knowlege: for some make .yet ¶ consciēce ouer the Idoll, and eate it as a thinge offred vnto Idols: and so their consciēce beyng weake, is defyled. Neuertheles meate furthureth not vs vnto God. Yf we eate, we shal not therfore be the better: yf we eate not, we shal not therfore be the lesse. But take hede that this your liberty be not an occasion of fallynge vnto yf weake. For yf eny man se the (which hast knowlege) syt at the table in the Idols house, shal not his consciēce whyle it is weake, be occasioned to eate of the Idoll-offeringes? And so thorow thy knowlege shal the weake brother perishe, for whō Christ dyed. But whan ye synne so agaynst the brethren, and wounde their weake cōsciēce, ye synne agaynst Christ. Wherefore yf meate offende my brother, I wyl neuer eate flesh, lest I offende my brother.

The ix. Chapter.

A M I not an Apostle? Am I not fre? †Haue I not sene Iesus Christ oure LORDE? Are not ye my worke in the LORDE? Yf I be not an Apostle vnto other, yet am I youre Apostle: for the seale of myne Apostelshippe are ye in the LORDE. Myne answer vnto them that axe me, is this: Haue we not power to eate and drynke? Haue we not power also to leade aboute a sister to wife, as well as other Apostles, and as the brethren of the LORDE, and ††Cephas? Or haue only I and Barnabas not power this to do? Who goeth a warfare at eny tyme vpon his awne wages? Who planteth a vnyarde, and eateth not of the frute therof? Who fedeth a flocke, and eateth not of the mylke of the flocke?

Saye I these thinges after the maner of men? Sayeth not the lawe the same also? For §§it is wrytten in the lawe off Moses: Thou shalt not mosell the mouth of the oxe that treadeth out the corne. Doth God take thought for the oxen? Or sayeth he it not alltogether for oure sakes? For no doute it is wrytte for oure sakes. For he that eareth, shulde eare vpon hope: and he yf throszheth, shulde troszhe vpon hope, yf he mighte be partaker of his hope. ¶¶Yf we haue sowne vnto you spiritual thinges, is it a greate thige yf we reape youre bodely thinges? But yf other be partakers of this power on you, wherefore are not we rather? ¶¶ Neuertheles we haue not vsed this power, but suffre all thinges, lest we shulde hynder the Gospell off Christ. Knowe ye not that they which labour in the temple, haue their luyynge of yf temple:

and they that wayte at the altare, enioye the altare? * Euen thus also hath LORDE ordeyned, that they which preach the Gospell, shulde lyue of y Gospell. † But I haue vsed none of these thinges.

C Nether wryte I therof, that it shulde be done so vnto me: for I had rather dye, thē that eny man shulde brynge my reioysinge to naughte. For in that I preach the Gospell, I neade not boost my selfe, for I must nedes do it. And wo vnto me, yff I preach not the Gospell. Yf I do it with a good wyll, I shal haue my rewarde: but yff I do it agaynst my wyll, yet is the office commytted vnto me. Wherefore thē shal I be rewarded? (Namely therfore) that I preach the Gospell, and do the same frely for naughte, that I abuse not my libertye in y Gospell. For though I am fre from all men, yet haue I made my selfe euery mans seruauant, y I mighte wyne y moo. ‡ Vnto the Iewes I am become as a Iewe, to wyne y Iewes. To them that are vnder the lawe, I am become as though I were vnder the lawe, to wyne them which are vnder the lawe.

D Vnto them that are without lawe, I am become as though I were without lawe (where as yet I am not without the lawe of God, but am in y lawe of Christ) to wyne thē that are without lawe. To the weake, am I become as weake, to wyne the weake. § I am become of all fashions vnto euery man, to saue some at y leest. But this I do for the Gospels sake, that I mighte be partaker therof.

Knowe ye not, that they which runne in a course, runne all, yet but one receaueth the rewarde? Runne ye so, that ye maye optayne. Euery one that proueth mastrey, absteyneth from all thinges, and they do it, that they maye optayne a corruptible crowne, but we to optayne an vncorruptible crowne. I therefore so runne, not as at an vncertayne thinge: So fighte I, not as one y beateth y ayre: but I tame my body, and brynge it in to subieccion, lest when I preach vn to other: I my selfe be a cast awaye.

were all vnder the cloude, and all passed thorow the see, ‡ were all baptised vnder Moses in the cloude and in the see, †† and dyd all eate of one spiritual meate, and † dyd all drynke of one spirituall drynke: but they dronke of the spirituall § rocke that folowed thē, which rocke was Christ. Neuertheles in many of them had God no delyte, ¶ for they were smytten downe in the wyldernes.

These are ensamples vnto vs, y we shulde not lust after euell thinges, as they lusted. Nether be ye worshippers off ymages, as were some of them. Acordinge as it is wryttē: ¶¶ The people sat downe to eate and drynke, and rose vp to playe. Nether let vs tempte Christ, ††† as some of them tempted him, and were destroyed of serpētes. Nether murmur ye, ††† as some of them murmured, and were destroyed thorow the destroyr.

All these thinges happened vnto thē for ensamples, but they are wryttē to warne vs, vpon whom the ende of y worlde is come. Therefore let him that thinketh he stoneth, take hede, lest he fall. There hath yet no tēptacion ouertaken you, but such as foloweth the nature of man. Neuertheles §§§ God is faithfull, ¶ which shal not suffre you to be tempted aboue youre strength, but shal in the myddes of y tēptacion make a waye to come out, that ye maye beare it. Wherefore my dearly beloued, fle from worshippinge of Idols. I speake vnto them which haue discreciō, iudge ye what I saye. that ye shulde be in the fellowshipe of deuels. Ye can not drynke of the cuppe of the LORDE and of the cuppe of the deuels. Ye can not be partakers of the LORDES table, and of the table of deuels. Or wyl we prouoke the LORDE? * I maye do all thinges, but all thinges are not profitable. I maye do all thinges, but all thinges edifye not. Let noman seke his awne profit, but let euery man seke anothers welth.

What soeuer is solde in the fleshmarket, that eate, and axe no question for conscience sake. † For the earth is the LORDES, and all y therein is. Yf eny of thē y beleue not, byd you to a feast, and yf ye be disposed to go, what soeuer is set before you, that eate, axinge no question for conscience sake.

But yf eny man saye vnto you: This is offred vnto Idols, thē eate not of it, for his sake that shewed it, and for hurtinge of conscience. (The earth is the LORDES and all that therein is.) Neuertheles I speake of: consciēce, not thine, but of y other. For why shulde my liberty be iudged of another mā's cōscience? § For yf I take my parte with thankesgeuyng, why am I euell spoken of, for y thinge wherefore I geue thanks?

¶ Therefore whether ye eate or drynke, or what so euer ye do, do all to y praye of God. Be not ye an occasion of fallinge, nether to the Iewes, ner to the Gentyles, ner to the congregacion of God, ¶ eue as I also please all men in all thinges, not sekinge myne awne profit, but the profit of many, that they mighte be saued.  Folowe ye me, as I do Christ.

The xi. Chapter.

I COMMENDE you brethren, that ye remembre me in all poyntes, and kepe the ordinances, eue as I deliuered them vnto you. But I certifye you, that Christ is the heade of euery man. †† As for y man, he is the heade of y woman, but God is Christes heade. Euery man that prayeth or prophecieth, and hath eny thinge on his heade, shameth his heade. But euery woman that prayeth or prophecieth with vncouered heade, dishonesteth hir heade. For it is euen a lyke moch as yf she were shauen. Yf the womā be not couered, let hir heer also be cut of. But yf it be vncomely for a woman to haue hir heer cut of or to be shauen, then let hir couer hir heade. Neuertheles the man oughte not to couer his heade, † for so moch as he is the ymage and glory of God: but the womā is the glory of the man. §§ For the man is not of the woman, but the woman of the man. Nether was the man created for the womans sake, but the womā for the mans sake.

Therefore ought the woman to haue a power vpon hir heade, for the angels sakes. Neuertheles nether is the man without y woman, nether the woman without the mā in the LORDE. For as the woman is of the man, euen so commeth the man also by the woman, but all of God. Iudge ye by youre selues, whether it be comly, y a womā praye before God bare headed? Or doth not nature teach you, y it is a shame for a man yf he weere lōge heer, ¶ a prayse to y womā, yf she weere lōge heer? For hir heer is geue heer to couer her withall. But yf there be eny man amōge you that hath lust to stryue, let him knowe, that we haue no such custome, nether the congregacions of God. But this must I warne you of: I commende it not, that ye come together not after a better maner but after a worse. First, whan ye come together in the congregacion, I heare, that there are discensions amōge you, and I partly beleue it. ¶ For there must be sectes amōge you, that they which are perfecte amōge you, mighte be knowne.

Now whan ye come together, the LORDES supper can not be kepte. For whan it shulde be kepte, euery mā taketh his awne supper afore. And one is hōgrie, another is dronke. Haue ye not houses to eate and drynke in? Or despyse ye y cōgregacion of God, and shame them that haue not? What shal I saye vnto you? Shal I praye you? In this prayse I you not. That which I deliuered vnto you, receaued I of the LORDE. ¶¶ For the LORDE Iesus the same nighte in the which he was betrayed, toke the bred, ¶ gaue thanks, and brake it, and sayde: Take ye, ¶ eate ye, this is my body, which is broken for you. whan supper was done, and sayde: This cuppe is the new Testament in my bloude, this do (as oft as ye drynke it) in the remembrance of me. For as oft as ye shal eate of this bred, & drynke of this cuppe, ye shal shewe the LORDES death, vntyll he come.

¶ Wherefore who soeuer shal eate off this bred, and drynke off this cuppe of the LORDE vnworthely, shalbe giltye of the body and bloude of the LORDE. * But let a man examen himselfe, and so let him eate of this bred, and drynke of this cuppe. For he that eateth and drynketh vnworthely, eateth & drynketh his awne damnacion, because he maketh no difference of the LORDES body. Therefore are there so many weake and sicke amonge you, and many slepe. † For yf we iudged oure selues, we shulde not be iudged. But whan we are iudged, we are chastened of ‡ LORDE, that we shulde not be dāned with the † worlde. Wherefore my brethren, whan ye come together to eate, tary one for another. But yf eny man hunger, let him eate at home, that ye come not together vnto cōdempnacion. As for other thinges, I wil set them in order whan I come.

The xij. Chapter.

¶ AS concernynge spirituall giftes (brethren) I wolde not that ye were ignoraunt. Ye knowe that ye were Heythē and wente youre wayes vnto dōme Idols, euē as ye were led. Wherefore I declare vnto you, § that no man speakyng thorow the sprete of God, defyeth Iesus. And no man can saye that Iesus is the LORDE, but by the holy goost.

¶ There are dyuerse giftes, yet but one sprete: and there are dyuerse offices, yet but one LORDE: and there are dyuerse operations ¶ yet is there but one God, which worketh all in all. The giftes of the sprete are geuen vnto euery man to profit the cōgregation. To one is geuen thorow the sprete the vtterance of wisedome: to another is geuen the vtterance of knowlege accordinge to the same sprete: to another, faith in the same sprete: to another, the giftes of healinge in the same sprete: to another, power to do miracles: to another, prophecience: to another, ¶ iudgment to discerne sprètes: to another, dyuerse tungen: to another, the interpretacion of tungen. These all doth § same onely sprete worke, and distributeth vnto euery man, accordinge as he will.

¶ For as the body is one, and hath yet many ¶ 13 membres, neuertheles all the membres of the body though they be many, are yet but one body: euen so Christ also. For we are all baptyesed in one sprete to be one body, whether we be Iewes or Gentyles, whether we be bonde or fre, and haue all ¶ * drunkē of one sprete. For the body also is not one membre, but many. Yf the fote saye: I am not § hande, therefore I am not a membre of the body, is he therefore not a membre of § body? And yf the eare saye: I am not the eye, therefore am I not a membre of the body, is he therefore not a membre of the body? Yf all the body were an eye, where were then the hearinge? Yf all were hearinge, where then the smellinge? But now hath God set the membres, euery one seuerally in the body, as it hath pleased him. Neuertheles yf all the mēbres were one membre, where were then the body? But now are the membres many, yet is the body but one.

¶ The eye can not saye vnto the hande: I ¶ C haue no nede of the: or agayne the heade vnto the fete, I haue no nede of you: but rather a greate deale the mēbres of the body which seme to be most feble, are most necessary: and vpon those membres of the body which we thinke least honest, put we most honestie on: and oure vncomly partes haue most beuty on. For oure honest membres neade it not. But God hath so measured § body, and geuen most honour vnto that mēbre which had nede, that there shulde be no stryfe in the body, but that the membres shulde indifferently care one for another. And yf one membre suffre, all the membres suffre with him: and yf one membre be had in honour, all the membres are glad with him also. But ye are the body of Christ, and membres, euery one of another.

¶ And God hath ordeyned in the congregation, first the † Apostles, secōdly prophetes, thirdly † teachers, then doers of miracles, after that the giftes of healinge, helpers, gouerners, dyuerse tungen. Are they all Apostles? Are they all prophetes? Are they all teachers? Are they all doers of miracles? Haue they all the giftes of healinge? Speake they all with tungen? Can they all interprete? But covet ye the best giftes. And yet shewe I you a more excellent waye.

The xiiij. Chapter.

THOUGH I spake with the tungen of men and angels, and yet had not loue, I were euen as sowndinge brasse, or as a tynklinge Cymball. *And though I coulde prophecy, & vnderstode all secretes, and all knowlege, and had all faith, so that I coulde moue mouëtaines out of their places, and yet had not loue, I were nothinge. And though I bestowed all my goodes to fede y poore, and though I gaue my body euen that I burned, and yet haue not loue, it profiteth me nothinge.

Loue is pacient & curteous, loue envyeth not, loue doth not frowardly, is not puffed vp, dealeth not dishonestly, seeketh not hir awne, is not prouoked vnto anger, thyneketh not euell, reioyseth not ouer iniquity, but reioyseth in the trueth, beareth all things, beleueth all things, hopeth all things, suffreth all things.

Though prophecienges fayle, or tungen cease, or knowlege perishe, yet loue falleth neuer awaye. For oure knowlege is vnperfecte, and oure prophecienge is vnperfecte. But whā that which is perfecte, commeth, then shal the vnperfecte be done awaye. When I was a childe, I spake as a childe, I vnderstode as a childe, I ymagined as a childe. But as soone as I was a man, I put awaye childishnes. Now we se thorow a glasse in a darke speakynge, but thē shal we se face to face. Now I knowe vnperfectly: but thē shal I knowe euē as I am knowne. Now abydeith faith, hope, loue, these thre: but the greatest of these is loue.

The xiiij. Chapter.

LABOURE for loue. Couet spirituall giftes, but specially that ye maye prophceye. For he y speaketh with tungen, speaketh not vnto men, but vnto God: for no man heareth him. Howbeit in y sprete he speaketh misteries. But he that prophceieth, speaketh vnto men to edifienge, & to exhortacion, and to cōfōrte. He that speaketh with tungen, edifieth himselfe: but he that prophceieth, edifieth the cōgregacion. I wolde that ye all spake with tungen, but rather that ye prophced. For greater is he that prophceieth, then he that speaketh with tuges: excepte he also expounde it, that the congregacion maye haue edifienge. But now brethren yf I come vnto you, and speake with tungen, what shal I profet you, excepte I speake vnto you ether by reuelacion or by knowlege, or by prophceienge, or by doctryne?

Likewyse is it also in y things that geue sounde, and yet lyue not: whether it be a pype or an harpe, excepte they geue distyncte soundes from them, how shal it be knowne what is pyped or harped? And yf the trōpe geue an vncertayne sounde, who wil prepare him selfe to the battayll? Euen so ye like wyse, when ye speake with tungen, excepte ye speake playne wordes, how shal it be knowne what is spokē? for ye shal but speake in y ayre. So many kyndes of voyces are in the worlde, and none of them is without significacion. Yf I knowe not now what y voyce meaneth, I shalbe an aleaunt vnto him that speaketh: & he that speaketh, shalbe an aleaunt vnto me. Euē so ye (for so much as ye couet spirituall giftes) seke y ye maye haue plentye to the edifienge of the congregacion. Wherefore let him that speaketh with tungen, praye, that he maye interprete also. Yf I praye with tungen, my sprete prayeth, but my vnderstōdinge bryngeth no man frute. How shal it be then? Namely thus: I wil praye with y sprete, and wil praye with the vnderstōdinge also: I wil synge psalmes in the sprete, and wil synge psalmes with y vnderstōdinge also.

But whan thou geuest thanks with y sprete, how shal he that occupieth the rowme of the vnlearned, saye Amē at thy geuynge of thanks, seyng he knoweth not what thou sayest? Thou geuest well thanks, but the other is not edified. I thanke my God, that I speake with tungen more then ye all. Yet had I leuer in the cōgregacion to speake fyue wordes with my vnderstōdinge y I maye enforme other also, rather then ten thousand wordes with tungen. y Brethren be not children in vnderstōdinge, howbeit as concerninge maliciousnes be childrē, but in vnderstōdinge be perfecte. In the lawe it is writen: With other tungen and with other lippes wyl I speake vnto this people, and yet shal they not so heare me, sayeth the LORDE. Therefore are tungen for a token, not to thē that beleue, but to them that beleue not. Contrary wyse, prophecienge, not to them that beleue not, but to them which beleue.

D Yf the whole cōgregacion now came together in to one place, & spake all with tungen, and there came in they that are vnlearned, or they which beleue not, shulde they not saye, that ye were out of youre wyttes? But yff all prophecied, and there came in one ⁊ beleueh not, or one vnlearned, he shulde be rebuked of them all, and iudged of all, and so shulde the secrete of his hert be opened, and so shulde he fall downe vpon his face, worshippinge God, and knowlegeing, that of a trueth God is in you. How is it then brethren? When ye come together, euery one hath a psalme, hath doctryne, hath a tunge, hath a reuelacion, hath an interpretacon. Let all be done to edifyenge. Yf eny mā speake with tungen, let him do it him selfe beyng the seconde, or at the most him selfe beyng ⁊ thirde, and one after another, and let one interpret it. But yf there be not an interpreter, then let him kepe sylence in the congregacion, howbeit let him speake to himselfe and to God. As for the prophetes, let two or thre speake * and let the other iudge. But yf eny reuelacion be made vnto another that sytteth, then let the first holde his peace.

E Ye maye all prophecye one after another that they all maye lerne, and that all maye haue comforte. And the spretes of the prophetes are subiecte vnto the prophetes. For God is not a God off discension, † but off peace, like as in all congregacions off the sayntes. ‡ Let youre wyues kepe sylence in the cōgregacion, for it shal not be permytted vnto the to speake, but to be vnder obedience, § as § lawe sayeth also. But yf they wyll lerne eny thinge, let them axe their huszbādes at home. For it becommeth not wemē to speake in the congregacion. Or spronge the wordes of God from amonge you? Or is it come vnto you onely? Yf eny man thynke himselfe to be a prophet, or spirituall, let him knowe what I wryte vnto you, for they are the commandementes of the LORDE. But yf eny man be ignoraunt, let him be ignoraunt. Wherefore brethren, couet to prophecye, and forbyd not to speake with tungen. Let all thinges be done honestly and in order.

The xvj. Chapter.

I DECLARE vnto you brethren, the Gospell that I haue preached vnto you (which ye haue also accepted, and in the which ye stōde, by the which also ye are sauēd) after what maner I preached it vnto you, yf ye haue kepte it, excepte ye haue beleued in vayne. For first of all I delyuered vnto you that which I also receaued, how that Christ dyed for oure synnes accordinge to the scriptures, and that he was buried, and that he rose agayne ⁊ thirde daye accordinge to the scriptures, and that he was sene of Cephas, then of the twolue: after that was he sene of mo then fyue hundreth brethren at once, wherof there are yet many alyue, but some are fallen aslepe. Afterwarde was he sene of Iames, then of all the Apostles. Last of all was he sene of me also, as of one borne out of due tyme. ¶ For I am ⁊ leest of the Apostles, which am not worthy to be called an Apostle, ¶ because I persecuted the congregacion of God. But by the grace of God I am that I am. And his grace in me hath not bene vayne, but I haue laboured more then they all: howbeit not I but the grace of God which is with me. Now whether it be I or they, thus haue we preached, and thus haue ye beleued.

But yf Christ be preached, that he is rysen from the deed, how saye then some amōge you, that there is no resurrection of the deed? Yf there be no resurreccō of the deed, then is Christ not rysen. Yf Christ be not rysen, then is oure preachinge in vayne, and youre faith is also in vayne: yee and we are founde false witnesses of God, because we haue testified agaynst God, that he hath raysed vp Christ, whom he hath not raysed vp, yf the deed ryse not agayne. For yf the deed ryse not agayne, the is Christ also not rysen agayne. But yf Christ be not rysen agayne, then is youre faith in vayne, and ye are yet in youre synnes: they also that are fallē a slepe in Christ, are perished. Yf in this life onely we hope on Christ, then are we of all men the most miserable.

But now is Christ rysen from the deed, and is become  ⁊ first frutes of them that slepe. For by one man commeth death, and by one man the resurrection of the deed. For as they all dye in Adam, so shal they all be made aluye in Christ, but euery one in his order. The first is Christ, then they that belöge vnto Christ, whan he commeth. Then the ende, whā he shal delyuer vp the kyngdome vnto God the father, whan he shal put downe all rule, and all superiorite, & power. * For he must raygne, tyll he haue put all his enemies vnder his fete. The last enemye that shal be destroyed, is death, for he hath put all thinges vnder his fete. But whā he sayeth, that all thinges are put vnder him, it is manifest that he is excepted, which put all thinges vnder him. Whan all thinges shalbe subdued vnto him, then shal the sonne himselfe also be subiecte vnto him, which put all thinges vnder him, that God maye be all in all.

Or els what do they which are baptised ouer ³² \hat{y} deed, yf the deed ryse not at all? Why are they then baptysed ouer the deed? And why stonde we in ioperdy euery houre? By oure reioysinge which I haue in Christ Iesu oure LORDE, I dye daylie. That I haue foughte with beestes at Ephesus after \hat{y} maner of men, what helpeth it me, yf the deed ryse not agayne? † Let vs eate and drynke, for tomorrow we shal dye. Be not ye disceaued. Euell speakinges corrupte good maners. Awake righte vp, and synne not: for some haue not \hat{y} knowlege of God. This I saye to youre shame.

But some man mighte saye: How shal the deed aryse? And with what maner off body shal they come? Thou foole, † \hat{y} which thou sowest is not quickened, excepte it dye. And what sowest thou? thou sowest not \hat{y} body that shalbe, but a bare corne, namely of wheate, or of some other. But God geueth it a body as he wil, and vnto euery one of \hat{y} sedes his owne body.

All fleszhe is not one maner of fleszhe, but ³³ there is one maner fleszhe of men, another of beastes, another of fiszhes, another of byrdes. And there are heauenly bodies, and there are earthy bodies: but the heauenly haue one glory, and \hat{y} earthy another. The Sonne hath one cleannes, the Moone hath another cleannes, and the starres haue another cleannes, for one starre excelleth another in cleannes: Euen so the resurrection of the deed. It is sowne in corrupcion, and shal ryse in vncorruption: It is sowne in dishonoure, & shal ryse in glory: It is sowne in weaknesse, and shal ryse in power: It is sowne a naturall body, & shal ryse a spirituall body.

Yf there be a naturall body, there is a spirituall body also. As it is wrytten: § The first man Adam was made in to a naturall life, and the last Adā in to a spiritual life. Howbeit the spirituall body is not the first, but \hat{y} naturall, and then the spirituall. The first man is of the earth, earthy: \hat{y} seconde mā is frō heauē, heauēly. As the earthy is, soch are they also that are earthy: and as \hat{y} heauenly is, soch are they also \hat{y} are heauenly. And as we haue borne the ymage of the earthy, so shal we beare the ymage of the heauenly also. This I saye brethren, that flesh & bloude can not inheret \hat{y} kyngdome of God: nether shal corrupcion inheret vncorruption.

Beholde, I saye vnto you a mystery: || We shal not all slepe, but we shal all ¶ be changed, and that sodenly and in the twinklynge of an eye, at the tyme of the last trompe. For the trompe shal blowe, and the deed shal ryse vncorruptible, and we shalbe changed. For this corruptible must put on vncorruption, and this mortall must put on immortalite. But whan this corruptible shal put on vncorruption, and this mortall shal put on immortalite, thē shal the worde be fulfilled that is wryttē: Death is swallowed vp in victory.  Death, where is thy stynge? Hell, where is thy victory? The stynge of death is synne: The strength of synne is the lawe. But thanks be vnto God,†† which hath geuē vs the victory thorow oure LORDE Iesus Christ. Therefore my deare brethrē, be ye stedfast, vnmoueable, & allwaye riche in the worke of the LORDE, for as moch as ye knowe, that youre labour is not in wayne in the LORDE.

The seconde Epistle of the Apostle S. Paul, to the Corinthians.

The first Chapter.

PAUL an Apostle of Iesu Christ, by the will of God, and brother Timotheus. Vnto the congregation of God which is at Corinthū, with all the sayntes which are ī all Achaia. * Grace be with you, and peace frō God oure father, and from the LORDE Iesus Christ.

Blessed be God the father of oure LORDE Iesus Christ, the father of mercy and † God of all comforte, which comforteth vs in all oure trouble: in so moch ‡ we are able to comforte them that are in eny maner of trouble, with the same comforte wherwith we oure selues are comforted of God. For as the afflictions of Christ are plenteous in vs, euen so is oure cōsolacion plenteous by Christ. But whether we haue trouble or comforte, it is done for youre welth. Yf it be trouble, it is done for youre cōforte and health, which health sheweth hir power, in that ye suffre the same afflictions which we suffre. Yf it be comforte, it is done also for youre comforte and health. Therefore is oure hope fast for you, in as moch as we knowe, that, like as ye are partakers of the afflictions, so shal ye be partakers also of the consolacion.

Brethren we wolde not haue you ignoraunt of oure trouble, † which happened vnto vs in Asia, for we were greued out off measure passunge strength, so that we euen dispared of life, and had concluded in oure selues ‡ we must nedes dye. But this was done, because we shulde not put oure trust in oure selues, but in God, which rayseth vp the deed to life agayne: which delyuered vs from so greate a death, and yet delyuereth daylie, On whom we trust, that he wil delyuer vs here after also, by the helpe of youre prayer for vs † that on oure behalfe many thanks maye be geuen by many personnes, for the gifte that is geuen vs.

For oure reioysinge is this, euen the testimony of oure conscience, that in synglenes † godly purenesse, not in fleshly wysdome, but in the grace of God, we haue had oure conuersacion in the worlde, but most of all with you. For we wryte nothings els vnto you, then that ye rede and also knowe. Yee † I trust that ye shal fynde vs vnto the ende, euen as ye haue founde vs partly.

For we are youre reioysinge, eue as ye also are oure † reioysinge in † daye of the LORDE Iesus. And in this confidence was I mynded the other tyme to come vnto you (that ye mighte haue yet another pleasure more) † to passe by you in to Macedonia, † to come againe out of Macedonia vnto you † to be led forth to Iewrye warde of you.

Whan I thus wyse was mynded, dyd I vse lightnesse? Or are my thoughtes fleshly? Not so † but with me yee is yee, and nay is naye. O faitfull God, that oure worde vnto you hath not bene yee and naye. For Gods sonne Iesus Christ, which was preached amonge you by vs (namely, by me and Siluanus and Timotheus) was not yee and naye, but in him it was yee. For all the promyses of God are yee in him, † are Amē in him, to the prayse of God by vs. But it is God which stablysheth vs with you in Christ, and hath anyoynted us, † and sealed us, and geuen the earnest of the sprete in oure hertes.

The ij. Chapter.

BUT I call God to recorde vnto my soule, that to fauoure you* withall I came not agayne vnto Corinthum. Not that we are * lordes ouer youre faith, but we are helpers of youre ioye, for ye stonde in faith. But I determyned this with my selfe, that I wolde not come agayne to you in heynes. For yf I make you sory, who is it that shal make me glad, but the same which is made sory by me? And the same haue I wyrtten vnto you, lest whā I come, I shulde take heynes of them, of whom I oughte to reioyse: for so-moch as I haue this confidence in you all, that my ioye is the ioye of you all. For in greate trouble and anguysch of hert wrote I vnto you with many teares: not yf ye shulde be sory, but that ye mighte perceaue the loue, which I haue most specially vnto you.

33 But yf eny man haue caused sorowe, the same hath not made me sory, but partely, lest I shulde greue you all. It is sufficient, that the same man is so rebuked of many, so that from hence forth ye oughte the more to forgeue him and to comforte him, lest he be swalowed vp in ouer much heynes. Wherefore I exhorte you, that ye shewe loue vpō him. For therfore dyd I wryte vnto you also, that I mighte knowe the pofe of you, whether ye were obediēt in all thinges. But loke vnto whō ye forgeue eny thinge, I forgeue hī also. For I also, yf I forgeue ought vnto eny mā, that forgeue I for youre sakes in the rowme of Christ, lest we shulde be preuented of Sathan. For his thoughtes are not vnkowne vnto vs.

C But whā I came to Troada to preach yf Gospell of Christ (and a dore was opened vnto me in yf LORDE) I had no rest in my sprete, because I founde not Titus my brother: but I toke my leue of them, and wente awaye in to Macedonia. Yet thanks be vnto God, which allwaye geueth vs the victory in Christ,§ and openeth yf sauoure of his knowlege by vs in euery place. For we are vnto God the good sauoure of Christ, both amonge thē yf are saued, ¶ amonge them yf perishe.¶ To these, yf sauoure of death vnto death: but vnto yf other, the sauoure of life vnto life. And who is mete therto? For we are not as many are, which choppe ¶ chaunge with the worde of God, but euē out of purenesse, and out of God, in yf sighte of God, so speake we in Christ.

BEYNNYE we then agayne to prayse oure selues? Or nede we (as some other) of pistles of commēdacion vnto you or letters of commēdacion from you? Ye are oure epistle wyrtten in oure hertes: which is vnderstonde and red of all mē, in that ye are knowne, how that ye are yf epistle of Christ, mynistrēd by vs, and wryttē, not with ynke, but with the sprete of the lyuyng God: ¶ not in tables of stone, but in fleshy tables of the hert. Soch trust haue we thorow Christ to God warde, not that we are sufficient of oure selues to thynke eny thinge, as of oure selues,†† but oure ablenesse commeth of God, which hath made vs able, to be ‡ mynisters of the new Testament: not of the letter, but of the sprete. For the letter killeth, but the sprete geueth life.

33 But yf the mynistracion yf killeth thorow the letter, and was figured in stones, was glorious,§§ so that the childrē of Israel mighte not beholde the face of Moses, for yf clearnesse of his countenaunce, (which glory neuertheles is done awaye) how shal not yf mynistracion of yf sprete be moch more glorious? For yf the office that preacheth damnacion be glorious, moch more doth the office that preacheth righteousnes excede in glory. For yf other parte that was glorified is nothinge glorified in respecte of this excedinge glory. For yf that which is done awaye, be glorious, moch more shal yf which remaineth, be glorious.

C Seynge then that we haue soch trust, we vse greate boldnesse, and do not as Moses,|| which put a vayne before his face, so that yf children of Israel mighte not se the ¶¶ ende of it, that is done awaye. But their myndes are blynded.  For vnto this daye remaineth the same coueringe vntakē awaye in the olde Testament, when they rede it, which in Christ is put awaye. But euen vnto this daye when moyses is red, the vayne hangeth before their hertes: ††† Neuertheles whā they turne to the LORDE, the vayne shalbe taken awaye. ††† For the LORDE is a sprete: ¶ where the sprete of the LORDE is, there is libertye. But now the glory of ꝑ LORDE appeareth in vs all with open face, and we are chaunged in to the same ymage, from one cleannes to another, euē as of the sprete of the LORDE.

The iiii. Chapter.

THEREFORE seynge we haue soch an office (euen as mercy is come vpon vs) we faynte not, but cast from vs the clokes of vnhonestye, and walke not in craftines: nether corruppe we the worde of God but open the trueth, and reporte oure selues to euery mans conscience in the sighte of God.

Yf oure Gospell be yet hyd, it is hyd in them that are lost: amonge whom the God of this worlde * hath blynded ꝑ myndes of them which beleue not, that ꝑ lighte of the Gospell of the glory of Christ († which is the ymage of God) shulde not shyne vnto them. For we preach not oure selues, but Iesus Christ to be the LORDE, and oure selues youre seruantes for Iesus sake.

3 For God ‡ that cōmanded the light to shyne out of darknesse, § hath geuen a cleare shyne in oure hertes, ꝑ by vs ꝑ light of ꝑ knowlege of the glory of God mighte come forth, in the face of Iesus Christ.

But this treasure haue we in ¶ earthen vessels, that ꝑ power which excelleth might be of God, and not of vs. We are troubled on euery syde, yet are we not without shift. We are in pouertie, but not vtterly without somewhat. We are persecuted, but we are not forsaken. We are oppressed, neuertheles we perish not. ¶ We allwayes beare aboute in oure body the dyenge of the LORDE Iesus ꝑ the life also of the LORDE Iesus might appeare in oure body.  For we which lyue, are alwayes deliuered vnto death for Iesus sake, that the life also of Iesus might appeare in oure mortall flesh.

C Therefore is death now mightie in vs, but life in you. But seynge that we haue the same sprete of faith (acordinge as it is wrytten: †† I beleued, and therefore haue I spokē.) we also beleue, ¶ therefore we speake, for we knowe that he, which raysed vp ꝑ LORDE Iesus, shal rayse vs vp also by ꝑ meanes of Iesus, and shal set vs with you. For all thinges do I for youre sakes, †† that the plēteous grace by the thākesgeuyng of many, maye redounde to the prayse of God. Therefore are we not weery, but though oure outwarde man be corrupte, yet the inwarde is renewed daye by daye. §§ For oure trouble, which is but temporall and lighte, worketh an exceedinge and an eternall weigthe of glorye vnto vs, which loke not on the thinges that are sene, but on them which are not sene. For ꝑ thinges which are sene, are temporall: but the thinges that are not sene, are eternall.

The v. Chapter.

WE knowe surely, ꝑ yf oure ¶ earthy ¶ house of this dwellynge were destroyed, we haue a buyldynge ordeyned of God, an house not made with handes, but euerlastynge in heauen. ¶¶ And in the same sighe we also after oure māson, which is from heauen: and longe to be clothed therwith, so yet,  yf that we be founde clothed, and not naked. For as longe as we are in this tabernacle, we sighe and are greued, for we had rather not be vnclodhed, but to be clothed vpon, that mortalite might be swallowed vp of life. But he that hath ordeyned vs for this, is God, †† which hath geuen vs the earnest of the sprete. Therefore are we allwaye of good cheare, and knowe, that as longe as we dwell here in the body, we are not at home with the LORDE: for we walke in faith, and se him not. Neuertheles we are of good comforte, and had leuer to be absent from the body, ¶ to be at home with the LORDE.

Wherefore, whether we be at home or frō 3 home, we endeuoure oure selues to please him. †† For we must all appeare before the iudgment seate of Christ, ꝑ euery one maye receaue in his body, acordinge to ꝑ he hath done, whether it be good or bad. Seynge then that we knowe, how that the LORDE is to be feared, we fare fayre with men, but we are knowne well ynough vnto God: I trust also, that we are knowne in youre consciences. We prayse not oure selues agayne vnto you, but geue you an occasion to reioyse of vs, ꝑ ye maye haue to reioyse agaynst them, which reioyse after the outwarde appearance, and not after the hert. For yf we do to moch, we do it vnto God: yf we kepe measure, we do it for youre sakes. For the loue of Christ constraineth vs, in as moch as we thus iudge, that yf one be deed for all, then are all deed. *And therefore dyed he for all, that they which lyue, shulde not hence forth lyue vnto them selues, but vnto him, which dyed for them and rose agayne.

¶ Therefore hence forth knowe we noman after \bar{y} flesh: and though we haue knowne Christ also after the flesh, yet knowe we him now so nomore. Therefore yf eny man be in Christ, he is a new creature. Olde thinges are past awaye, + beholde, all are become new. Neuertheles all thinges are off God, which hath reconcyed vs vnto himselfe by Iesus Christ, and hath geuen vs the office to preach the attonement. + For God was in Christ, and \bar{s} reconcyed the worlde vnto himselfe, and counted not ther synnes vnto them, and amonge vs hath he set vp the worde of \bar{y} attonemēt. Now thē are we messaungers in the rowme of Christ, euen as though God exhorted by vs. We beseke you now therfore in Christes steade, that ye be at one with God: || for he hath made him which knewe no synne, to be \bar{s} synne for vs, \bar{y} we by his meanes shulde be that righteousnes, which before God is alowed.

The vi. Chapter.

¶ WE as helpers therfore exhorte you, that ye receaue not \bar{y} grace of God in wayne. For he sayeth:  I haue herde the in the tyme accepted, and in the daye of saluacion haue I succoured the. Beholde, now is the accepted tyme, now is the daye of saluacion. Let vs geue no man occasion of euell, that oure office be not euell spoken of: but in all thinges let vs behaue oure selues as the \bar{m} ynisters of God: in moch pacience, in troubles, in necessities, in anguysshes, in strypes, in presonmentes, in vproures, in laboures, in watchinges, in fastynges, in purenesse, in knowlege, in longe sufferynge, in kyndnesse, in the holy goost, in loue vnfayned, in the worde of the trueth, in the power of God, by the armour of righteousnes on the rightehande and on the lefte, by honoure and dishonoure, by euell reporte and good reporte: as disceauers, \bar{q} yet true: as vnkowne, and yet knowne: + as dyenge, and beholde, we lyue: as chastened, and not kylled: as sorowynge, and yet allwaye mery: as poore, \bar{q} yet make many riche: as hauynge nothinge, \bar{q} yet possessynge all thinges.

O ye Corinthians, oure mouth is open vnto you, oure hert is made large. Ye are in no straytnesse on oure behalfe: but where as ye are in straytnesse, that do ye of youre owne hertely meanyng. I speake to you, as to childre, that haue like rewarde with vs. Set youre selues therfore at large.

¶ Beare not a straunge yock with the vnbeleuers. For what fellowship hath righteousness with vnrighteousnes? What company hath lighte with darknesse? || How agreeth Christ with Belial? Or what parte hath the beleuer with the infydele? How acordeth \bar{y} tēple of God with ymages? Ye are the temple of the lyuynge God, as sayeth God: I wyl dwell in them, and walke in them, \bar{q} and wyl be their God, \bar{q} they shalbe my people. Wherefore come out from amōge them, and separate youre selues \bar{q} (sayeth the LORDE) and touche no vnclene thinge, so wyl I receaue you, \bar{q} be youre father, \bar{q} ye shalbe my sonnes and daughters, sayeth \bar{y} Almightye LORDE.

SEYNge now that we haue such promyses (dearly beloued) let vs clense oure selues from all fylthynges of the flesh and sprete, and growe vp to full holynes in \bar{y} feare of God. Vnderstōde vs righte. We haue hurte no mā, we haue corrupte no man, we haue defrauded no man. I speake not this to cōdemne you, for I haue shewed you before, that ye are in oure hertes, to dye and to lyue with you. I am very bolde towarde you, I make moch boost of you, I am fylled with comforte, I am exceadyng ioyous in all oure tribulacion.  For whan we were come in to Macedonia, oure flesh had no rest, but we were troubled on euery syde: outwarde was fightinge, inwarde was feare. B Not onely by his comynge, but also by the cōsolacion wherwith he was cōforted of you, whan he tolde vs youre desyre, youre wepyng, youre feruēt mynde for me, so y I now reioyse y more. For where as I made you sory by the letter, it repenteth me not, though I dyd repēte. For I se, that the same epistle made you sory (though it were but for a ceason). But now I reioyce, not that ye were sory, but that ye were sory to repentance. For ye sorowed godly, so that in nothinge ye were hurte by vs. For godly sorowe causeth repentance vnto saluacion, not to be repented of: *but worldly sorowe causeth death. Beholde, where as ye haue had godly sorowe, what diligence hath it wrought in you? Yee a sufficiet answer, displeasure, feare, desyre, a feruēt mynde, punyshment. For in all poyntes ye haue shewed youre selues, that ye are cleare in that matter.

C Wherefore though I wrote vnto you, yet is it not done for his cause that dyd hurte, nether for his cause that was hurte, but that youre diligence (which ye haue for vs in the sighte of God) mighte be manifest with you. Therefore are we comforted, because ye are comforted: but exceedingly the more ioyed we, for the ioye of Titus, because his sprete was refreshed of you all. I am therfore not now ashamed, though I boasted my selfe vnto him of you: but like as all is true that I haue spokē vnto you, euen so is oure boasting vnto Titus founde true also. And his inwarde affection is more abundaunt towarde you, whan he remembreth the obedience of you all, how ye receaued him with feare and trēblyng. I reioyse, that I maye be bolde ouer you in all thinges.

The viij. Chapter.

A I DO you to wit (brethren) the grace of God, which is geuē in the congregacions of Macedonia. For their reioysing was most abundaunt, whan they were tryed by moch trouble: & though they were exceadinge poore, yet haue they geuē exceadinge richely, and that in synghenesse. For to their power (I beare recorde) yee and beyonde their power, they were wyllinge of their awne acorde, and prayed vs with greate instaūce, that we wolde receaue their benefite and fellowshipe of the † hādreachinge that is done for the sayntes: And not as we loked for, but gaue ouer them selues first to the LORDE, and afterwarde vnto vs by y wyl of God, so that we coule not but desyre Titus, that like as he had begonne afore he wolde euen so accomplish the same beniuolence amonge you. Now as ye are riche in all poyntes, in faith and in worde, and in knowlege, and in all diligence, and in youre loue toward vs, euen so se that ye be plenteous also in this benyuolēce. This I saye not as commaūdyng, but seynge, other are so diligent, I proue youre loue also, whether it be perfecte or no. For ye knowe the liberalite of oure LORDE Iesus Christ, which though he be riche, yet for youre sakes he became poore, y ye thorow his pouerte mighte be made riche.

And my counsell herin I geue, for this is profitable for you, which haue begonne a yeaere ago, not onely to do, but also to wyll. But now performe the dede also, that like as there is a ready mynde to wil, there maye be a ready mynde also to performe the dede † of that which ye haue. § For yf there be a wyllinge mynde, it is accepted according to that a man hath, not according to that he hath not. This is not done to the intent, that other shulde haue ease, and ye cōbraunce, but that it be a lyke. Let youre abundaunce sucker their lacke in this tyme off derth, that their abundaunce also hereafter maye supplee youre lacke, that there maye be equalite. As it is wrytten: "He y gathered moch, had not the more: and he that gathered little, wanted nothinge. Thākes be vnto God, which put in the hert of Titus, the same diligence towarde you. For he accepted the request in dede, yee he was rather so well wyllinge, that of his awne acorde, he came vnto you.

C We haue sent with him that brother, whose prayse is in the Gospell thorow out all the congregacions. Not onely that, but he is chosen also of the congregacions, to be a felowe with vs in oure journey, for this benyuolence that is mynistrēd by vs vnto the prayse of the LORDE, and to stere vp youre prompte mynde, and to bewarre, lest eny mā reporte euell of vs because of this plenteousnes, which is mynistrēd by vs: ¶ and therefore make

We haue sent with them also a brother of oures, whom we haue oft proued diligēt in many thinges, but now moch more diligent. And this haue we done in greate hope towarde you, whether it be for Titus sake (which is my felowe and helper amonge you) or for oure brethrē (which are Apostles of the cōgregacions, & the prayse of Christ.) Shewe now the profite off youre loue and off oure boastinge of you, vnto these, and opely in the sighte of the cōgregacions.

The ij. Chapter.

A OF the *handreachinge vnto y^e sayntes, it is no nede for me to wryte vnto you: for I knowe youre redynesse of mynde, wherof I boast my selfe amonge them of Macedonia, and saye: Achaia was ready a yeaere agoo. And youre feruentnesse hath prouoked many. Neuertheles yet haue we sent these brethren, lest oure reioysinge ouer you shulde be in vayne in this behalfe, that ye mighte be ready, as I haue reported of you: lest whan they of Macedonia come with me, and fynde you vnprepared, we (I wyl not saye ye) shulde be ashamed in this presumption of boastinge.

B Wherfore I thoughte it necessary to exhorte the brethren, to come before hande vnto you, for to prepare this blessinge promysed afore, that it mighte be ready, so that it be a blessinge, and not a defraudyng. This I thinke: that t^he which soweth litle, shal reape litle also: and he y^e soweth plenteously, shal likewise reape plenteously, euery one acordynge as he hath purposed in his hert, not grudgingly, or of compulsion. † For God loueth a chearfull geuer. God is able to make you riche in all grace, y^e ye in all thinges hauynge sufficiēt to the vttemost, maye be riche to all maner of good workes. As it is wryttē: "He hath, sparsed abroad & geuē to y^e poore, his righteousnes remaineth for euer.

C He that geueth sede vnto the sower, shal mynistrē bred also for fode, and shal multiplye youre sede, and increase the frutes of youre righteousness, that in all thinges ye maye be made riche vnto all singlenesse, which causeth thorow vs, thankesgeuynge vnto God. For the hādreachinge of this colleeccion not onely suppleeth the nede off the sayntes, but also is abudaunt herin, that for this laudable mynistracion many mighte geue thākes vnto God, and prayse God for youre obedient professynge of the Gospell of Christ, & for youre singlenesse in distributyng vnto thē, and to all men, and in their prayer for you, which longe after you, for the abudaunt grace of God in you. Thankes be vnto God for his vnoutspeakeable gifte.

The i. Chapter.

I PAUL my selfe beseke you by the mekenesse and softnesse off Christ, which when I am present amonge you, am of small reputacion, but am bolde towarde you beyng absent. I beseke you that I nede not be bolde whan I am present, & to vse y^e boldnesse wherwith I am supposed to be bolde, agaynst some, which repute vs as though we walked after y^e flesh: for though we walke in the flesh, yet fighte we not after a fleshly maner. For the y^e wapens of oure warre are not fleshly, but mightie before God to cast downe strōge holdes, wherwith we ouerthrowe ymaginacions, & euery hye thinge y^e exalteth it selfe agaynst the knowlege of God, and bryng in to captiuyte all vnderstandinge to the obedience of Christ, & are ready to take vengeance on all disobedience, whan youre obediēce is fulfilled. Loke ye on thinges after y^e vtter apperaūce?

B Yf eny man trust of himselfe y^e he is Christes, let him thinke this also by himselfe, y^e like as he is Christes, euē so are we Christes also. And though I shulde boast my selfe somewhat more of oure auctorite † which y^e LORDE hath geuē vs to edifye and not to destroye, it shulde not be to my shame. This I saye, lest I shulde seme, as though I wente aboute to make you afraied with letters. For the pistles (saye they) are sore and stronge, but his bodely presence is weake, and his speache rude. Let him y^e is soche, thinke on this wyse, that as we are in worde by letters whā we are absente, soch are we also in dede whan we are present. For we darre not reken or compare oure selues, vnto some that prayse them selues by them selues, and holde onely of them selues, they vnderstonde nothinge.

For we stretche not oure selues to farre as though we had not reached vnto you. For euen vnto you haue we come with the Gospell of Christ, and boast not oure selues out of measure in other mens laboures: Yee and we hope whan youre faith is increased in you, that we wil come farther (accordinge to oure measure) and preach the Gospell vnto them that dwell beyonde you, and not to reioyce in that, which is prepared with another mans measure.

The xi. Chapter.

A LET him that reioyseth, reioyce in the LORDE: for "he \hat{y} *prayseth" him selfe, is not allowed, but he who \hat{y} LORDE prayseth. Wolde God ye coulde suffre me a litle in my foloshnes, yet do ye forbear me. For I am gelous ouer you with godly gelousy. For I haue married you vnto one mā, to brynge a chaste virgin vnto Christ. But I feare, lest \dagger as \hat{y} serpēt begyled Eue with his sutteltie, euē so youre wyttes shulde be corrupted from the synglenesse that is in Christ. For yf he that cometh vnto you, preach another Iesus, whom we haue not preached, or yf ye receaue another sprete, \hat{y} ye haue not receaued, or another Gospell which ye haue not accepted, ye might right well haue bene cōtent. For I suppose that I am no lesse thē the hye Apostles are. And though I be rude in speakynge, yet am I not rude in knowlege. Howbeit amōge you I am knowne to the vtmost. Or dyd I synne therein because I submytted my selfe, that ye mighte be exalted?

33 For I preached vnto you the Gospell of God \dagger frely, and robbed other cōgregacions, and toke wages of thē, to preach vnto you. \S And whan I was present with you, and had nede, I was greuous to no man: \parallel for \hat{y} which was lackynge vnto me, the brethren which came fro Macedonia, supplied. And in all thinges I kepte my selfe so, \hat{y} I shulde not be greuous to you, $&$ so wyl I kepe my selfe. As surely as the trueth of Christ is in me, this reioysing shal not be taken fro me in the regions of Achaia. Wherefor? 'Because I shulde not loue you? God knoweth. Neuertheles what I do and wyl do, that do I to cut awaye occasion, from thē which seke occasion, that they mighte boast thē selues to be like vnto vs. For soch false Apostles $&$ disceatfull workers fashion them selues like vnto the Apostles of Christ. And that is no maruell: for Sathan him selfe is chaunged in to \hat{y} fashion of an angell of light. Therefore is it no greate thinge, though his mynisters fashion them selues as though they were the preachers of righteousnes, \P whose ende shalbe accordinge to their dedes.

I saye agayne, lest eny man thinke that I am folish: or els take me euen now as a fole, \hat{y} I maye boast my selfe a litle also. That I speake now, that speake I not after the LORDE, but as it were in folishnes, whyle we are now come to boasting: Seynge that many boaste them selues after \hat{y} flesh, I wil boast my selfe also. For ye suffre foles gladly, in so much as ye youre selues are wyse. For ye suffre euen yf a man brynge you in to bondage, yf a man put you to dishonesty, yf a man take ought fro you, yf a man exalte him selfe ouer you, yf a man smyte you on the face. I speake concernynge rebuke, as though we were weake.

Wherin so euer now eny man darre be bolde (I speake folishly) therein darre I be bolde also. They are Hebrues, so am I. They are Israelites, euen so am I. They are the sede of Abraham, so am I. They are the mynisters of Christ (I speake as a fole) I am more: in laboures more abūdaunt, in strypes aboute measure, in presonmentes more plentifully, in death oft. $\ast\ast$ Of the Iewes receaued I fyue tymes fortye strypes, one lesse. $\dagger\dagger$ Thyryse was I beaten with roddes. $\dagger\dagger$ I was once stoned, $\S\S$ I suffred thyryse shypwracke: nighte and daye haue I bene in the depe of the see: I haue oft iourneyed: I haue bene oft in paretls of waters, in paretls amonge murthurers, in paretls amonge the Iewes, in paretls amonge the Heythen, in paretls in cities, in paretls in the wylderners, in paretls vpon the See, in paretls amonge false brethre, in laboure $\&$ trauayle, in moch watchinges, in honger and thyrst, in moch fastinges in colde and nakednesse: Besyde those thynges which are out-

The xij. Chapter.

AT profiteth me nothinge (no doute) to boaste. Neuertheles I wil come to ⁊ visions and reuelacions off the LORDE. I knowe a man in Christ aboute fourtene yeaes ago (whether he was in ⁊ body, I can not tell: or whether he was out of the body, I can not tell, God knoweth.) the same was taken vp in to the thirde heauen: and I knowe the same man (whether he was in ⁊ body or out of the body, I can not tell, God knoweth) how that he was takē vp in to Paradise, and herde wordes not to be spoken, which no man can vtter. Here of will I boast, but of my selfe wil I make no boast, excepte it be of myne infirmities. And though I wolde boast my selfe, I dyd not foolishly, for I wolde saye the trueth. But I refrayne my selfe, lest eny mā shulde thinke of me aboute ⁊ he seyth in me, or heareth of me. † And lest I shulde exalte my selfe out of measure because of the hye reuelacions, there is a warnyng geuen vnto my flesh, euen ⁊ messaunger of Satan, to buffet me, that I shulde not exalte my selfe out off measure: for ⁊ which I besoughte the LORDE thryse, that it mighte departe fro me. And he sayde vnto me: My grace is sufficient for the. For my strength is made perfecte thorow weaknes. Very glad therefore wil I reioyse in my weaknes, that the strength of Christ maye dwell in me.

B Therefore am I contente in infirmities, in rebukes, in necessities, in persecucions, in anguysches for Christes sake: for whā I am weake, thē am I strōge. I am become a fole i boasteinge my selfe: Ye haue cōpelled me. For I oughte to be cōmended of you, § in so moch as I am in nothinge inferior to ⁊ hye Apostles. Though I be nothinge, yet are ⁊ tokens of an Apostle wrought among you, with all paciēce, with signes, ⁊ with woders ⁊ with mightie dedes. For what is it, wherein ye are inferiours to the other cōgregacions? excepte it be ⁊ I haue not bene greuous vnto you. Forgeue me this wrōge. Beholde, I am ready the thirde tyme to come vnto you, and wyl not be chargeable vnto you. ¶ For I seke not youres, but you. For ⁊ childrē ought not to gather treasure for the elders, but the elders for the children. I wil very gladly bestowe, and wyl be bestowed for youre soules: though ⁊ more I loue you, the lesse am I loued agayne.

But let it be so that I greued you not, neuertheles for so moch as I was craftye, I toke you with gyle. Haue I defrauded you by eny of thē, whō I sent vnto you? I desyred Titus, ⁊ with him I sent a brother: dyd Titus defraude you? Haue we not walked in one sprete? Wēte we not in like fotesteppes? Agayne, thynke ye ⁊ we excuse oure selues? We speake in Christ in the sighte off God. But all this (dearly beloued) is done for youre edifyenge. For I feare, lest whan I come, I shal not fynde you soch as I wolde: and lest ye shal fynde me soch as ye wolde not: lest there be amonge you, debates, envynges, wrathes, stryuynges, bacbytinges, whysperinges, swellinges, vproures: lest whan I come agayne, God bringe me lowe amonge you ⁊ lest I be constrainyd to bewaile many of thē ⁊ haue synned before, ⁊ haue not repented ouer ⁊ vnclennesse and whordome, and wantonnes, which they haue cōmytted.

The Epistle of the Apostle S. Paul to the Galathians.

Chap. I.

Paul rebuketh them, because they were fallen awaye from the gospell, sheweth his awne couersion, magnifieth his office and apostelshippe, and declareth himself to be equall with the hye apostles.

Chap. II.

He withstondeth Peter in the face, and proueth, that the lawe and circumcision are not necessary to saluacion.

Chap. III.

He rebuketh the vnstedfastnesse of the Galathians, shewinge the vnperfectnesse of the lawe, and declareth neuertheless that it was not geuen for naught.

Chap. IIIII.

Paul sheweth that thorow Christ we be deliyuered from the lawe, and rebuketh the vnthankfulnesse of the Galathians.

Chap. V.

He laboureth to drawe them awaye from circūcision, sheweth them the battayll betwixte the sprete and the flesh, and the frutes of them both.

Chap. VI.

He exorteth them to brotherly loue, and one to beare with another. In the ende he warneth them to bewarre of circūcision.

The Epistle

of the Apostle S. Paul to the Galathians.

The first Chapter.

A PAUL an Apostle (not of men, nor by mā, but by Iesus Christ & by God the father, which rayseed him vp frō ſ̄ deed) & all the brethrē which are with me. Vnto the cōgregaciōs in Galacia. * Grace be with you, and peace frō God the father, and oure LORDE Iesus Christ, which gaue him selfe for oure synnes, that he mighte delyuer vs from this present euel worlde, accordinge to the wyll of God oure father, to whom be prayse for euer and euer. Amen.

I maruell ſ̄ ye are so soone turned (from him that called you in the grace of Christ) vnto another Gospell: which is nothinge els, but that there be some, which trouble you, and intende to peruerthe the Gospell of Christ.

B Neuertheles though we oure selues, or an angell from heauē preach vnto you eny other Gospell, thē ſ̄ which we haue preached vnto you, the same be acursed. As we haue sayde afore, so saye we now agayne: Yf eny mā preach vnto you eny other thinge, thē ſ̄ ye haue receaued, ſ̄ same be acursed. Preach I men now or God? Or go I aboute to please men? Yf I shulde yet please men, I were not the seruauant of Christ.

But I certifie you brethren, ſ̄ the Gospell which is preached of me, is not of men. For I nether receaued it ner lerned it of mā, but by the reuelacion of Iesus Christ. For ye haue herde of my conuersacion afore tyme in the Ieweshippe, ſ̄ how that beyōde measure I persecuted the cōgregacion of God, and spoyled it, and preuayled in the Ieweshippe aboute many of my companions in my nacion,

C But whan it pleased God which separated me fro my mothers wombe, and called me by his grace, for to declare his sonne in me, that I shulde preach him thorow the Gospell amonge the Heythen, immediatly I commened not of the matter with flesh and bloude: nether came I to Ierusalem vnto them which were Apostles before me: but wente my wayes in to Arabia, and came agayne to Damascon. Then after thre yere I came to Ierusalē to se Peter, and abode with him fyfene dayes. As for the other Apostles, I sawe none of them, saue Iames the LORDES brother.

The thinges that I wryte vnto you, beholde, ſ̄ God knoweth, I lye not. After that wente I in to the coastes of Syria and Celicia: but of face I was vnknowne to ſ̄ Christen congregacions in Iewrye. Neuertheles they had herde onely, that: He that persecuted vs in tyme passed, preacheth now ſ̄ faith which some tyme he destroyed: and they prayed God in me.

The ij. Chapter.

THEN after fourtene yeaes, A I wente vp agayne to Ierusalē with Barnabas, and toke Titus with me also. But I wente vp by reuelacion, and commened with thē of ſ̄ Gospell, which I preach amonge the Heythē: but specially with thē which were in reputacion, lest I shulde runne or had runne in vayne. ¶ But Titus which was also with me, was not compelled to be circūcysed, though he was a Greke: and that because of certayne incommers beyng false brethē, which came in amōge other, to spye out oure libertye, which we haue in Christ Iesus, that they might brynge vs in to bondage: To whom we gaue no rowme, no not for the space of an houre, as concerninge to be broughte in to subieccion: ŷ the trueth of the Gospell mighte contynue with you.

As for thē that semed to be greate, what they were in tyme passed, it maketh no matter to me. * For God loketh not on the outward appearance of men. Neuertheles they which semed greate, taught me nothinge: but contrary wyse, whan they sawe that the Gospell ouer the vncircumcision was comytted vnto me, as ŷ Gospell ouer ŷ circumcision was comytted vnto Peter. (For he ŷ was mightie B with Peter to the Apostleshippe ouer the circumcision, the same was mightie with me also amōge the Heythen) they perceaued the grace that was geuen vnto me.

Iames and Cephas and Iohn, which semed to be pilers, gaue me and Barnabas ŷ righte handes, and agreed with vs, that we shulde preach amōge the Heythē, and they amōge the Iewes: onely that we shulde remēbre the poore, i which thinge also I was diligent to do.

But whā Peter was come to Antioche, I withstode him in ŷ face: for he was worthy to be blamed. For afore there came certayne from Iames, he ate with the Heythē. But whā they were come, he withdrew and separated himselfe, fearinge thē which were of the circumcision. And the other Iewes dyssembled with him likewise, in so moch ŷ Barnabas was brought in to their symulacion also. But whan I sawe that they walked not right after ŷ trueth of the Gospell, I sayde vnto Peter openly before all: Yf thou beyng a Iewe, lyuest after the maner of the Gentyles, and not as do the Iewes, why causeth thou the Gentyles then to lyue as do the Iewes?

C ¶ Though we be Iewes by nature, and not synners of the Gentyles, yet (in so moch as we knowe, that a man is not made righteous by the dedes off the lawe, but by the faith on Iesus Christ) we haue beleued also on Iesus Christ, ŷ we might be made righteous by the faith of Christ, and not by the dedes of the lawe, because that by the dedes of the lawe no flesh shal be iustified.

Yf we then which seke to be made righteous by christ, shulde be yet founde synners oure selues, is not Christ then the mynister of synne? God forbyd. For yf I buylde agayne ŷ which I haue destroyed, then make I my selfe a trespasser. But I thorow the lawe am deed vnto the lawe, that I might lyue vnto God. I am crucified with Christ, yet do I lyue: neuerthelesse now not I, but Christ lyueth in me. For ŷ life which I now lyue in ŷ fleszhe, I lyue in the faith of ŷ sonne of God ŷ which loued me, and gaue himselfe for me. I cast not awaye the grace of God. For yf righteousnes come by the lawe, then dyed Christ in vayne.

The iij. Chapter.

O YE folishe Galathiā, who hath bewitched you, that ye shulde not beleue the trueth? To whō Iesus Christ was describēd before the eyes and amōge you crucified. This onely wolde I lerne of you: Receaued ye the sprete by the dedes of the lawe, or by the preachinge of the faith? Are ye so vnwyse? Ye beganne in the sprete, wolde ye ende now thē in the flesh? Haue ye suffred so moch in vayne? Yf it be els in vayne. He that geueth you the sprete, and doth soch greate actes amōge you, doth he it thorow the dedes of the lawe, or by ŷ preachinge of the faith? ¶ Euen as Abrahā beleued God, and it was counted vnto him for righteousness. Thus ye knowe, that they which are of faith, are Abrahams children.

The scripture sawe afore hāde, that God iustificth the Heythen thorow faith. Therefore shewed it glad tydinges afore vnto Abraham, and sayde: ¶ In the shal all the Heythen be blessed. So then they which be of faith, are blessed with faithfull Abraham. For as many as go aboute with the workes of the lawe, are vnder ŷ curse: For it is wryttē:  Cursed be euery man, which cōtynueth not in all thinges that are wryttē in the boke of the lawe, to do them. That no man is iustified by the lawe in the sighte of God, it is euydēt: †† For ŷ iust shal lyue by his faith. The lawe is not of faith, †† but the mā that doth ſame, ſhal lyue therin. But Chriſt hath deliuered vs from ſ curse of the lawe, whan he became a curſe for vs. (For it is wrytē: *Cursd is euery man that hangeth on tre) ſ the blyſſynge of Abraham mighte come on the Gentyles in Chriſt Ieſu, and ſ we might ſo receaue ſ promysed ſprete, thorow faith.

C Brethren, I wil ſpeake after the maner of men. Though it be but a māſ Teſtamēt, yet no man deſpyſeth it, or addeth eny thinge therto, †whan it is confirmed. To Abraham and hiſ ſede were the promys made. He ſayeth not: In the ſedes, as in many, but in thy ſede, as in one, which is Chriſt. This Teſtament (I ſaye) which afore was confirmed to Chriſt warde, is not diſanulled (that the promes ſhulde be made of none affecte) by the lawe: which was geuen beyonde foure hundredth & thirtiē yeares thereafter. §For yf the enheritaunce be gotten by the lawe, then is it not geuen by promes. But God gaue it frely vnto Abraham by promes.

Wherefore thē ſerueth the lawe? || It was added becauſe of tranſgreſſion, tyll the ſede came, to the which the promes was made. ¶ And it was geuen of angels, by the hande of the mediatoure. A mediatour is not a mediatour of one onely, but God is one.

D Is the lawe then agaynſt the promyses of God? God forbyd. Howbeit yf there had bene geuen a lawe which coulde haue geuē life, thē no doute righteous ſhulde come of the lawe. †† But ſ ſcripture hath ſhut vp all vnder ſynne, that ſ promes ſhulde come by the faith on Ieſus Chriſt, geuē vnto thē that beleue. Before faith came, we were kepte and ſhut vp vnder the lawe, vnto the faith which ſhulde afterwarde be declared. Thus ſ lawe was oure ſcolemaſter vnto Chriſt, that we might be made righteous by faith. But now that faith is come, we are nomore vnder the ſcolemaſter. ‡ For ye all are the children of God by the faith in Chriſt Ieſu. §§ For as many of you as are baptysed, haue put on Chriſt. Here is nether Iewe ner Greke: here is nether bōde ner fre: here is nether man ner woman, for ye are all || one in Chriſt Ieſu. Yf ye be Chriſtes, thē are ye Abrahāſ ſede and heyres acordynge to the promes.

The iiii. Chapter.

BUT I ſaye: As longe as the heyre is a childe, there is no difference betwene him and a ſeruaunt, though he be lord of all ſ goodes: but he is vnder tuters and gouerners, vntyll the tyme appoynted of the father. Euen ſo we alſo, whā we were children, were in bondage vnder the outwarde tradicions. But whan the tyme was fulfilled, God ſent hiſ ſonne, borne of a womā, ¶ and put vnder the lawe, to redeme them which were vnder the lawe, that we mighte receaue ſ childſhippe.  For ſo moch thē as ye are children, God hath ſent the ſprete of hiſ ſonne in to oure hertes, which cryeth: Abba, deare father. Wherefore now, thou art not a ſeruaunt, but a ſonne. Yf thou be a ſonne, then art thou the heyre of God thorow Chriſt. Notwithſtandinge whan ye knewe not God, ye dyd ſeruyce vnto them, which by nature are no Goddes. But now ſeynge ye knowe God (yee rather are knowne off God) how is it ††† that ye turne you backe agayne vnto the weake and beggerly tradicions, wher vnto ye deſyre agayne a freſh to be in bondage?

Ye obſerue dayes and monethes, and tymes and yeares. I am in feare of you, leſt I haue beſtowed labour on you in vayne. Brethrē I beſeke you, be ye as I am, for I am as ye are. Ye haue not hurte me at all. For ye knowe how that in weaknes after ſ fleſh I preached ſ Gospell vnto you at the firſt: and my tentacion which I ſuffed after the fleſh, ye deſpyſed not, nether abhorred, but receaued me as an angell of God, yee euen as Chriſt Ieſus. How happy were ye then? For I beare you recorde, that yf it had bene poſſible, ye had plucked out youre awne eyes, and geuē them vnto me. Am I therefore become youre enemy, becauſe I tell you ſ trueth?

They are gelous ouer you amysſe. Yee they wolde make you to fall backe, that ye might be ſeruēt to thē warde. It is good to be ſeruēt, ſo ſ it be allwaye in a good thinge, and not onely whan I am preſent with you. My little children (of whom I trauayle in byrth agayne, vntyll Chriſt be faſhioned in you) I wolde I were with you now, and coulede chaſge my voyce, for I ſtode i doute of you.

¶ Tell me ye that wylbe vnder the lawe, haue ye not herde the lawe? For it is wrytten, that Abraham had two ſonnes * the one by a bonde mayde, † the other by a fre woman. As for him that was of the bode mayde, he was borne after ‡ flesh: but he which was of the fre woman, was borne by promes. These wordes betoken ſomwhat. For theſe wemen are the two Teſtamentes: The one from the mount Sina, that gendreth vnto bondage, which is Agar. For Agar is called in Arabia † mount Sina, and reacheth vnto Ieruſalem which now is, and is in bondage with hir children.

‡ But Ieruſalem that is aboue, is the fre woman, which is the mother of vs all. For it is wryttē: § Reioyce thou baren, that bearest no childre: breake forth and crye thou † trauayleſt not, for the deſolate hath many mo childre, then ſhe which hath an huſbande. As for vs (brethren) we are the children of Isaac accordinge to the promes.

¶ But like as at that tyme, he that was borne after the flesh, perſecuted him † was borne after the ſprete, euen ſo it is now alſo. But what ſayeth the ſcripture? ¶ Put away the bonde mayden and hir ſonne: for the ſonne of † bondmayde ſhal not be heyre with † ſonne of the fre woman. So now brethren, we are not children of the bonde mayde, but of the fre woman.

The b. Chapter.

¶ STONDE faſt therfore in the libertye wherwith Chriſt hath made vs fre, and be not wrapped agayne in the yocke off bondage. Beholde, I Paul ſaye vnto you: Yf ye be circumcyſed, Chriſt profiteth you nothinge at all. I teſtifie agayne vnto euery man which is circumcyſed, that he is bounde to kepe the whole lawe. Ye are gone quyte from Chriſt, as many off you as wylbe made righteous by the lawe, and are fallen from grace. But we wayte in the ſprete off hope, to be made righteous by faith. ¶ For in Chriſt Ieſu nether is circumciſion eny thinge worth ner vncircumciſion, but faith  by loue is mightie in operacion. Ye ranne well, who was a let vnto you, that ye ſhulde not obeye the truth? Soch counsell is not of him that hath called you.†† A litle leuen ſowreth the whole lombe of dowe.

I haue truſt towarde you in † LORDE, † that ye wylbe none otherwyſe mynded. But he that troubleth you, ſhal beare his iudgment, what ſo euer he be. Brethren yf I yet preach circumciſion, why do I ſuffre perſecucion? then had the ſlaunder off the croſſe ceaſed. Wolde God they were roted out fro amoge you, which trouble you. But brethren, ye are called vnto liberty, onely let not youre libertie be an occaſion vnto the flesh, but by loue ſerue one another. For all the lawe is fulfilled in one word, namely in this: † loue thy neghboure as thy ſelfe. And yf ye byte and deuoure one another, take hede, that ye be not conſumed one of another.

I ſaye: Walke in the ſprete, and ſo ſhal ye not fulfill the §§ luſtes off the fleſhe. ¶ For the fleſh luſteth agaynſt the ſprete, and the ſprete agaynſt the fleſh. Theſe are contrary one to the other, ſo that ye can not do that which ye wolde: But and yf ye be led of the ſprete, then are ye not vnder the lawe. ¶ The dedes of † fleſh are maniſeſt, which are theſe: Aduoutrye, whordome, vnclēnes, wantēnes, Idolatrye, witchcraft, hatred, variaunce, zele, wrath, ſtryfe, ſedicion, ſectes, enyenge, murthur, dronkennes, glotony, and ſoch like: of the which I tell you before, as I haue tolde you in tyme paſt, ¶ that they which commytte ſoch, ſhal not inheret the kyngdome of God. But the frute of the ſprete, is loue, ioye, peace, longe ſufferinge, gēlenes, goodneſſe, faithfulneſ, mekenesſe, tēperance,††† Agaynſt ſoch is not † lawe:††† But they that are Chriſtes, haue crucified their fleſh, with the luſtes and deſyres.

¶ AND quykened you also, whan ye were deed thorow trespasses and synnes, in the which in tyme past ye walked, accordinge to the course off this worlde, and after the pryncce that ruleth in the ayre namely, after [†]sprete, which now worketh in the children of vnbeleue, amonge whom we also had oure conuersacion in tyme past in the lustes of oure flesh, and dyd the wyll of the flesh and of the mynde, and were naturally the children of wrath, euen as well as other.

But God which is riche in mercy thorow his greate loue wherwith he loued vs euē whā we were deed in synnes, hath quykened vs in Christ (^{††}for by grace are ye sauēd) and hath rayseed vs vp with him, and set vs with him in heauēly thinges thorow Christ Iesu, [†]in tymes to come he mighte shewe the exceedinge riches of his grace, in kyndnesse to vs warde in Christ Iesu. For by grace are ye sauēd thorow faith, and that not of youre selues, For it is [†]gifte of God, not of workes, lest eny mā shulde boast him selfe. For we are his workmanship, created in Christ Iesu ^{††}vnto good workes, to [†]which God ordeyned vs before, that we shulde walke in them.

Wherefore remēbre, that ye (which afore tyme were Gentyles after the flesh, and were called vncircumcision, of thē that are called ^{§§}circumcision after the flesh, which circumcision is made with the hande) that ye at the same tyme were without Christ, and reputed aleauntes from the comen welth of Israel, and were straungers from the Testamentes of promes, therfore had ye no hope, and were without God in this worlde. But now ye that be in Christ Iesu, and afore tyme were farre of, are now made nye by the bloude of Christ.

For he is oure ^{|||}peace, which of both hath made one, and hath broken downe the wall, that was a stoppe betwene vs, and hath also thorow his flesh put awaye the cause off hatred (namely the lawe of the commaundemētes contayned in the lawe wrytten) that of twayne he mighte create one new man in him selfe, and make peace, and to reconyle both vnto God in one body thorow the crosse, and so he slewe [†]hatred thorow his owne selfe, and came ^{††}and preached peace in the Gospell, vnto you which were asfarre of, and to thē that were nye. For thorow him we both haue intraunce in one sprete vnto the father.

FOR this cause I Paul am \dagger a presoner of Iesus Christ for you Heythen, accordinge as ye haue herde of y office of the grace of God which is geuen me to you warde. For by \S reuelacion was this mystery shewed vnto me, as I wrote aboue in fewe wordes: wherby whan ye rede it, ye maye perceauē myne vnderstandyng in y mystery of Christ, which (mystery) in tymes past was not opened vnto the childre of mē as it is now declared to his holy Apostles and prophetes by the sprete: namely, that the Heythen shulde be inheritous also, and of the same body, and partakers of his promes in Christ by the Gospell, wherof I am made a mynister acordinge to the gifte of the grace of God, which is geuē me accordinge to the workyng of his power.

33 Vnto me \parallel the leest of all sayntes is this grace geuen, that I shulde preach amonge the Heythē \S vnsearcheable riches of Christ, and to make all men se, what is the fellowshipe of the y mystery, which frō the begynnyng of the worlde hath bene hyd in God, which made all thiges thorow Iesus Christ: to the intent that now vnto the rulers and powers in heauē mighte be knowne by the congregacion the manifold wysdome off God, accordinge to y eternall purpose, which he hath shewed in Christ Iesu oure LORDE by whom we haue boldnesse and intraunce in all confidēce thorow faith on him. Wherfore I desyre that ye faynte not because of my tribulacions, y I  suffre for you, which is youre prayse.

C For this cause I bowe my knees vnto the father of oure LORDE Iesus Christ, which is the true father, ouer all that is called father in heauen and in earth, that he graunte you (accordinge to y riches of his glory) to be strenghted with power by his sprete in y

Vnto him that is able to do exceedinge abundantly, aboue all that we axe or vnderstonde (accordinge to y power that worketh in vs) be prayse in the congregacion, which is in Christ Iesu, at all tymes for euer and euer, Amen.

The iijij. Chapter.

I THERFORE which am presoner in the LORDE, exhorte you, that ye walke as it becometh youre callinge wherin ye are called, with all humblenes off mynde and mekenes, and longe sufferinge, forbearinge one another in loue, and be diligent to kepe the vnite of the sprete thorow the bonde of peace. One body and one sprete, euē as ye are called in one hope of youre callynge. One LORDE, one faith, one baptyne, one God and father of vs all, which is aboue all, and thorow all, and in you all.

BE ye the †† followers therfore of God as deare children, and walke in loue, euen as Christ loued vs, and §§ gaue him selfe for vs an offerynge and sacrifice of a swete sauoure vnto God. As for whordome and all vnclennes, or couetousnes, let it not be named amōge you, as it becommeth sayntes: ||| nether fylthines, ner folish talkyng, ner ieastyng (which are not comly) but rather geuyng of thākes. ¶¶ For be sure, that no whome monger, or vnclane person, or couetous person (which is a worshipper off ymages) hath inheritaunce in the kyngdome of Christ and of God.  (Let no man disceau you with wayne wordes) for because of these cometh the wrath of God vpon the children of vnbeleue. Walke as the children of lighte. ††† (For the frute of the sprete is all maner of goodnes, and righteousnes and trueth:) and proue what is pleasinge vnto the LORDE, and haue no fellowshipe with f vnfrutefull workes of darknes, but rather rebuke thē. For it is shame euen to name those thinges, which are done of them in secrete. But all thinges are manifest, whan they are rebuked of the lighte. For what so euer is manifest, that same is lighte. Therfore sayeth he: §§§ Awake thou that slepest, and stonde vp frō the deed, and Christ shal geue the lighte.

their huszbandes, as vnto the LORDE.

* For the huszbande is the wyues heade, eue as Christ also is the heade of the congregacion, and he is the Sauoure of his body. Therefore as the congregacion is in subieccion to Christ, likewise let the wyues be in subieccion to their huszbandes in all thinges.

Ye huszbandes loue youre wyues, euen as Christ loued the congregacion, † and gaue himselfe for it, to sanctifye it, † and clensed it in the fountayne of water by the worde, to make it vnto himselfe a glorious congregacion, hauynge no spot ner wrynkle, ner eny soch thinge, but that it shulde be holy and without blame.

So oughte men also to loue their wyues, euen as their awne bodyes. He that loueth his wife, loueth him selfe. For no mā euer yet hated his awne fleszhe, but norisheth and cheriszheth it, euen as the LORDE doth also the congregacion. For we are membres of his body, of his flesh and of his bones. § For this cause shal a man leaue father and mother, and cleue vnto his wife, and they two shal be one flesh: This is a greatescrete: but I speake of Christ and the congregacion. Neuertheles do ye so, that euery one of you loue his wife euen as himselfe: but let the wife feare hir huszbande.

The bi. Chapter.

YE ¶ children, obey youre elders in the LORDE, for that is righte. Honoure thy father and thy mother (¶ That is the first commaundement, that hath eny promes) that thou mayest prospere, and lye longe vpon earth. And ye fathers, prouoke not youre children vnto wrath, but brynge thē vp in the nourtoure and informacion of the LORDE.

 Ye seruantes, obey youre bodely masters, with feare and tremblyng, in synglenes of youre hert, euen as vnto Christ, not with seruyce onely in the eye sighte, as men pleasers: but as the seruantes off Christ, doynge the wyll off God from the hert with good wyll. Thynte that ye serue the LORDE and not mē: and be sure, that what good souer a man doth, he shal receaite it agayne of the LORDE, whether he be bonde or fre.

* And ye masters, do euen the same vnto thē, puttyng away threatenynges, and knowe that euen youre master also is in heauen, † nether is there eny respecte of personnes with him.

¶ Fynally my brethren, be stronge in the LORDE, and in the power of his mighte: put on the armour of God, that ye maye stonde stedfast agaynst the craftie assautes off the deuell. For we wrestle not agaynst flesh and bloude, but agaynst rule, agaynst power namely, agaynst the rulers of the worlde, of the darknesse of this worlde, agaynst ¶ spretes of wickednes vnder the heauen. For this cause take ye the armour of God, ¶ ye maye be able to resiste in the euell daye, and stonde perfecte in all thinges.

‡ Stonde therefore, and youre loynes gyrd aboute with the trueth, hauynge on the brest plate of righteousness, and shod vpo youre fete with the gospell of peace, that ye maye be prepared: About all thinges take holde of the shyld of faith, wherwith ye maye quenche all the fyrie dartes of the wicked. And take the helmet of saluacion, ¶ the swerde of the sprete, which is the worde of God.

§ And praye allwayes with all maner of prayer and supplicacion in the sprete, and watch there vnto with all instance and supplicacion for all sayntes and for me, ¶ that the worde maye be geuen me, that I maye open my mouth boldly, to vtter the secretes of the Gospell, wherof I am a messaunger in bondes, that I maye speake therein frely, ¶ as it becommeth me to speake.

But that ye maye also knowe, what case I am in, and what I do, Tichicus my deare brother and faithfull mynister in the LORDE, shal shewe you all: whom I haue sent vnto you for the same cause, that ye mighte knowe what case I stonde in, and that he mighte comforte youre hertes.

Peace be vnto the brethrē, and loue with faith, from God the father, ¶ from the LORDE Iesu Christ. Grace be with all them that loue oure LORDE Iesus Christ vnfaynedly. Amen.

The Epistle

of the Apostle S. Paul to the Philippians.

Chap. I.

He exhorteth them to increace in loue, in knowlege and experience of godly thinges: maketh mention of his presonment at Rome, is glad to heare Christ preached, is cōtent ether to dye or lyue, and prayeth them to lede a godly conuersacion, to be of one mynde, and to feare no persecucion.

Chap. II.

He exhorteth them to vnite and brotherly loue, and to bewarre of strife and vayne glory:

And for a sure ensample he layeth Christ before them.

Chap. III.

He warneth thē to bewarre of false teachers, whom he calleth dogges and enemies of Christ, and reproueth mān owne righteousnesse.

Chap. IIII.

He saluteth certayne of them, exhorteth them to be of honest conuersacion, and thanketh them because of the prouysion, that they made for him beyng in preson.

The first Chapter.

A PAUL and Timotheus the seruauntes of Iesu Christ. Vnto all the sayntes in Iesu Christ, which are at Philippos, with the Bischoppes and * mynisters.

Grace be with you and peace from God oure fater, and from the LORDE Iesus Christ.

† I thanke my God, as oft as I remēbre you (which I allwayes do in all my prayers for you all, and praye with gladnesse) because of youre fellowshippe which ye haue in the Gospell from the first daye vnto now, and am surely certified of this, ‡ he which hath begonne that good † worke in you, shal go forth with it vntyll § daye of Iesus Christ: as it becommeth me to iudge of you all, because I haue you in my hert, as those that are partakers with me of grace in my bondes, in defendinge and stablyshinge of the Gospell.

B For God is my § recorder, how I lōge after you all euen for the very hert rote in Iesus Christ. ¶ And for the same I praye, ‡ youre loue maye increace more ¶ more in all maner of knowlege and in all experience, ‡ ye maye proue what is best, that ye maye be pure, ¶ soch as hurte no mans conscience, vnto the daye of Christ: fylled with the frutes of righteousnes, which come by Iesus Christ vnto the glorye and prayse of God.

I wolde ye vnderstode brethren, that my busynes is happened vnto the greater furtheraunce of the Gospell, so that my bondes in Christ are manifest thorow out all ‡ iudgmēt hall, and in all other places: In so moch that many brethren in the LORDE, are boldened thorow my bōdes, and darre more largely speake the worde without feare. Some (no doute) preach Christ of enuye and stryfe, but some of good wil. The one parte preacheth Christ off stryfe and not purely, supposynge to adde more aduersite vnto my bondes. The other parte of loue, for they knowe that I lye here for the defence of the Gospell.

C What then? So that Christ be preached all maner of wayes (whether it be done by occasion or of true meaninge) I reioyce therin, and wil reioyce. For I knowe that the same shal chauce to my saluacion, * thorow youre prayer and mynistrynge of the sprete of Iesu Christ, as I loke for and hope, that in nothinge I shalbe ashamed: but y^e with all cōfidence (as allwayes in tymes past, euē so now) Christ shalbe magnified in my body whether it be thorow life or thorow death. For Christ is to me life, & death is to me auāutage. But in as much as to lyue in y^e flesh is frutefull to me for the worke, I wote not what I shal chose, for both these thinges lye harde vpon me. †I desyre to be lowsēd, & to be with Christ, which thinge were moch better (for me) but to abyde in the flesh is more nedefull for you.

¶ And this am I sure of, that I shal abyde, and contynue with you all, for the furtheraunce and ioye of youre faith, that ye maye abundantly reioyce in Christ Iesu thorow me, by my cōmyng to you agayne. Onely let youre conversacion be: as it becommeth the Gospell of Christ, that whether I come & se you, or els be absent, I maye yet heare of you that ye cōtynue in one sprete and one soule, labouryng (as we do) to mayntayne the faith of the Gospell, and in nothinge fearinge youre aduersaries, which is to them a token off perdition, but vnto you of saluacion, and that of God. For vnto you it is geuen, not onely that ye shulde beleue on Christ, but also suffre for his sake, and to haue euen the same fighte, which ye haue sene in me, and now heare of me.

The ij. Chapter.

¶ IF there be amonge you eny consolacion in Christ, yf there be eny comforte of loue, yf there be eny fellowship off the sprete, yf there be eny compassion and mercy, fulfill my ioye, that ye drawe one waye, hauyng one loue, beyng of one accorde, and of one mynde: that there be nothinge done thorow stryfe and wayne glory, but that thorow mekenesse of mynde euery man esteeme another better then himselfe: and let euery mā loke not for his awne profet, but for the profet of other.

Let the same mynde be in you, that was in Christ Iesu: which beyng in the shappe of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God, but made him selfe of no reputacion, and toke vpon him the shappe of a seruaunt, § became like another man, and was founde in his apparell as a man: he humbled himselfe, and became obedient vnto the death, euen vnto the death of the crosse.

¶ Therfore hath God also exalted him, and geuen him a name, which is aboue all names, ¶ that in the name of Iesu esury kne shulde bowe, both of thinges in heauen, of thinges vpō earth, and of thinges vnder the earth, and that all tinges shulde confesse, that Iesu Christ is the LORDE vnto the prayse of God the father.

Wherefore my dearly beloued, as ye haue allwayes obeyed (not onely in my presence, but now also moch more in my absence) euen so worke out youre awne saluacion with feare and tremblyng.  For it is God which worketh in you both the wyll and the deed, euen of his owne good wyll. Do all thinges without murmurynges and disputynges, that ye maye be faultles and pure, and the childrē of God † without rebuke, in the myddes of y^e croked and peruerse nacion, †† amonge whom se that ye shyne as lightes in the worlde, holdyng fast the worde of life, vnto my reioysyng in the daye of Christ, that I haue not runne in wayne, nether laboured in wayne. §§ Yee and though I be offred vp vpō the offeryng & sacrifice of youre faith, I am glad, and reioyce with you all: be ye glad also, and reioyce ye with me.

I trust in the LORDE Iesus, to sende Timotheus shortly vnto you, that I also maye be of good comforte, whan I knowe what case ye stonde in. For I haue no man that is so like mynded to me, which with so pure affecō careth for you: for all other seke their awne, not that which is Iesu Christes. But ye knowe the profe of him: for as a childe vnto the father, so hath he mynistrd vnto me in the Gospell. Him I hope to sende, as soone as I knowe how it wyll go with me. But I trust in the LORDE, that I also my selfe shal come shortly.

Neuertheles I thoughte it necessary to sende vnto you the brother Ephraditus, which is my companyon in labour and felowe sou-dyer, and youre Apostell, and my mynister at

MOROUER my brethren, reioyce in the LORDE. Where as I wryte euer one thinge vnto you, it greueth me not, and maketh you the surer. Bewarre off dogges, bewarre off euell workers, bewarre off discension: for we are the circumcision, euen we that serue God in the sprete, and reioyce in Christ Iesu, and haue no confidence in the flesh, though I haue wherof I mighte reioyce in y flesh. Yf eny other mā thynke that he hath wherof he mighte reioyce in the flesh, moch more I, which was circūcysed on the eight daye, one of the people of Israel, of the trybe off Ben lamin, an hebrue of the Hebrues: as concernynge the lawe †a Pharise: as concernynge feruentnes §I persecuted the cōgregacion: and as touchinge the righteousnes which is in the lawe, I was vnrebukable.

¶ But the thinges that were vauntage vnto me, haue I counted losse for Christes sake. Yee I thynke all thinges but losse, for that excellent ¶ knowleges sake of Christ Iesu my LORDE: for whom I haue counted all thinge losse, and do iudge them but donge, that I mighte wyne Christ, ¶ be founde in him, not hauynge myne awne righteousnes which commeth of the lawe, but by the faith of Christ (namely) the righteousnes which commeth of God in faith, to knowe him and the vertue of his resurrection, and the fellowshipe of his passion,  that I maye be conformable vnto his death, yf by eny meanes I mighte attayne to the resurrection from the deed. Not that I haue attayned vnto it all ready, or that I am already perfecte: but I folowe, yf I maye comprehend that, wherin I am comprehended off Christ Iesu. Brethren, I counte not my selfe yet that I haue gotten it: but one thinge I saye: I forget that which is behynde, and stretch my selfe vnto that which is before, ¶ preace vnto y mark apoynted, to optayne the rewarde of the hye callinge of God in Christ Iesu.

Let vs therefore (as many as be perfecte) C be thus wyse mynded: and yf ye be otherwyse mynded, I praye God open euen this vnto you. Neuertheles in that wher vnto we are come, let vs procede by one rule, that we maye be of one accorde. †† Brethren, be ye y folowers of me, and loke on the which walke euē so as ye haue vs for an ensample. The Epistle of the Apostle S. Paul to the Colossians.

The summe of this Epistle.

Chap. I.

He geueth thanks vnto God for their faith, loue, and hope: prayeth for their increase and sheweth how we are the kyngdome of God, optayned by Christ, which is the heade of the congregacion.

Chap. II.

What greate care Paul toke for all congregacions. He exhorteth them to be stedfast in Christ, to beware of false teachers and worldly wysdome, and descrybeth the false prophetes.

Chap. III.

He putteth them in remembrance of the spirituall resurreccio, to laye asyde all maner of corrupte lyuynge, to be frutefull in all godlynesse and vertue, and sheweth all degrees their dutye.

Chap. IIII.

He exhorteth them to be feruent in prayer, to walke wysely vnto them that are not yet come to the true knowlege of Christ, and so saluteth them.

The first Chapter

PAUL an Apostle of Iesu Christ by the will of God, and brother Timotheus. To y sayntes which are at Colossa and brethren that beleue in Christ.

Grace be with you and peace from God oure father ⁊ frō the LORDE Iesus Christ.

*We geue thanks vnto God and the father of oure LORDE Iesus Christ, prayenge allwayes for you (sence we herde of youre faith in Christ Iesu, and of youre loue to all sayntes) for y hopes sake which is layed vp in stoare for you in heauen: of the which ye haue herde before by the worde of trueth in the Gospell, which is come vnto you, euē as it is in to all the worlde: and is frutefull, as it is in you, sence y daye y ye herde and knewe the grace of God in y trueth, as ye learned of † Epaphras oure deare felowe seruaunt, which is a faithfull mynister of Christ for you, which also declared vnto vs youre loue in the sprete.

† For this cause we also, sence the daye y we herde of it, cease not to praye for you, ⁊ desyre that ye mighte be fulfilled with the knowlege of his will, in all wysdome and spirituall vnderstondinge, that ye mighte walke worthy off the LORDE, to please him in all thinges, ⁊ and to be frutefull in all good workes, and growe in the knowlege of God: ⁊ to be strengthened with all power according to the mighte of his glory, to all pacience and long-sufferynge with ioyfulness, and geue thanks vnto the father, which hath made vs mete for the enheritaunce of sayntes in lighte.

33 Which hath deliuered vs frō the power of darknesse, ⁊ translated vs in to the kyngdome of his deare sonne (¶ in whom we haue redemption thorow his bloude, namely, the forgeuenes of synnes.) ¶ Which is the ymage of the inuisyble God, first begottē before all creatures. ¶ For by him were all thinges created, that are in heauen and earth, thinges vysible and thinges inuisyble, whether they be maiesties or lordshippes, ether rules or powers: All thinges are created by him and in him, and he is before all thinges, and in him all thinges haue their beyng.

and first begotten from the deed, that in all thinges he mighte haue the premyence. For it pleased the father, that in him shulde dwell all §§fulnesse, and that by him all thinges shulde be ||| reconciled vnto himselfe, whether they be thinges vpon earth or in heauen, that thorow the bloude on his crosse he mighte make peace euen thorow his owne selfe. And you (which were in tymes past straungers and enemies, because youre myndes were set in euell workes) hath he now reconcyled in the body of his flesh thorow death, C to make you holy, and vnblameable ⁊ with out faute in his awne sighte, yf ye contynue grounded and stablished in the faith, and be not moued awaye from y hope of the Gospell, wherof ye haue herde: which is preached amonge all creatures y are vnder heauen, wherof I Paul am made a mynister.

¶¶ Now ioye I in my sufferynges, which I suffre for you, and fulfill that which is beyhynde of the passions of Christ in my flesh, for his bodyes sake, which is the congregacion,  wherof I am made a mynister, according to y Godly office of preaching, which is geuen vnto me amonge you, that I shulde richely preach the worde of God, namely, that ††† mystery which hath bene hyd sence the worlde beganne, and sence the begynnyng of tymes: but now is ††† opened vnto his sayntes, to whom God wolde make knowne the glorious riches of this mistery amōge y Heythen: which (riches) is Christ in you, euē he that is the hope of glory, whō we preach, and warne all men, and teach all men in all wysdome, to make euery man perfecte in Christ Iesu: Wherin I also labour, and stryue according to the workynge of him which worketh mightily in me

IWOLDE ye knewe what fightinge I haue A for youre sakes, and for them of Laodicea, and for as many as haue not sene my personne in the flesh, that their hertes mighte be comforted and knytt together in loue, to all riches of full vnderstōdinge, §§§ which is in the knowlege of the mystery of God the father and of Christ, |||| in whom are hyd all the treasures of wysdome and knowlege.

* This I saye, lest eny man shulde begyle you with entysinge wordes. † For though I be absent in the flesh, yet am I present with you in the sprete: loyenge, and beholdinge youre order and the stedfastnes of youre faith in Christ. ‡ As ye haue therefore receaued Christ Iesu the LORDE, euen so walke in him, and be roted & buylded in him, and be stedfast in faith, as ye haue learned: & be plenteous in the same in geuyng thanks.

§ Bewarre lest eny mā spoyle you thorow philosophy and disceatfull vanite after the tradicions of men, and after the ordinaūces of the worlde, and not after Christ. ¶ For in him dwelleth all the fulnes of the Godheade bodely, and ye are complete in him, which is the heade of all rule and power: in whom also ye are circumcysed with ¶ circumcicion without handes, by puttyng of the synfull body of the flesh: (namely) with the circumcysion of Christ,  in that ye are buried with him thorow baptyme: in whom ye are also rysen agayne thorow faith, that is wrought by the operacion of God, which rased him vp from the deed.

†† And with him he quyckened you, when ye were deed in synnes, and in the vncircumcision of youre flesh, and hath forgeuen vs all synnes, and put out the handwrytinge that was agaynst vs (cōtayned in the lawe wrytten) and that hath he taken out of the waye, and fastened it to the crosse: ‡ And hath spoyled rule and power, and hath made a shewe of them openly, and triumphed ouer them in his awne persone.

§ Let no man therefore trouble youre consciences aboute meate or drynke, or for a pece of an holy daye, as the holy daye of ¶ newe Mone, or of the Sabbath dayes, §§ which are the shadowe of the thinges that were for to come: but the body selfe is in Christ. Let no man make you shote at a wronge mark, which after his owne chosynge walketh in humblenes and spiritualtye of angels, thinges which he neuer sawe, and is wayne, and puffed vp in his owne fleshy mynde: and holdeth not himselfe to the heade, wherof the whole body by ioyntes and couples receaueth nourishment, and is knyt together, and so groweth to the greatnes that commeth of God.

* Wherefore yf ye be deed with Christ from the ordinaūces of the worlde, why are ye holden thē with soch tradicions, as though ye lyued after the worlde? As whan they saye: Touch not this, taist not that, handle not that. All these thinges do hurte vnto men, because of the abuse of them, which abuse commeth onely of the commaundementes and doctrynes of men: ¶ which thinges haue a shyne of wysdome thorow chosen spiritualite and humblenes, and in that they spare not the body, and do the flesh no worshipe vnto his nede.

The iij. Chapter.

YF ye be rysen now with Christ, seke those thinges then which are aboue where Christ is, syttinge on the righte hande of God. Set youre mynde on the thinges which are aboue, not on ¶ thinges that are vpon earth. For ye are deed, ¶ and youre life is hyd with Christ in God.  But whan Christ oure life shal shewe himselfe, thē shal ye also appeare with him in glory.

The summe of this Epistle.

Chap. I.

He thanketh God for them, that they are so stedfast in faith and good workes, and receaue the gospell with soch earnest.

Chap. II.

He putteth them in mynde of the godly conuersacion that he led amonge them when he preached the gospell vnto them, thanketh God that they receaue his worde so frutefully, and excuseth his absence.

Chap. III.

He sheweth how greatly he was reioysed, whā Timothy tolde him of their faith and loue.

Chap. IIII.

He exhorteth them to stedfastnesse, to kepe them selues from synne and vnclenly conuersacion, to loue one another: rebuketh ydilnesse, and speaketh of the resurreccion.

Chap. V.

He enfourmeth them of the daye of dome and cōmyng of the LORDE, exhorteth them to watch, and to regarde such as preach Gods worde amonge them.

The first Chapter.

¶ PAUL and Siluanus and Timotheus.

Vnto the cōgregacion of the Tesselonyans, in God the father and in the LORDE Iesus Christ.

Grace be with you, and peace from God oure father and from the LORDE Iesus Christ.

* We geue thanks vnto God allwaye for you all, makynge mēcion of you in oure prayers without ceasyng, and call to remembraunce youre worke in the faith, and youre laboure in loue, & youre pacience in hope, * which is oure LORDE Iesus Christ before God oure father: Because we knowe (brethren, beloued of God) how that ye are electe: † for oure Gospell hath not bene with you in worde onely, but both in power and in the holy goost, and in moch certayntie, as ye knowe after what maner we were amonge you for youre sakes.

And ye became the folowers of vs and of the LORDE: and receaued the worde in moch affliction with ioye of the holy goost: so that ye were an example to all that beleued in Macedonia and Achaia. For frō you was the worde of the LORDE noysed out, not onely in Macedonia & Achaia, but i all quarters also is youre faith i God spred abrode so that it nedeth not vs to speake eny thinge at all. For they them selues shewe of you, what maner of entrynge in we had vnto you, and how ye are turned vnto God from ymages, for to serue the lyuynge and true God, and to loke for his sonne † from heauē: whom he raysed vp from the deed, euen Iesus, which hath delyuered vs frō the † wrath to come.

ye knowe) we were bolde in oure God, *to speake vnto you \S Gospel of God with moch stryunge. For oure exhortacion was not to brynge you to erreure ner yet to vncleennes, nether was it with gyle: but as we are allowed of God, that the Gospell shulde be commytted vnto vs to preache, euen so we speake, \dagger not as though we wolde please mē, but God, which tryeth oure hertes.

For we haue not gone aboute with flateringe wordes (as ye knowe) ner wayted for oure owne profit (\dagger God is recorde) nether soughte we prayse of men, nether of you ner of any other, whan we mighte haue bene chargeable vnto you as the Apostles off Christ, but we were tender amonge you.

\S Like as a nourse cheriseth hir children, euen so had we hartely affection towarde you, and wolde with good wyl haue dealte vnto you, not only the Gospell of God, but oure lyues also, because ye were deare vnto vs.

Ye remembre brethren oure labour and trauayle. \S For daye and nighte wroughte we (because we wolde not be chargeable vnto eny of you) and preached the Gospell of God amonge you. Ye are witnesses, and so is God, how holyly and iustly and vnblameable we behaued oure selues amōge you that beleue: as ye knowe, how that as a father his children, euen so exhorted we and comforted and besoughte euery one of you, that ye wolde walke worthely before God, which hath called you vnto his kyngdome \dagger glory.

For this cause thanke we God without ceassynge, because that whā ye receaued of vs the worde of the preachinge of God, ye receaued it not as \S worde of men, but (eue as it is of a trueth) the worde of God, which worketh in you that beleue.

\S For ye brethren are become the folowers off \parallel the congregacions off God which in Iewry are in Christ Iesu, so that ye haue suffred euen like thinges of youre kynsmen, as they haue suffred of the Iewes. Which as they put the LORDE Iesu to death, and their awne prophetes, euen so haue they persecuted vs also, and please not God, and are cōtrary to all men, $\dagger\dagger$ forbyddinge vs to speake vnto the Heythen that they mighte be saued, to fulfill their synnes allwaye: for the wrath is come vpon them already vnto \S vttemost.

But we (brethren) for as moch as we haue bene kepte from you for a season, as concernynge the bodily presence, but not in the hert, we haue haisted the more with greate desyre to se you personally. Therefore wolde we haue come vnto you, (I Paul) two tymes, $\dagger\dagger$ but Sathan withstode vs. For who is oure hope, or ioye, or crowne of $\dagger\dagger$ reioysinge? are not ye it in \S sighte of oure LORDE Iesu Christ at his comynge? Yes ye are oure prayse and ioye.

The iij. Chapter.

WHERFORE sence we coulde no longer forbear, we thoughte it good to re-mayne at $\S\S$ Athens alone, \dagger sent Timotheus oure brother and mynister of God, and oure helper in \S gospell of Christ, to stablysh you and to comforte you in youre faith, that noman shulde be moued in these troubles: (for ye youre selues knowe, that we are euen appoynted there vnto. And whan we were with you, we tolde you before, that we shulde suffice tribulacion, euen as it is come to passe, \dagger as ye knowe.) For this cause seyng I coulde no longer forbear, I sent, that I mighte haue knowlege of youre faith, lest happily the tempter had tempted you, and lest oure labour had bene in vayne.

But now that Timotheus is come frō you vnto vs, and hath shewed vs of youre faith and loue, \dagger how that ye haue allwaye good remembraunce of vs, desyryng to se vs as we also longe to se you: therefore brethren we haue consolacion in you in all oure trouble and necessite thorow youre faith. For now are we alyue, yf ye stonde stedfast in \S LORDE. For what thanks can we recom-pence to God agayne for you, because of this ioye that we haue concernynge you before oure God? We praye exceedingly daye and night, that we mighte se you presently, and fulfill that which is lackynge in youre faith.

God himselfe oure father \dagger oure LORDE Iesu Christ gyde oure iourney vnto you. But the LORDE increace you, \dagger make you flowe ouer in loue one towarde another, and towarde all men (euen as we do towarde you) that your hertes maye be stable and vnblameable in holynes before God oure father, at the

The iiii. Chapter.

A FURTHERMORE we beseke you brethren and exhorte you in the LORDE Iesus, that ye increase more and more, euen as ye haue receaued of vs how ye oughte to walke and to please God. For ye knowe what commandementes we gaue you by oure LORDE Iesus Christ. For this is the *will of God, euen youre sanctifience, that ye shulde absteyne from whordome, †‡ every one of you shulde knowe how to kepe his vessell in holynes and honoure, ¶ not in the lust of concupiscence, †as the Heythen which knowe not God. And that no man go to farre, ner defraude his brother in bargayninge. For the LORDE is the auenger of all soch thinges, as we haue sayde ¶ testified vnto you afore tyme. For God hath not called vs to vnclennesse, but vnto holynes. § He therefore that despyeth, despyeth not man, but God, ¶ which hath geuen his holy sprete in to you.

But as touching brotherly loue, ye nede not that I wryte vnto you, ¶ for ye youre selues are taught of God to loue one another: yee and that thinge ye do vnto all the brethrē, which are thorow out all Macedonia. But we beseke you brethren that ye increase yet more and more, and that ye study to be quyete, and to medle with youre awne busynesse, and to worke with youre awne hādes, as we commaunded you, that ye maye walke honestly towarde thē that are without, and that nothinge be lackynge vnto you.

We wolde not brethren that ye shulde be ignoraunt concernynge them which are fallen a slepe, that ye sorowe not as other do which haue no hope. For yf we beleue that Iesus dyed and rose agayne, euen so thē also which slepe by Iesus, shal God brynge with him. For this we saye vnto you in the worde of the LORDE, ††that we which lyue and are remaynyng in the cōmyng of the LORDE, shal not come yer they which slepe. †† For the LORDE himselfe shal come downe frō heauen with a shoute and voyce of § Archangell and with the trompe of God, and the deed in Christ shal aryse first: then shal we which lyue and remayne, be caught vp with them also in the cloudes, to mete the LORDE in the ayre, and so shal we euer be with the LORDE. Wherefore comforte youre selues one another with these wordes.

The v. Chapter.

BUT of § tymes and seasons (brethrē) it is no nede to wryte vnto you. For ye youre selues knowe perfectly, that § the daye of the LORDE shal come euen as a thefe in the nighte. For whan they shal saye: Tush, It is peace, there is no daunger, ¶ then shall soden destruccione come vpō thē, euen as the payne of a woman trauaylinge with childe, and they shal not escape. But ye brethren are not in darknes, that that daye shulde come on you as a thefe. Ye are altogether children of lighte, and children of the daye. We are not of the night, nether of darknesse.

¶ Therefore let vs not slepe as do other, but let vs watch, and be sober. For they that slepe, slepe in the nighte: and they that be dronken, are dronken in the nighte. But let vs which are of the daye, be sober, armed with the brestplate of faith and loue, and with § helmet of hope to saluacion.

For God hath not appoynted vs vnto wrath, but to optayne saluacion by § meanes of oure LORDE Iesu Christ, which dyed for vs: that whether we wake or slepe, we shulde lyue together with him. Wherefore comforte youre selues together, and edifye one another, euen as ye do.

We beseke you brethren, that ye knowe them which labour amonge you, and haue the ouersight of you in the LORDE, and geue you exhortacion, that ye haue thē the more in loue for their workes sake, and be at peace with them. We desyre you brethrē, warne them that are vnruy, cōforte the feble mynded, forbear the weake, be pacient towarde all men. ††† So that none recompence euell for euell vnto eny man: but euer folowe that which is good, both amōge youre selues and to all men.

A PAUL and Siluanus and Timotheus.
To the congregacion of ȳ Tesseloniās in God oure father and in the LORDE Iesus Christ.

Grace be with you, and peace from God oure father, and from the LORDE Iesus Christ.

We are bounde to thanke God allwayes for you brethren, as it is mete: because that youre faith groweth exceedingly, and the loue of euery one of you increaseth towarde another amōge youre selues, so that we oure selues make oure boast of you (in the congregacions of God) of youre paciēce and faith in all youre persecucions and troubles that ye suffre, which is a token of the righteous iudgment of God, that ye are counted worthy of the kyngdome of God, for the which ye also suffre.

For it is a righteous thinge with God, to recoēpence tribulacion vnto thē ȳ trouble you: but vnto you which are troubled, rest with vs, * whā the LORDE Iesus shal shewe himselfe from heauen, with the angels of his power, and with flammynge † fyre, to geue vengeauce vnto them that knowe not God, ‡ and to them that obeie not the Gospell of oure LORDE Iesus Christ. * Which shalbe punyshed with euerlastinge damnacion, † from y^e presence of the LORDE, and from the glory of his power, whan he shal come to be glorified in his sayntes, and to become maruelous in all them that beleue: because ye haue beleued oure testimony vnto you of the same daye. Wherefore we praye allwayes for you, that oure God make you worthy of y^e callinge, and fulfill all delectacion of goodnes, and the worke of faith in power, that y^e name of oure LORDE Iesus Christ maye be prayed in you, and ye in him, accordinge to the grace of oure God, and of the LORDE Iesus Christ.

The ij. Chapter.

WE beseeke you brethren by the comynge of oure LORDE Iesus Christ, and in that we shal assemble vnto him, that ye be not sodenly moued frō youre mynde, and be not troubled, nether by sprete, nether by wordes, ner yet by letter, which shulde seme to be sent from vs, as though y^e daye of Christ were at hande. Let noman disceauue you by eny meanes. For the LORDE commeth not, excepte the † departynge come first, and that that Man of synne be opened, euen the sonne of perdition, which is an aduersary, and is exalted aboue all y^e is called God or Gods seruyce, so that he sytteth as God in the † temple of God, † and boasteth himselfe to be God

Remembre ye not, that whan I was yet with you, I tolde you these thinges? And now ye knowe what withholdeth it, euē that it mighte be vttered at his tyme. (¶ For the mystery of the iniquyte worketh already, tyll he which now onely letteth, be takē out of the waye.) And then shal that wicked be vttered, ^{}whom the LORDE shal cōsume with y^e sprete of his mouth, & shal destroye with the appearance of his comynge: euen him, whose comynge is after the workynge of Sathan ^{††}with all lyenge power, and signes and wonders, and with all deceauablenes of vnrighteousnes amonge them that perishe, because they receaued not the loue of y^e trueth, that they might haue bene sauēd. ^{††}Therefore shal God sende them strōge delusion, that they shulde beleue lyes, y^e all they might be dāned, which beleued not the trueth, but had pleasure in vnrighteousnes.

But we are bounde to geue thankes allwaye vnto God for you, brethren beloued of the LORDE, because that God hath from the begynnyng chosen you to saluacion in the sanctifieng of the sprete and in beleuyng of the trueth, whervnto he hath called you by oure Gospell, to optayne the glory of oure LORDE Iesus Christ.

Therefore brethren stonde fast, and kepe the ordinaunces which ye haue lerned, whether it were by oure preachinge or by epistle. But oure LORDE Iesus Christ himselfe, and God oure father, which hath loued vs and geuen vs euerlastinge consolacion, and a good hope thorow grace, comforte youre hertes, and stablysh you in all doctryne & good doynge.

FURTHERMORE brethren ^{§§}praye for vs, that the worde of God maye haue fre passage and be glorified as it is with you, and that we maye be deluyered from vnreasonable and euell mē. ^{¶¶}For faith is not euery mā. But the LORDE is faithfull, which shal stablyshe you and kepe you from euell. We haue confidence in the LORDE to you warde, that ye both do and wyll do that which we cōmaunde you. The LORDE gyde youre hertes vnto the loue of God and pacience of Christ.

¶¶ But we requyre you brethren, in the name of oure LORDE Iesus Christ, that ye withdrawe youre selues from euery brother that walketh inordinatly, and noether the institucion which he receaued of vs. For ye youre selues knowe, how ye oughte to folowe vs: for we behaued not oure selues inordinatly amonge you, nether toke we bred of eny man for naughte ^{}but wrought with laboure and trauaile night and daye, lest we shulde be chargeable to eny of you. Not but that we had auctorite, but to geue oure selues for an ensample vnto you to folowe vs. And whan we were with you, this we warned you of, that yf there were eny which wolde not worke, y^e same shulde not eate. do, that thou commande some, that they teach none other wyse, * nether geue hede to fables and genealogies, which are endlesse, and brede doutes more then godly edifyenge, which is by faith.† For ‡ chefe summe of the commaundement is loue of a pure hert, and of a good cōscience, and of faith vnfayned. From the which some haue erred, ⁊ haue turned vnto vayne iangelynge, wyllinge to be doctours of the scripture, and vnderstonde not what they speake, nether wher of they affirme.

§ But we knowe that the lawe is good, yf a man vse it laulfully, vnderstōdinge this, ¶ that the lawe is not geuen vnto the righteous, but to the vnrighteous ⁊ dishobedient, to the vngodly ⁊ to synners, to the vnholly ⁊ vnclane, to murderers of fathers and murderers of mothers, to manslayers, to whore-mongers, ¶ to the that defyle them selues with mankynde, to menstealers, to lyars, to periuers, ⁊ so forth yf there be eny other thinge ¶ is cōtrary to ¶ wholesome doctryne, accordinge to ¶ Gospell of ¶ glory of the blessed God, which (Gospell) is cōmytted vnto me.

And I thanke Christ Iesus oure LORDE, which hath made me strōge, for he counted me faithfull, ⁊ put me in office, whā before I was a blasphemour, ¶ ⁊ a persecuter, ⁊ a tyrant: but I optayned mercy, because I dyd it ignorantly in vnbeleue. Neuertheles the grace of oure LORDE was more abūdaunt thorow ¶ faith ⁊ loue which is in Christ Iesu.

¶ For this is a true sayenge, and by all meanes worthy to be receaued,  that Christ Iesus came in to ¶ worlde to saue synners, of whom I am chefe. Notwithstandyng for this cause optayned I mercy, that Iesus Christ mighte princypally shewe in me all longe pacience, to the ensample of them which shulde beleue in him vnto eternall life. So then vnto God kyng euerlastinge, immortal and †† invisible, and wyse onely, be honour and prayse for euer and euer Amen.

This commaundement commytte I vnto the (my sonne Timotheus) accordinge to ¶ prophecies which in tyme past were prophced of the, that thou in them shuldest fighte a good fighte, hauyng faith ⁊ good conscience, which some haue put awaye frō them, and as concernyng faith haue made shypwrake: of whose nombre is †† Hymeneos and §§ Alexander, ¶ whom I haue delyuered vnto Sathan, that they might be taught, nomore to blaspheme.

The ij. Chapter.

I EXHORTE therfore, ¶ aboute all thinges, ¶ prayers, supplicacions, intercessions and geuyng of thākes be had for all men ¶¶ for kynges, and for all that are in auctorite, that we maye lyue a quyet ⁊ peaceable life in all godlynes and honestie. For that is good and accepted in ¶ sighte of God oure Sauoure, which wil haue all men sauēd, and to come vnto the knowledge of ¶ trueth. For there is one God, and  one mediatour betwene God and men, (namely) the man Christ Iesus, which gaue him selfe a ransome for all men, that at his tyme it shulde be preached, wher-vnto ††† I am ordeyned a preacher ⁊ an Apostle (I tell ¶ trueth in Christ and lye not) a teacher of the Heythē in faith and in the trueth.

I wil therfore that men praye ††† in all places, listyng vp pure hādes without wrath or dowyng. §§§ Likewise also the wemen, that they araye them selues in comly apparell with shamfastnes and discrete behaueoure, not with broyded heer, or golde, or perles, or costly araye: but with such as it becommeth wemē that professe godlynes thorow good workes. ¶¶¶ Let the woman lerne in sylēce with all subiection. discrete, manerly, harberous, * apte to teach: Not geuen to moch wyne, no fighter, not geuen to filthy lucre: but gentle, abhorrynge stryfe, abhorrynge couetousnes: ¶ one that ruleth his awne house honestly, hauynge obedient children with all honestye. (But yf a man can not rule his owne house, how shal he care for the congregacion of God?) He maye not be a yōge scolar, lest he be pult vp, and fall in to the iudgment of ¶ euell speaker. He must also haue a good reporte of them which are without, lest he fall in to the rebuke and snare of the euell speaker.

33 Likewise must the † mynisters be honest, not double tonged, not geuen to moch wyne, nether vnto fylthie lucre, but hauynge the mystery of faith in pure conscience. And let them first be proued, and then let them mynister, yf they be blamelesse.

Euen so must their wyues be honest, not euell speakers, but sober and faithfull in all thinges. Let the mynisters be, euery one the husbāde of one wyfe, and soch as rule their children well, and their owne houtholdes. ‡ For they that mynister well, get them selues a good degree and greate libertye in the faith which is in Christ Iesu.

These thinges wryte I vnto the, trustinge shortly to come vnto the: but yf I tary lōge, that then thou mayest yet haue knowlege, how thou oughtest to behaue thy selfe in Gods house, which is the congregacion of the Iyuyng God, the piler and grounde of trueth: and without naye, greate is that mystery of godlynnes. § God was shewed in the flesh: was iustified in the sprete: ¶ was sene of angels: was preached vnto the Heythen: was beleued on in the worlde: ¶ was receaued vp in glory.

34 THE sprete speaketh euydently,  that in ¶ latter tymes some shal †† departe from the faith, and shal geue hede vnto spretes of erreure, and deuylishe doctrynes, of them which speake false thorow ypocrysie, and haue their cōscience marked with an whote yron, forbyddinge to mary, and cōmaundyng to abstayne frō the meates, which God hath created to be receaued with geuyng thanks of them which beleue and knowe the trueth. ‡‡ For euery creature off God is good, and nothinge to be refused, ¶ is receaued with thankes-geuyng: for it is sanctified by the worde of God and prayer. Yf thou shalt put the brethren in remembrance of these thinges, thou shalt be a good mynister of Iesu Christ, §§ which hast bene nourished vp in the wordes of faith and of good doctryne, which thou hast folowed hither to.

¶¶ As for vngostly and olde wyuesh fables, 35 cast them awaye, but exercise thy selfe vnto godlynnes. For bodely exercise profyeth litle, but godlynnes is profytable vnto all thinges, as a thinge which hath promyses of the life that is now, and of the life for to come. This is a sure sayenge, ¶ of all partes worthy to be receaued. For therefore we labour and suffre rebuke, because we hope in the Iyuyng God, which is the Sauioire of all men, but specially of those that beleue. Soch thinges commaunde thou and teach. ¶¶¶ Let no man despyse thy youth,  but be thou vnto them that beleue, an ensample, in worde, in cōuersacion, in loue, in ¶ sprete, in faith, in purenesse.

Geue attendaunce to readyng, to exhortacion, to doctryne, vntyll I come. Be not negligent in the gifte that is geuen the thorow prophesye, ††† with layēge on of the handes of the Elders. These thinges exercise, and geue thy selfe vnto them, that thine increace maye be manifest vnto euery man. Take hede vnto thy selfe, and to learnynge, cōtynue in these thinges. B Let no wedowe be chosen vnder thre score yere olde, and soch one as was ‡ wife of one man, and well reported of in good workes, yf she haue brought vp children well, yf she haue bene † harberous, yf she haue washed the sayntes fete, yf she haue mynistrd vnto the which were in aduersite, yf she were continually geuen to all maner of good workes. But ‡ yonger wedowes refuse. For whan they haue begonne to waxe wanton agaynst Christ, then wil they mary, hauynge their damnacion, because they haue broke ‡ first faith. Besydes this they are ydell, and lerne to runne aboute fro house to house. § Not onely are they ydell, but also tryflinge ¶ busybodies, speakynge things which are not comly.

¶ I wil therfore that the yonger wemen mary, beare children, gyde the house, to geue ‡ aduersary no occasion to speake euell. For some are turned back already after Sathā. Yf eny man or woman that beleueth haue wedowes, let them make prouysion for the, and let not the congregacion be charged: that they which are righte wedowes, maye haue ynough.

C The Elders that rule well, are worthy of double honoure, most specially they which laboure in the worde ¶ in teachinge. For ‡ scripture sayeth: ¶ Thou shalt not mosell the mouth of ‡ oxe ‡ treadeth out ‡ corne. And:  The labourer is worthy of his rewarde.

†† Agaynst an Elder receaue none accusation, but vnder two or thre witnesses. The that synne, rebuke in the presence of all, that other also maye feare.

I testifye before God and the LORDE Iesus Christ, and ‡ electe angels, that thou obserue these things without haistie iudgment, and do nothinge partially. Laye hondes sodenly on no mā, nether be partaker of other mēs synnes. Kepe thy selfe pure. ‡ Drynke no lenger water, but vse a litle wyne for thy stomackes sake, and because thou art oft tymes sicke. Some mēs synnes are opē, so that they maye be iudged afore hande: but some mens (synnes) shal be manifest hereafter. Likewise also good workes are manifest afore hāde: and they that are other wyse can not be hyd.

LET as many seruantes as are vnder the yocke, counte their masters worthy of all honoure, that the name of God and his doctrine be not euell spoken of. Se that they which haue beleuyng masters, despyse them not because they are brethrē, but rather do seruyce, for so much as they are beleuyng, and beloued, and partakers of the benefite.

These things teach and exhorte. Yf eny mā teach otherwyse, and agreeth not vnto the wholsome wordes of oure LORDE Iesus Christ, and to the doctryne of godlynes, he is puffed vp, and knoweth nothinge, but waysteth his brayne aboute questions and stryuynges of wordes: §§ wherof sprynge envye, stryfe, raylinges, euell surmysinges, vayne disputaciōs of soch men as haue corrupte myndes, || and are robbed of the trueth, which thinke that godlynes is lucre: From soch separate thy selfe. The seconde Epistle of the Apostle S. Paul to Timothy.

Chap. I.

Paul exhorteth Timothy to stedfastnesse and pacience in persecucion, and to continue in the doctryne that he had taught him. A commendacion of Onesiphorus.

Chap. II.

Like as in the first chapter, so here he exhorteth him to be constant in trouble, to suffre manly, and to byde fast in the wholesome doctrine of oure LORDE Iesus Christ.

Chap. III.

He prophecieth of the paelous tymes, setteth out ypocrites in their colours, telleth vs what they be within, for all their fayre faces outwardly. Persecucion for the gospell.

Chap. IIII.

He exhorteth Timothy to be feruēt in the worde, and to suffre aduersite: maketh mention of his awne death, and byddeth Timothy come vnto him.

The first Chapter.

PAUL an Apostle of Iesus Christ, by the wyll of God, to preach the promes of y life which is in Christ Iesu.

To my deare sonne Timotheus.

Grace, mercy, and peace from God the father and from Christ Iesu oure LORDE.

Wherefore I warne the, that thou stere vp y gifte of God which is in the by puttyng on of my handes. *For God hath not geuen vs the sprete of feare, but of power, and of loue, and of right vnderstandynge.

† Be not thou aszhamed therfore of y testimony of oure LORDE, nether of me, ‡ which am his presoner: but suffre thou aduersite also with the Gospell, accordinge to the power of God § which hath saued vs, and called vs with an holy callinge: not accordinge to oure dedes, but accordinge to his owne purpose and grace, which was geuen vs in Christ Iesu before the tyme of the worlde, but is now declared openly by the appearynge of oure Sauoure Iesu Christ. ¶ Which hath taken awaye y power of death, and hath brought life and immortalite vnto lighte, thorow the Gospell: ¶ whervnto I am appoynted a preacher and an Apostell, and a teacher of the Heythen: for the which cause I also suffre these thinges, neuertheles I am not ashamed. For I knowe whom I haue beleued, and am sure that he is able to kepe that which I haue commytted vnto his kepynge agaynst that daye.

¶  Holde the after y ensample of the wholesome wordes, which thou heardest of me, concernynge faith and loue in Christ Iesu. This hye charge kepe thou thorow the holy goost, which dwelleth in vs. This thou knowest, that all they which are in Asia, be turned fro me, of which sorte are Phigelus and Hermogenes. The ij. Chapter.

THOU therfore my sonne, be stronge A thorow the grace which is in Christ Iesu. And what thinges thou hast herde of me by many witnesses, §§ the same commytte thou vnto faithfull men, which are apte to teach other. Thou therfore suffre affliction as a good soudyer off Iesu Christ. No mā that warreth, tangleth him selfe with wordly busynesses, ¶ that because he wolde please him, which hath chosen him to be a soudyer. And though a man stryue for a mastyre, yet is he not crowned, excepte he stryue lawfully. ||| The huszbandman that laboureth, must first enioye the frutes. Consydre what I saye. The LORDE shal geue the vnderstandynge in all thinges.

Remembre that Iesus Christ, beyng ¶ of the sede of Dauid, rose agayne fro the deed, accordinge to my Gospell, where in I suffre as an euell doer euen vnto bandes: but the worde of God is not bounde.  Therfore suffre I all for the electes sakes, that they also mighte optayne the saluacion in Christ Iesu with eternall glory.

This is a true sayenge: ††† Yf we be deed with him, we shal lyue with him also: ††† Yf we be pacient, we shal also raigne with him: §§§ Yf we denye him, he also shal denye vs: |||| Yf we beleue not, yet abyde he faithfull, he can not denye himselfe. Of these thinges put thou them in remembraunce, and testifye before the LORDE, that they stryue not aboute wordes, which is to no profit, but to peruerte the hearers.

Study to shewe thy selfe vnto God a laudable workman, that nedeth not to be ashamed, deuydyng the worde of trueth iustly. ¶¶¶ As for vngostly and vayne talkynges, eschue them: for they helpe moch to vngodlynes, and their worde fretteth as doth a canker: Of whose nombre is * Hymeneos ¶ Philatus, which as concernynge the trueth haue erred, sayenge, that the resurreccion is past already, and haue destroyed the faith of dyuerse personnes.

But y sure grounde of God stondest fast, and hath this seale: †††† The LORDE knoweth them that are his, and let euery mā that calleth vpon the name of Christ, departe from iniquyte. Notwithstandynge * in a greate house are not onely vessels of golde and of syluer, but also of wod and of earth: some for honoure, and some to dishonoure. But yf a man poure himselfe from soch felowes, he shalbe a vessell sanctified vnto honoure, mete for the LORDE, and prepared vnto all good workes. † Fle thou the lustes of youth, but folowe righteousness, faith, loue, peace, with all them that call vpon the LORDE with pure hert. ‡ As for folish questions and soch as teach not, put them frō the: for thou knowest that they do but gēder stryfe. The seruauent of the LORDE ought not to stryue, but to be gentle vnto euery man: † apte to teach, one that can forbear the euell, one ‡ y can § with mekenesse enforme them † resist: yf God at eny tyme wyl geue them repentaunce for to knowe the trueth, and to turne agayne from the snare of the deuell, which are holden in prison of him at his will.

The iij. Chapter.

BUT this shalt thou knowe, ^a that in the last dayes shal come paelous tymes. For there shalbe mē which shal holde of the selues, couetous, boasters, proude, cursed speakers, dishobedient to their elders, vnthankfull, vngostly, vnkynde, truce breakers, false accusers, ryatours, fearce, despysers of them which are good, traytours, heady, hie mynded, gredy vpon voluptuousnes more then the louers of God, hauynge a shyne off godly luyynge, but denyenge the power therof. And soch avoyde. ¶ Of this sorte are they which rūne frō house to house, & brynge in to bondage wemē ladē with synne: which (wemen) are led with dynerse lustes, euer lernynge, and are neuer able to come vnto the knowlege of the trueth.

¶ But like as Iamnes and Iābres withstode Moses, euen so do these also resist the trueth: mē they are of corrupte myndes, and lewde as cōcernynge † faith: but they shal preuayle no longer. For their folishnes shal be manifest vnto all men, as theirs was.

But thou hast sene the experience of my doctryne, my fashzion of luyynge, my purpose, my faith, my longsufferynge, my loue, my patience, my persecucions, my afflictions, which happened vnto me  at Antioche, at Iconium, at Lystra, which persecucions I suffred patiently, and from the all the LORDE deluyered me. † Yee and all they that wil lye godly in Christ Iesu, must suffre persecucion. But the euell men and disceauers shal waxe worse and worse, disceauynge and beyng disceaued.

‡ But contynue thou in the thinges that thou hast lerned, which also were cōmytted vnto the, seynge thou knowest of whō thou hast lerned them, And for so much as thou hast knowne holy scripture of a childe, the same is able to make † wyse vnto saluacion thorow the faith in Christ Iesu. § For all scripture geuē by inspiration of God, is profitable to teach, to improue, to amende, and to instructe in righteousness, that a man off God maye be perfecte, and prepared vnto all good workes.

ITESTIFYE therefore before God & before the LORDE Iesu Christ, which shal come to iudge the luyynge and the deed, at his appearynge in his kyngdome: Preach thou the worde, be feruent, be it in season or out of season: Improue, rebuke, exhorte with all longe sufferynge and doctryne. For the tyme wil come, when they shal not suffre wholesome doctryne, but after their awne lustes shal they (whose eares ytche) get them an heape of teachers, and shal turne their eares from the trueth, and shalbe geuen vnto fables. But watch thou in all thinges, suffre aduersite, do the worke of a preacher of the Gospell, fulfill thine office vnto the vttemost.

¶ For I am now ready to be offered, and the tyme of my departinge is at honde. I haue foughte a good fighte: I haue fulfilled the course: I haue kepte the faith. From hence forth there is layed vp for me ¶ a crowne of righteousness, which the LORDE the righteous iudge shal geue me in † daye: Howbeit not vnto me onely, but vnto all them that loue his cōmyng. The seconde Epistle of the Apostle S. Peter.

The summe of this epistle.

Chap. I.

For so much as the power of God hath geuen them all thinges pertayninge vnto life, he exhorteth thē to fye the corrupcion of worldly lust, to make their callinge sure with good workes and frutes of faith. He maketh mention of his owne death, declaringe the LORDE Iesus to be the true sonne of God, as he himself hath sene vpon the mount.

Chap. II.

He prophecieth of false teachers, and sheweth their punyishment.

Chap. III.

He exhorteth men to beware of such as wolde make the beleue, that the daye of the LORDE were slacke in comyngē: prayeth them to lede a godly life, and to loke verely for the comyngē of the LORDE, whose lōge tarienge is saluacion, and because he wolde haue no man lost, but wolde receaue all mē to repentance.

The first Chapter.

A SYMON Peter a seruaũt and an Apostol of Iesus Christ.*

Vnto the which haue optayned like faith with vs in the righteousnes that commeth of oure God, and Sauoure Iesus Christ.

* Grace and peace be multiplied with you thorow the knowlege of God and of Iesus Christ oure LORDE.

B For so much as his godly power hath geuen vs all things (that pertayne vnto life and godlynnes) thorow the knowlege of him that hath called vs by his owne glorie and power, wherby the excellent and most greate promyses are geue vnto vs: namely, that ye by the same shulde be partakers of the godly nature, yf ye flye the corrupte lust of the worlde: Geue ye all youre diligence therfore here vnto, and in youre faith mynister vertue: in vertue, knowlege: in knowlege, temperancy: in temperancy, pacience: in pacience, godlynnes: in godlynnes, brotherly loue: in brotherly loue, generall loue. For yf these thinges be plenteous in you, they will not let you be ydle nor vnfrutefull in y knowlege of oure LORDE Iesus Christ. But he that lacketh these thinges, is blynde, & gropeth for the way with the hāde, and hath forgotten, that he was clesned from his olde synnes.

Wherefore (brethrē) geue the more diligence to make youre callynge and eleccion sure: for yf ye do soch thinges, ye shal not fall, and by this meanes shal there be plenteously mynistrud vnto you an entrynge in vnto y euerlastinge kyngdome of oure LORDE and Sauoure Iesus Christ.

C Therefore wil I not be negligēt to put you allwayes in remembraunce of soch thinges: though ye knowe them youre selues, and be established in the present trueth. Notwithstandinge I thinke it mete, as lōge as I am in this † tabernacle, to stere you vp by puttinge you in remembraunce. For I am sure, that I must shortly put of my tabernacle, euen as oure LORDE Iesus Christ hath shewed vnto me. Yet wyl I do my diligēce, that allwaye after my departynge ye maye haue wherwith to kepe these thinges in remembraunce.

For we folowed not deceaueable fables, whan we declared vnto you the power and commynge of oure LORDE Iesus Christ: † but with oure eyes we sawe his maiestie, whan he receaued of God the father honoure & prayse, by a voyce that came vnto him from the excellent glory, after this maner: § This is my deare sonne, in whom I haue delyte. And this voyce herde we broughte downe frō heauen, whan we were with him on the holy mount.

We haue also a sure worde of prophecie, and ye do well that ye take hede thervnto, as vnto a lighte || that shyneth in a darke place vntyll the daye dawne, and the daye starre aryse in youre hertes. And this shal ye knowe first, that no prophecie in the scripture is done of eny priuate interpretacon. ¶ For the prophecie was neuer broughte by the wyll of man, but the holy men of God spake, as they were moued of y holy goost.

BUT there were false prophetes also † amonge the people,  euen as there shalbe false teachers amonge you likewise, which preuely shal brynge in damnable sectes, euen denyenge the LORDE that hath boughte them, and shal brynge vpon them selues swift damnacion: and †† many shal folowe their damnable wayes, by whō the waye of the trueth shal be euell spokē of: and thorow cuetousnes shal they with fayned wordes make marchaundise of you, vpō whō the iudgment is not negligēt in tarienge of olde, and their damnacion slepeth not.

‡ For yf God spared not the angels that synned, but cast them downe with the cheynes of darknes in to hell, and deluyered thē ouer to be kepte vnto iudgment: §§ Nether spared the olde worlde, but sauēd Noe the preacher of righteousnes himselfe beyngē y eight, and brought the floude vpō the worlde of the vngodly: || And turned the cities of Sodom and Gomor in to ashes, ouerthruē them, dammed them, and made on them an ensample, vnto those that after shulde lye vngodly: And deluyered iust Loth which was vexed with the vngodly conuersacion of y wicked. and dwelt amonge them, so that he must nedes se it and heare it, his righteous soule was greued from to daye to daye with their vnlauffull dedes. *The LORDE knoweth how to deluyer the godly out of tentacion, and how to reserue the vniust vnto the daye of iudgment for to be punyshed: but specially them that walke after the flesh in y lust of vnclemnes, and despyse the rulers: beyng presumptuous, stubborne, and feare not to speake euell of the y are in auctorite + whā the angels yet which are greater both in power and might, beare not that blasphemous iudgment agaynst them of the LORDE.† But these are as y brute beestes, which naturally are broughte forth to be takē and destroyed: §speakyng euell of y they knowe not, and shal perishe in their owne destruction, and so receaue y rewarde of vnrighteousnes.

They counte it pleasure to lyue deliciously for a season: Spottes are they and fylthynges: lyuyng at pleasure and in disceauable wayes: feastyng with that which is yours, hauyng eyes full of adoutrye, and cā not cease from synne, entysyng vnstable soules: hauyng an hert exercysed with couetousnes: they are cursed children, and haue forsaken the righte waye, and are gone astraye: folowinge the waye of Balaam the sonne of Bosor, which loued the rewarde of vnrighteousnes: but was rebuked of his iniquyte. The tame and domme beast spake with mā's voyce, & forbad the foolishnes of y prophet.

These are welles without water, ¶ cloudes caried aboute of a tēpest: to whō y myst of darknesse is reserued for euer. For they speake y proude wordes of vanite, vnto y vttemost, and entye thorow wantannes vnto y luste of the flesh, euen them that were cleane escaped, and now walke in erreure: and promyse them libertye, where as they them selues are seruantes off corrupcion. For off whom so euer a man is ouercome, vnto the same is he in bondage. †† For yf they (after they haue escaped from the fylthynges of the worlde, thorow the knowlege of y LORDE and Sauoure Iesus Christ) are yet tangled agayne therin and ouercome,†† then is the latter ende worse vnto them then the begynnyng. For it had bene better for them, not to haue knowne the waye of righteousness, then after they haue knowne it,§§ to turne from the holy commaundemēt, that was geuen vnto them. It is happened vnto them acordyng vnto the true prouerbe: ||| y dogg is turned to his vomyte agayne: and y sowe that was washed, vnto hir walowyng in the myre.

THIS is the seconde Epistle that I now A wyte vnto you (ye dearly beloued) wherin I stere vp and warne youre pure mynde, that ye maye remembre the wordes, which were tolde before of the holy prophetes: and also the commaundement of vs, that be the Apostles of the LORDE and Sauoure.

This first vnderstonde, ¶¶ that in the last dayes there shal come mockers, which wyll walke after their awne lustes, & saye:  Where is the promes of his commynge? For sence the fathers fell on slepe, every thinge continueth as it was from the begynnyng of y creature. This they knowe not (and that wyfully) how that the heauens were afore tyme also, and the earth out of the water, ¶ was in the water by the worde of God, ††† yet was the worlde at that tyme destroyed by the same with the floude. But the heauens which are yet, and y earth, are kepte in stoare by his worde, to be reserued ††† vnto fyre agaynst the daye of iudgment and damnacion of vngodly men.

Dearly beloued, be not ignorant of this B one thinge, §§§ how that one daye is with the LORDE as a thousande yeare: and a thousande yeare as one daye. The synguler loue of God to warde vs: and how we agayne oughte to loue one another.

Chap. IIII.

Difference of spretes, and how the sprete of God maye be knowne from the sprete of erreure. Of the loue of God and of oure neighbours.

Chap. V.

To loue God, is to kepe his commaundemētes. Faith ouercommeth the worlde. Euerlastinge life is in the sonne of God. Of the synne vnto death.

The first Chapter.

¶ THAT which was from ȳ begynnyng, which we haue herde, which * we haue sene with oure eyes, which we haue looked vpon, † and oure handes haue handled of the worde of life: and the life hath appeared, and we haue sene, and beare wytnes, and shewe vnto you ȳ life that is euerlastinge, * which was with the father, and hath appeared vnto vs. That which we haue sene & herde, declare we vnto you, that ye also maye haue fellowship with vs, and that oure fellowship maye be with the father and with his sonne Iesus Christ. And this wryte we vnto you, ‡ that youre ioye maye be full.

And this is the tydinges which we haue herde of him, & declare vnto you, that God is lighte, and in him is no darknes at all. Yf we saye that we haue fellowshipe with him, and yet walke in darknes, we lye, and do not the trueth. But yf we walke in lighte, euen as he is in lighte, then haue we fellowshipe together, * and the bloude of Iesus Christ his sonne clenseth vs from all synne.

+ Yf we saye that we haue no synne, we disceau our selues, and the trueth is not in vs. † But yf we knowlege our synnes, he is faithfull and iust to forgeue vs our synnes, ‡ to clense vs from all vnrighteousnes. Yf we saye, we haue not synned, we make him a liar, and his worde is not in vs.

The ij. Chapter.

A MY little children, these things wryte I vnto you, that ye shulde not synne: and yf eny man synne, we haue an † aduocate with the father, euen Iesus Christ which is righteous: ‖ and he it is that optayneth grace for our synnes: not for our synnes onely, but also for the synnes of all the worlde. And hereby are we sure that we knowe him, yf we kepe his cōmaundemētes. ¶ He that sayeth: I knowe him, and kepeth not his cōmaundemētes, is a liar, and the trueth is not in him, But who so kepeth his worde, in him is the loue of God perfecte in dede.  Hereby knowe we, that we are in him. He ‡ sayeth he abyde in him, oughte to walke euen as he walked.

Brethren, I wryte no new commaundement vnto you, but that olde commaundement, which ye haue herde from the begynnyng. The olde cōmaundement is the worde, which ye haue herde from the begynnyng. Agayne, † a new cōmaundemēt wryte I vnto you, a thinge that is true in him ‡ also in you: for the darknesse is past, and the true lighte now shyneth.

B He that sayeth he is in lighte, and hateth his brother, is yet in darknesse. He ‡ loueth his brother, abyde in the lighte, and there is none occasion of euell in him. But he ‡ hateth his brother, is in darknes, and walketh in darknes, and can not tell whither he goeth, for ‡ darknes hath blynded his eyes.

Babes, I wryte vnto you, † that youre synnes are forgivenen you for his names sake. I wryte vnto you fathers, how that ye haue knowne him which is from ‡ begynnyng. I wryte vnto you yonge mē, how that ye haue ouercome the wicked. I wryte vnto you litle children, how that ye haue knowne the father. I haue wrytten vnto you fathers, how that ye haue knowne him, which is frō the begynnyng. I haue wrytten vnto you yonge men, how that ye are stronge, and the worde of God abyde in you, and ye haue ouercome that wicked.

Se that ye loue not the worlde, nether ‡ things that are in the worlde. Yf eny man loue the worlde, the loue of the father is not in him: for all that is in the worlde (namely the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pryde of life) is not of the father, but of the worlde. And the ‡ worlde passeth awaye and the lust therof. But he that fulfilleth the wyll of God, abyde in euer.

Litle children, it is the last houre, and (as ye haue herde that ‡ Antechrist shal come) euen now are there many become Antechrists allready: wherby we knowe, that it is ‡ last houre. They wente out ‡ frō vs, but they were not of vs: for yf they had bene of vs, they wolde no doute haue contynued with vs. But  that they maye be knowne, how that they are not all of vs.

But ye haue the † anoyntinge of him ‡ is holy, ‡ ye knowe all thiges. I haue not wryttē vnto you, as though ye knewe not ‡ trueth but ye knowe it, ‡ are sure, ‡ no lye cōmeth of ‡ trueth. Who is a liar, but he ‡ denyeth ‡ Iesus is Christ? The same is ‡ Antichrist, ‡ denyeth the father ‡ ‡ sonne. Whosoever denyeth the sonne, the same hath not the father. Loke what ye haue herde now from ‡ begynnyng, let the same abyde in you. Yf ‡ which he herde from the begynnyng shal remayne in you, then shal ye also abyde in ‡ sonne and in the father. And this is the promys ‡ he hath promysed vs, eue eternall life.

This haue I wryttē vnto you cōcerninge thē that disceau you. † And the anoyntinge which ye haue receaued of him, dwelleth in you: ‡ ye nede not ‡ eny mā teach you, but as the anoyntinge teacheth you all thiges, euen so is it true, ‡ is no lye. And as it hath taughte you, eue so abide ye therin. And now babes, abyde in hi, ‡ whā he shal appeare, we maye be bolde, & not be made ashamed of him at his commynge. Yf ye knowe \bar{y} he is righteous, knowe also that he which doth righteousnes, is borne of him.

The iij. Chapter.

BEHOULDE what loue the father hath shewed on vs, \bar{y} we shulde be called the childrē of God. Therefore \bar{y} worlde knoweth you not, because it knoweth not him. Dearly beloued, we are now \bar{y} * childrē of God, and yet hath it not appeared what we shalbe. † But we knowe \bar{y} when he shal appeare, we shal be like him: for we shal se him as he is. And euery man \bar{y} hath this hope in him, poureth him selfe, euen as he is pure. Who so euer cōmyteth synne, cōmyteth vnrighteousnes also, and synne is vnrighteousnes. ‡ And ye knowe that he appeared to take awaye oure synnes: and in him is no synne. Who so euer abydeh in him, synneth not: who soeuer synneth, hath not sene him nether knowne him.

Babes, let noman disceaue you. He that doeth righteousnes, is righteous, euen as he is righteous. He that cōmyteth synne, is of the deuell: § for the deuell synneth sence \bar{y} begynnyng. For this purpose appeared the sonne of God, to lowse the workes of the deuell. ¶ Who so euer is borne of God, synneth not: for his ¶ sēde remayneth in him, & he cā not synne, because he is borne of God.  By this are the children of God knowne & the children of the deuell. Who so euer doeth not righteousnes, is not of God, nether he that loueth not his brother.

For this is the tydings which ye haue herde from the begynnyng, that ye shulde loue one another, †† not as Cain, which was of the wicked, and slewe his brother. And wherfore slewe he him? euen because his awne workes were euell, and his brothers righteous. ‡‡ Maruayle not (my brethren) though the worlde hate you. We knowe \bar{y} we are trāslated from death vnto life, because we loue the brethren. He that loueth not his brother, abydeh in death. §§ Who soeuer hateth his brother, is a manslayer. And ye knowe that a manslayer hath not eternall life abydinge in him.

CHereby haue we perceaued loue, that he gaue his life for vs, and therfore ought we also to geue oure lyues for the brethrē. But he \bar{y} hath this worlde good, & seyth his brother haue nede, and shutteth vp his hert frō him, how dwelleth the loue of God in him? My litle children, ¶ let vs not loue with worde nether with tonge, but with \bar{y} dede, and with the trueth. Hereby knowe we, that we are of the verite, and can quyetue oure hertes before him. But yf oure hert condemne vs, God is greater thē oure hert, and knoweth all thinges. Dearly beloued, yf oure hert condemne vs not, then haue we a fre boldnes to God warde. ¶¶ And what so euer we axe, we shal receaue it: because we kepe his cōmaundētes, and do those thinges, which are pleasaunt in his sighte.

And this is his cōmaundement, that we beleue on \bar{y} name of his sonne Iesus Christ, and loue one another,  as he gaue cōmaundement. And he that kepeth his cōmaundementes, dwelleth in him, and he in him. And hereby knowe we that he abydeh in vs, euen by the sprete which he hath geuen vs.

The iij. Chapter.

DEARLY beloued, beleue not ye euery Asprete, ††† but proue the spretes, whether they be of God. For many false prophetes are gone out in to the worlde. Hereby shal ye knowe the sprete of God: Euery sprete which confesseth, that Iesus Christ is come in the flesh, is of God: And euery sprete which confesseth not that Iesus Christ is come in the flesh, is not off God. And this is that sprete of Antechrist, off whom ye haue herde, how that he shal come, and euen now allready is he in the worlde. Litle children, ye are off God, and haue overcome them: for greater is he that is in you, then he that is in the worlde. They are off the worlde, therefore speake they off the worlde, and the worlde herkeneth vnto them. We are of God, ††† and he that knoweth God, herkeneth vnto vs: he that is not of God, heareth vs not. Hereby knowe we the sprete of trueth, and \bar{y} sprete of erreure.

Dearly beloued, let vs loue one another, for loue commeth of God. And euery one \bar{y} loueth, is borne of God, and knoweth God. He that loueth not, knoweth not God: for God is loue. * By this appeared the loue of God to vs warde, because that God sent his onely begotten sonne in to this worlde, that we mighte lyue thorow him. Herein is loue, not that we loued God, but that he loued vs, †and sent his sonne to make agramēt for oure synnes.

Dearly beloued, yf God so loued vs, we oughte also to loue one another. ‡No man hath sene God at eny tyme. Yf we loue one another, God dwelleth in vs, and his loue is perfecte in vs. Hereby knowe we that we dwell in him, and he in vs, because he hath geuen vs of his sprete. And we haue sene, & testifye that the father sent the sonne to be the Sauoure of the worlde. § Whosoever now confesseth ¶ Iesus is the sonne of God in him dwelleth God, and he in God: and we haue knowne and beleued the loue that God hath to vs.

¶ God is loue, and he that dwelleth in loue dwelleth in God, and God in him. Here in is the loue perfecte with vs, that we shulde haue a fre boldnesse in the daye of iudgment: for as he is, euē so are we in this worlde. Feare is not in loue, but perfecte loue casteth out feare: for feare hath paynefulness. He that feareth, is not perfecte in loue.

Let vs loue him, for he loued vs first. ¶ Yf eny man saye: I loue God, & yet hateth his brother, he is a lyar. For he that loueth not his brother whom he seyth, how can he loue God, whom he seyth not? And this cōmaundement haue we of him, ¶ that he which loueth God, shulde loue his brother also.

The b. Chapter.

¶ WHO so euer beleueth that Iesus is Christ, is borne of God. And who soeuer loueth him that begat, loueth him also which was begotten of him. By this we knowe that we loue Gods children, whan we loue God, and kepe his commaundementes. For this is the loue of God, that we kepe his commaundementes, †† and his commaundementes are not greuous. For all that is borne of God, ouer commeth the worlde: and this is the victory that ouercommeth the worlde, euē oure faith. Who is it ¶ ouercommeth the worlde, but he which beleueth that Iesus is the sonne of God?

This is he that cōmeth with water and bloude, euen Iesus Christ: not with water onely, but with water and bloude.† And it is the sprete that beareth wytnes: for the sprete is the trueth. (For there are thre which beare recorde in heauen: the father, the worde, and the holy goost, & these thre are one.) And there are thre which beare recorde in earth: the sprete, water and bloude, and these thre are one.

Yf we receaue the witsnesse of men, the witsnesse of God is greater: for this is the wytnesse of God, which he testified of his sonne. § He that beleueth on ¶ sonne of God, hath the wytnes in him selfe. He that beleueth not God, hath made him a lyar. And this is that recorde, euen ¶ God hath geuē vs euerlastinge life. ¶ And this life is in his sonne. He that hath the sonne of God, hath life: He that hath not the sonne of God, hath not life.

These thinges haue I wryttē vnto you, which beleue on the name of the sonne of God, that ye maye knowe, how that ye haue eternall life, and that ye maye beleue on ¶ name of the sonne of God. And this is the fre boldnesse which we haue towarde him, that yf we axe eny thinge acordinge to his wyll, he heareth vs. And yf we knowe that he heareth vs what so euer we axe, then are we sure that we haue ¶ petitions, which we haue desyred of him.

Yf eny man se his brother synne a synne not vnto death, let him axe, and he shal geue him life, for thē ¶ synne not vnto death. There is a ¶ synne vnto death, for the which saye I not that a man shulde praye. All vnrighteousnes is synne, and there is synne not vnto death.

He wryteth vnto a certayne lady, reioyseth that her children walke in the trueth, exhorteth the vnto loue, warneth them to beware of soch disceauers as deny that Iesus Christ came in the flesh, prayeth them to contynue in the doctryne of Christ, and to haue nothinge to do with them that bringe not this lernynge.

THE Elder. To þy electe lady and hir childrē whom I loue in the trueth: & not I onely, but all they also that haue knowne the trueth, for the truthe sake which dwelleth in vs, and shalbe with vs for euer.

Grace, mercy, and peace be with you frō the LORDE Iesus Christ þy sonne of the father in the trueth and in loue.

I am greatly reioysed, that I haue founde amonge thy children, them that walke in þy trueth, as we haue receaued a commaundement of the father. And now lady I beseke the (not as though I wrote a new commaundement vnto the, but the same which we haue had from the begynnyng) that we loue one another. And this is the loue, that we walke after his commaundementes.

This is the commaundement (as ye haue herde frō the begynnyng) that we shulde walke therin. * For many disceauers are come in to the worlde, which confesse not þy Iesus Christ is come in the flesh: this is a disceauer and an Antechrist. Take hede to youre selues, that we lose not that which we haue wrought, but that we maye receaue a full rewarde. Who so euer transgresseth, and abydeyth not in the doctryne of Christ, hath not God: he that abydeyth in þy doctryne of Christ, hath both the father and the sonne.

† Yf eny man come vnto you, and brynge not this doctryne, receaue him not in to the house, nether salute him: for he that saluteth him, is partaker of his euell dedes. I had many thinges to wryte vnto you: neuertheles I wolde not wryte with papyre and ynke, but I trust to come vnto you, and to speake with you mouth mouth, that oure ioye maye be full. The summe of this epistle.

He is glad of Gaius, that he walketh in the trueth: exhorteth him to be louynge vnto the poore christen in their persecucion, sheweth the vnkynde dealyng of Diotrefes, and the good reporte of Demetrius.

THE Elder. To the beloued Gaius, whom I loue in the trueth. My beloued, I wysse in all thinges, that thou prospere and fare well euen as thy soule prospereth. I reioysed greatly, whan the brethren came, and testified of the trueth that is in þy, how thou walkest in the trueth. I haue now greater ioye, thē to heare that my childrē walke in the trueth.

My beloued, * thou doest faithfully what so euer thou doest to the brethren and to straüngers, which haue borne witness of thy loue before the congregacion: and thou hast done well that thou dydest brynge them forward on their iourney, worthily before God. For because of his names sake they wente forth, and toke nothinge of the Heythen. We therfore oughte to receaue soch, that we mighte be helpers vnto the trueth.

Not onely he himselfe receaueth not the brethre, but also he forbyddeth them that wolde, and thrusteth them out of the congregation.

My beloued, folowe not y^e which is euell, but that which is good. He that doeth well,

Chap. XII.

An exhortacion to be patient and stedfast in trouble and aduersite, vpon hope of euerlastinge rewarde. A commendacion of the new Testament aboue the olde.

Chap. XIII.

He exhorteth vs vnto loue, to hospitalite, to thinke vpon soch as be in aduersite, to manteyne wedlocke, to avoyde cuvetousnesse, to make moch of thē that preach Gods worde, to beware of strange lernynge, to be content to suffre rebuke with Christ, to be thankfull vnto God, and obedient vnto oure heades.

The first Chapter.

A GOD in tyme past dyuersly ¶ many wayes, spake vnto ¶ fathers by prophetes, but in these last dayes he hath spoken vnto vs by his sonne, * whom he hath made heyre of all thinges, by whom also he made the worlde. † Which (sonne) beyng the brightnes of his glory, ¶ the very ymage of his substance, bearinge vp all thinges with the worde of his power, ‡ hath in his owne personne poured oure synnes, and is set on the righte hande of the maiestie on hye: beyng eue as moch more excellēt thē ¶ angels, as he hath optayned a more excellēt ¶ name then they.

B For vnto which of the angels sayde he at any tyme: ¶ Thou art my sonne, this daye haue I begotten the? And agayne: ¶ I will be his father, ¶ he shalbe my sonne: And agayne, whā he bryngeth in the fyrst begottē sonne in to the worlde, he sayeth:  And all the angels of God shal worshiipe him. * And of the angels he sayeth: He maketh his angels spretes, ¶ his mynisters flāmes of fyre. But vnto ¶ sonne he sayeth: † God, thy seate endureth for euer ¶ euer: the cepter of thy kyngdome is a right cepter. Thou hast loued righteousnes, ¶ hated iniquyte: wherfore God (which is thy God) hath anoynted the with the oyle of gladnesse aboue thy felowes. †† And thou LORDE in ¶ begynnynge hast layed the foundation of the earth, and ¶ heauē are the workes of thy handes, §§ they shal perishe, but thou shalt endure: they all shal waxe olde as doth a garmēt, and as a vesture shalt thou change them, and they shalbe chaunged. But thou art ¶ same, and thy yeares shal not fayle. Vnto which of the angels sayde he at any tyme: ¶ Syt thou on my righte hāde, tyll I make thyn enemies thy fote stole? Are they not all mynistrynge spretes, sent to mynister for their sakes, which shalbe heyres of saluacion?

The ij. Chapter.

A WHEREFORE we ought to geue the more hede vnto the thinges which we haue herde, lest we perishe. For yf the worde which was spokē by angels, was stedfast, and euery trasgression and dishobediencie receaued a iust recompence of rewarde, how shal we escape, yf we despyse so greate a saluacion: which ¶¶ after that it beganne to be preached by the LORDE himselfe,  was confirmed vpon vs, by them that herde it, God bearynge witnesseth therto, with tokens, wonders and dyuerse powers, and giftes of the holy goost according to his awne wyll.

For vnto the angels hath he not subdued B the worlde to come, wherof we speake. But one in a certayne place witnesseth ¶ sayeth: ††† What is man, that thou art myndefull of him? or the sonne of man, that thou vysitest him? After thou haddest for a litle season made him lower thē ¶ angels, thou crownedst him with honoure and glory, and hast set him aboue the workes of thy handes. Thou hast put all thinges in subieccion vnder his fete.††† In that he subdued all thinges vnto him, he lefte nothinge that is not put vnder him. Neuertheles now se we not all thinges yet subdued vnto him. But him, which for a litle season was made lesse then the angels, we se that it is Iesus: which is §§§ crowned with honoure and glory for the sufferynge of death, that he by the grace of God, shulde taist of death for all men. For it became him, for whom are all thinges, and by whō are all thinges (after ¶ he had broughte many children vnto glory) that he shulde make the LORDE of their saluacion perfecte thorow sufferynge, for so moch as they all come of one, both he that sanctifieth, ¶ they which are sanctified.

For the which causes sake, he is not C ashamed to call them brethren, sayenge: ¶¶¶ I will declare thy name vnto my brethren, and in the myddes of the cōgregacion wil I prayse the. And agayne: ¶¶¶ I wyl put my trust in him. And agayne: * beholde, here am I and my children, which God hath geuen me.

For as moch then as the children haue flesh and bloude, †††† he also himselfe likewise toke parte with them, †††† he thorow death, mightie take awaye ¶ power of him, which had lordshippe ouer death, that is to saye, ¶ deuell: ¶ that he mighte deluyver thē which thorow feare of death were all their life tyme in daūger of bōdage. For he in no place taketh on him the angels, but ¶ sēde of Abraham taketh he on him. Wherefore in all things it became him to be made *like vnto his brethren, that he mighte be mercifull and a faithfull hye prest in thinges concernynge God, to make agrement for the synnes of ⁊ people. † For in that he himselfe suffred and was tempted, he is able to sucker them that are tempted.

The iiij. Chapter.

¶ WHERFORE holy brethren, ye that are partakers of the heauēly callinge, consider the Embasseatour and hye prest of oure profession, Christ Iesus, which is faithfull to him that ordeyned him, euen as was † Moses in all his house. But this man is worthy of greater honour then moyses, in as moch as he which prepareth the house, hath greater honour in it, then the house it selfe. For every house is prepared of some mā: ‡ but he that ordeyned all thinges, is God. And Moses verely was faithfull in all his house as a mynister, ¶ to beare witnes of those thinges which were to be spoken afterwarde: But Christ as a sonne hath rule ouer his house, ¶ whose house are we, yf we holde fast the confidence and reioysinge of that hope vnto the ende.

Wherefore, as ⁊ holy goost sayeth: †† Todaye yf ye shal heare his voyce, harden not youre hertes, ‡ as in the prouoynke in the daye of temptacion in the wyldernes, where youre fathers tempted me, proued me, and sawe my workes fortye yeares longe. Wherefore I was greued with that generacion, and sayde: They erre euer in their hertes. But they knewe not my wayes, so that I sware in my wrath, that they shulde not enter in to my rest.

Take hede brethren, that there be not in eny of you an euell hert of vnbeleue, to departe from the lyuyng God: but exhorte youre selues daylie, whyle it is called to daye, lest eny of you waxe harde harted thorow ⁊ disceatfulnes of synne. For we are become partakers of Christ, yf we kepe sure vnto ⁊ ende the begynnynge of the substāce, solong as it is sayde: Todaye, yf ye shal heare his voyce, harde not youre hertes, as in the prouocacio. For some wthan they herde, prouoked. Howbeit not all they ⁊ came out of Egipte by Moses. But with whom was he displeased fortye yeares longe? Was he not displeased with them ⁊ synned, whose carcases were ouerthrowne in ⁊ wyldernes? §§ To whom sware he, ⁊ they shulde not enter in to his rest, but vnto thē ⁊ beleued not? And we se ⁊ they coulde not enter in because of vnbeleue.

The iiij. Chapter.

¶ LET vs feare therfore, lest eny of vs forsakyng the promes of entrynge in to his rest, shulde seme to come behinde: for it is declared vnto vs as well as vnto thē. But the worde of preachinge helped not thē, whā they that herde it, beleued it not. (For we which haue beleued, enter in to his rest) acordynge as he sayde: Euen as I haue sworne in my wrath, They shal not enter in to my rest. And that (spake he) verely lōge after that the workes fro the begynnynge of the worlde were made: For he spake in a certayne place of the seūth daye, on this wyse: ¶¶ And God rested on the seuenth daye from all his workes. And in this place agayne: ¶¶ They shal not come in to my rest.

Seynge it foloweth thē, that some must enter there in to: and they, to whom it was first preached, entred not therein for vnbeleues sake, therfore appoynteth he a daye agayne after so longe tyme, and sayeth: Todaye (as it is rehearsed by Dauid) Todaye yf ye shal heare his voyce, then harden not youre hertes. For yf Iosua had geuen them rest, thē wolde he not afterwarde haue spoken, of another daye. Therfore remayneth there yet a rest vnto the people of God. For he that is entred in to his rest, ceaseth from his workes,  as God doth from his.

Let vs make haist therfore to enter in to that rest, lest eny man fall after the same ensample of vnbeleue. For ⁊ worde of God is quicke, and mightie in operacion, and sharper thē eny two edged swerde, and ††† entreth thorow, euen to the deuydinge of the soule ⁊ the sprete, and of ⁊ ioyntes ⁊ the mary, and is a iudger of the thoughtes ⁊ intētes of the hert, nether is there eny creature invisible in ⁊ sighte of him. But all thinges are naked ⁊ bare vnto ⁊ eyes of hi of whō we speake.

The v. Chapter.

A SEYNGE then that we haue a greate hye prest, euē Iesus y sonne of God, which is entred in to heauen, let vs holde oure profession. For we haue not an hye prest which cā not haue cōpassion on oure infirmities, but was in all poyntes tēpted, like as we are, but * without synne. Let vs therefore go boldly vnto the † seate of grace that we maye receaue mercy, and fynde grace to helpe in the tyme of nede.

B For euery hye prest that is taken frō amōge men, is ordeyned for men in thinges pertayninge to God, † to offer giftes and sacrifices for synne: which can haue cōpassion on the ignoraut, and on them that are out of the waye, for so much as he himselfe also is compassed aboute with infirmyte. Therefore is he bounde to offer for synnes, as well for him selfe as for y people. And nomā taketh y honoure vnto himselfe, but he that is called of God, § as was Aaron.

C Euen so Christ glorified not himselfe to be made hye prest, but he y sayde vnto him: || Thou art my sonne, this daye haue I begotten the. As he sayeth also in another place: ¶ Thou art a prest for euer after y order of Melchisedech.  And in y dayes of his fleshe, he offred vp prayers ¶ supplicacions, with strōge cryenge ¶ teares vnto him y was able to saue him frō death: ¶ was herde also, because he had God in honoure. †† And though he was Gods sonne, yet lerned he obedience, by those thinges which he suffred. And he beyng made perfecte, became the cause of euerlasting saluaciō, vnto all the y obeye him, and is called of God an hye prest after the order of Melchisedech. Wherof we haue many thinges to saye, which are harde to be vttered, because ye are dull of hearynge. †† For where as concernynge the tyme ye ought to be teachers, yet haue ye nede agayne, y we teach you the first preceptes of the worde of God: and are become such as haue nede of mylke, and not stronge meate. For euery one that is fed yet with mylke, is vnexperte in the worde of righteousness, for he is but a babe. But stronge meate belongeth vnto them y are perfecte, which thorow custome haue their wyttes exercysed to iudge both good and euell.

WHERFORE let vs leaue the doctryne pertaynyng to the begynnynge of a Christen life, and let vs go vnto perfection: and now nomore laye y foundation of repētaunce from deed workes, and of faith toward God, of baptyme, of doctryne, of layenge on of hādes, of resurreccion of the deed, ¶ of eternall iudgment. And so wil we do §§ yf God permytte. ||| For it is not possible, that they which were once lighted, and haue taisted of the heauēly gyfte, and are become partakers of the holy goost, ¶ ¶ haue taisted of y good worde of God, and of the power of the worlde to come, yf they fall awaye (and concernynge them selues crucifye the sonne of God afreszhe, and make a mocke off him) that they shulde be renued agayne vnto repētaunce.

For the earth, that drynketh in the rayne, which commeth oft vpon it, and bringeth forth herbes mete for them that dresse it, receaueth blessinge of God: But y grounde which beareth thornes and thistles, is nothinge worth, and nye vnto cursynge: whose ende is to be brent. Neuertheles (ye dearly beloued) we trust to se better of you, and y saluaciō is nyer, though we thus speake.  For God is not vnrighteous, that he shulde forget youre worke and laboure of loue, which ye shewed in his name, when ye mynistrd vnto the sayntes, and yet mynister. Yee and we desyre, that euery one of you shewe the same diligence, to the stablyshinge of hope euen vnto the ende, that ye faynte not, but folowe them which thorow faith and paciēce inheret the promyses. For when God made promes to Abraham, because he had none greater to sweare by, ††† he sware by himselfe, and sayde: Surely I wil blesse the and multiplye y in dede. And so he abode paciētly, and op-tayned the promes.

dauntly to shewe vnto the heyres of promes the stablenes of his counsell, added an oath y by two immutable thinges (in the which it is vnpossible y God shulde lye) we mighte haue a stronge consolacion: euen we, which are fled to holde fast the hope that is set before vs, which (hope) we haue as a sure and stedfast anker of oure soule. Which (hope) also entreth in, in to those thinges that are within y vayne, whether the forerūner is for vs entred in, euē Iesus, which is made an hye prest for euer after y order of Melchisedech.

The viij. Chapter.

THIS Melchisedech * kyng of Salem (which beynge prest of the most hye God, met Abraham as he returned agayne from the slaughter of the kynges, & blessed him, vnto whom Abraham also gaue tithes of all the goodes) first is by interpretation kyng of righteousnes: after that is he kyng of Salem also (that is to saye, kyng of peace) without father, without mother, without kynne, and hath nether begynnyng of dayes, nether ende of life: but is likened vnto the sonne of God, and contynueth a prest for euer.

But cōsider how greate a man this was, to whom the Patriarke Abraham gaue tithes of the spoyles. † And verely the children of Leui, whan they receaue the presthode, haue a commaundement acordynge to the lawe, to take the tithes of the people, that is to saye, of their brethrē, though they also came out of the loynes of Abraham.

But he whose kynred is not counted amōge them, receaued tithes of Abraham and blessed him that had the promes. Now is it so without all naysayenge, that the lesse receaueth blessinge of y better. And here men that dye, receaue tithes. But there he receaueth tithes, of whom it is witnessed that he lyueth. And to saye the trueth, Leui himselfe also which receaueth tithes, payed tithes in Abraham: for he was yet in the loynes of his father Abraham, whan Melchisedech met him.

Yf now therfore perfeccion came by the presthode of the Leuites (for vnder the same (presthode) the people receaued the lawe) what neded it then furthermore, that another prest shulde ryse after the order of Melchisedech, and not after the order of Aaron?

‡ For yf the presthode be trāslated, the of necessite must the lawe be translated also. For he of whom these thinges are spoken is of another trybe, of the which neuer man serued at the altare.

For it is euident, § that oure LORDE ¶ spronge of the trybe of Iuda, to the which trybe Moses spake nothinge cōcernynge presthode, And it is yet a more euident thinge, yf after the symilitude of Melchisedech there aryse another prest, which is not made after y lawe of the carnall commaundement, but after the power of the endlesse life (* For he testifieth: Thou art a prest for euer after the order of Melchisedech) then the commaundement that wente before, is disanulled, because of his weaknesse, and vnprofitablenes. For the lawe made nothinge perfecte, but was an introduccion of a better hope, by y which hope we drawe nye vnto God. And for this cause is it a better hope, y it was not promysed without an oath. Those prestes were made without an oath, but this prest with an oath, by him that sayde vnto him: The LORDE sware, and wyl not repent: Thou art a prest for euer after the order of Melchisedech. Thus is Iesus become a stablischer of so moch a better Testamēt.

And amonge them many were made prestes, because they were not suffred to endure by the reason of death. But this man, because that he endureth euer, hath an euerlastinge presthode. Wherefore he is able also euer to saue them, that come vnto God by him: & lyueth euer, ¶ to make intercession for vs.

For it became vs to haue soch an hye prest as is holy, innocent, vndefyled, separate from synners, and made hyer then heauen: which nedeth not daylie (§ as yonder hye prestes) to offre vp sacrifice first for his awne synnes, and then for the peoples synnes. For that dyd he once for all, whan he offered vp him selfe.  For the lawe maketh men prestes which haue infirmitie: but the worde of the oath, that came sence the lawe, maketh the sonne prest, which is perfecte for euermore.

seate of maiestie in heauē: and is a mynister of holy thinges, and of the true Tabernacle, which God pitched, ⁊ not man. For euery hye prest is ordened to offre giftes and sacrifices: Wherefore it is of necessite, † this man haue somewhat also to offer. For he were not a prest, yf he were vpon earth, where are prestes † acordynge to the lawe offer giftes (which prestes serue vnto the ensample and shadowe of heauēly thinges, euen as the answer of God was geuen vnto Moses, when he was aboute to fynish the Tabernacle: * Take hede (sayde he) that thou make all thinges accordinge to the patrone shewed the in the mount.) But now hath he optayned a more excellent office, in as moch as he is the mediatur of a better Testament, which was made for better promyses. For yf that first (Testament) had bene faultles, then shulde no place haue bene soughte for the secōde. For in rebukynge thē he sayeth: † Beholde, the dayes wyl come (sayeth the LORDE) that I wyl fynish vpō the house of Israel, and vpon the house off Iuda, a new Testament: not as the Testament which I made with their fathers, in that daye when I toke them by the handes, to lede them out of the londe of Egipte: † for they contynued not in my Testament, and I regarded them not, sayeth the LORDE.

¶ For this is the Testament, that I wil make with the house of Israell after those dayes, sayeth the LORDE. I wyl geue my lawes in their mynde, and in their hertes wyl I wryte them: † And I wil be their God, and they shal be my people: and they shal not teach euery mā his neghbour, and euery man his brother, sayenge: knowe † LORDE, for they shal knowe me from the leest to the most of them: for I wil be mercifull ouer their vnrighteousnesses: And on their synnes ⁊ on their iniquities wyl I not thinke eny more. In that he sayeth: A new, he weereth out † olde. Now † which is worne out and waxed olde, is ready to vanish awaye.

The ix. Chapter.

¶ THAT first Tabernacle verely had ordinaunces, and seruynges off God and outwarde holynes. ¶ For there was made a foretabernacle, wherin was † candilsticke, and the table, and the † shewe bred: and this is called † Holy. But behynde the seconde vayle was the Tabernacle which is called Holiest of all, which had the golden censor, and the  Arke of the Testament ouerlaid rounde aboute with golde, wherin was the † golden pot with Manna, and Aarons rodd: † that florished, and the tables of the Testament: Aboute therein were the Cherubins off glory ouershadowynge the Mercyseate: Of which thinges it is not now to speake particularly.

When these thinges were thus ordeyned, the prestes wente allwayes in to the first Tabernacle, and excuted † seruyce of God. † But in to the seconde wente the hye prest alone once in the yeare, not without bloude, which he offred for himselfe and for the ignorance of the people. Wherwith the holy goost this signifyeth, that the † waye of holynes was not yet opened, whyle as yet the first Tabernacle was stondynge. Which was a symilitude for the tyme then present, in the which were offred giftes and sacrifices, and coulde not make perfecte (as partaynyng to the conscience) him, that dyd the Gods seruyce onely with meates and drynkes, and dyuerse waszhinges, and iustifienges of the flesh, which were ordeyned vnto the tyme of reformation.

But Christ beynge an hye prest of good thinges to come, came by a greater and a more perfecte † Tabernacle, not made with handes, that is to saye, not of this maner buyldynge: nether by the bloude of goates or calues:  but by his owne bloude entred he once for all in to the holy place, and hath founde eternall redempcion. For yff the bloude off oxen and off goates, † and the aszhes off the cowe when it is sprenkled, haloweth the vnclane as touchynge the purification of the flesh, How moch more shal the bloude of Christ (which thorow the eternall sprete offred him selfe without spot vnto God) pouрге oure conscience from deed workes, † for to serue the lyuynge God? were vnder the first Testament) they which were called mighte receaue the promes of eternall inheritance. For where soeuer is a Testament, there must also be the death of him that maketh the testament.

*For a Testamēt taketh auctorite whan men are deed: for it is of no value, as longe as he that made it is alyue. For the which cause that first Testamēt also was not ordeyned without bloude. For whan all the commaundementes (acordinge to the lawe) were red of Moses vnto all the people, he toke f̄ bloude of calues and of goates, with water and purple woll and ysope, and sprenkled the boke and all the people, sayenge: This is the bloude of the Testament, which God hath appoynted vnto you. And the Tabernakle and all the vessels of the Gods seruyce sprenkled he with bloude likewise. And almost all thinges are poured with bloude after the lawe: and without shedyng of bloude is no remission. It is necessary then, that the symilitude of heauenly thinges be purified with soche: but f̄ heauenly thinges them selues are purified with better sacrifices, then are those.

For Christ is not entred in to the holy places f̄ are made with handes (which are but symilitudes of true thinges) but in to the very heauen, for to appeare now before the face of God for vs: Not to offer himselfe offt as the hye prest entred in to the holy place every yeare with straunge bloude: for thē must he often haue suffred sence the worlde beganne. But now in the ende of the worlde hath he appeared once, to put synne to flight, by the offerynge vp of himselfe. And as it is appoynted vnto mē f̄ they shal once dye, and then cometh the iudgmēt: †Euē so Christ was once offred, to take awaye the synnes of many. And vnto them that loke for him, shal he appeare agayne without synne vnto saluacion.

The x. Chapter.

FOR the lawe f̄ which hath but the shadowe off good thinges to come, and not the thinges in their awne fashion, can neuer by the sacrifices which they offer yeare by yeare continually, make the commers there vnto perfecte: Els shulde they haue ceased to haue bene offred, because that the offerers once poured, shulde haue had nomore conscience of synnes. Neuertheles in those sacrifices there is made but a remembraunce of synnes euey yeare. ¶ For it is vnpossible f̄ the bloude of oxen and of goates shulde take awaye synnes. Wherefore whan he cometh in to the worlde, he sayeth: † Sacrifice ¶ offerynge thou woldest not haue, but a body hast thou ordeyned me. Burntofferynges and synneofferynges hast thou not alowed. Then sayde I: Lo, I come. In the begynnyng of the boke it is wrytten of me, that I shulde do thy wyl O God. About whā he had sayde: Sacrifice and offerynge, and burnt sacrifices ¶ synofferynges thou woldest not haue, nether hast alowed (which yet are offered after f̄ lawe). Thē sayde he: Lo, I come to do thy wil O God: there taketh he awaye the first, to stablyzhe the latter: In the which wyl we are sanctified by the offerynge vp of the body of Iesus Christ once for all.

And euery prest is ready daylie mynstringe, and oftymes offereth one maner of offerynges, which can neuer take awaye synnes. But this man whan he had offred for synnes, one sacrifice which is of value for euer, sat him downe on the righte hande of God, and from hence forth tarieth, tyll his foes be made his fote stole. For with one offerynge hath he made perfecte for euer, thē that are sanctified. And the holy goost also beareth vs recorde of this, euen whan he sayde before: †† This is the Testament, that I wyl make vnto them after those dayes, sayeth f̄ LORDE: I wyl geue my lawes in their hertes, and in their myndes wyl I wryte them, and their synnes and iniquities wyl I remembre nomore. And where remission of these thinges is, there is nomore offerynge for synne.

Seynge now brethrē, that we haue a ††fre sure inтраnce in to that Holy place, by the bloude of Iesu (which he hath prepared vnto vs for a new and lyuyng waye, thorow the vayle, that is to saye, by his flesh) and seynge also that we haue an hye prest ouer the house of God, let vs drawe nye with a true hert in a full faith, sprenkled in oure hertes from an euell conscience, and washed in oure bodies with pure water: and let vs kepe the profession of oure hope without wauerynge (for he is faithfull that hath promysed) and let vs conside one another to f̄ prouokinge of loue and of good workes : and let vs not forsake the fellowship that we haue amōge oure selues, as the maner of some is : but let vs exhorte one another, and that so much the more, because ye se that the daye draweth nye.

*For yf we synne wylfully after that we haue receaued the knowlege of the trueth, there remaineth vnto vs nomore sacrifice for synnes, but a fearful lokinge for iudgment, and violente fyre, which shal deuoure y aduersaries. †He y despyseth Moses lawe, dyeth without mercy vnder two or thre witnessen : Of how moch sorer punyshment (suppose ye) shal he be counted worthy, which treadeth vnder fote the sonne of God, and coueteth the bloude of y Testamēt (wherby he is sanctified) an vnwholy thinge, ⁊ doth dishonoure to the sprete of grace? For we knowe him that hath sayde : Vengeance is myne, I wil recompence, sayeth the LORDE. And agayne : § The LORDE shal iudge his people. It is a fearfull thinge to fall in to the handes of the luyngye God.

But call ye to remēbraunce y dayes y are past, i y which after ye had receaued lighte, ye endured a greate fighte off aduersities : partly whyle all mē wōdred ⁊ gased at you for the shame and tribulacion that was done vnto you : and partly whyle ye became cōpanyons of them which so passed their tyme. For ye haue suffred with my bōdes, and toke a worth y spoylinge of youre goodes, and that with gladnes, knowyng in youre selues, how that ye haue in heauen a better ⁊ an endureinge substance. Cast not awaye therefore youre confidence, which hath so greate a rewarde. ¶ For ye haue nede of patience, that after ye haue done the wil of God, ye mighte receaue the promes. ¶ For yet ouer a litle whyle, and then he that shal come, wyl come, and wyl not tary. But the iust shal lyue by his faith : And yf he withdrawe himselfe awaye, my soule shal haue no pleasure in him. As for vs, we are not of those which withdrawe them selues to damnacion : but of them that beleue to the wyngyng of the soule.

The xi. Chapter.

FAITH is a sure confidence of thinges which are hoped for, and a certaynte of thinges which are not sene. By it y Elders were well reported of. Thorow faith we vnderstonde, that the worlde and all the thinges which are sene, were made of naughte by the worde of God.

† By faith offered Abell vnto God a more plenteous sacrifice : by the which he optayned wytnesse, that he was righteous : God testifyenge of his giftes, by the which also he beyng deede, yet speaketh.

‡ By faith was Enoch takē awaye, that he shulde not se death : and was not founde, because God had taken him awaye. For afore he was taken awaye, he had recorde that he pleased God. But without faith it is vnpossible to please God. For he that commeth vnto God, must beleue that God is, ⁊ y he is a rewarder of them that seke him.

§ By faith Noe honoured God, after y he was warned of thinges which were not sene, ⁊ prepared the Arke, to y sauinge of his household : thorow the which Arke he condemned the worlde, and became heyre of the righteousness, which commeth by faith.

* By faith Abraham (whā he was called) obeyed, to go out in to the place, which he shulde afterwarde receaue to inheritance : and he wente out, not knowyng whither he shulde go.

By faith was he a straunger in the lōde of promes as in a straunge cowntre, ⁊ dwelt in tabernacles : and so dyd Isaac ⁊ Iacob, heyres with him of the same promes : for he looked for a cite which hath a foundation, whose buylder and maker is God.

By faith Sara also receaued strength to be with childe, and was deliuered of a childe whan she was past age, because she iudged him to be faithfull which had promysed. And therefore spronge there of one (ye euen off one which was as good as deed concernyng the body) so many in multitude ¶ as the starres off the skye, and as the sonde off the See shore, which is innumerable.

All these dyed acordinge to faith, and receaued not the promyses, but sawe thē afarre off, and beleued them, and saluted them : ¶ and cōfessed, that they were straungers ⁊ pilgrims vpon earth. For they that saye such thinges, declare, that they seke a naturall countrie. And doutles yf they had bene mynde full off that countrie from whence they came out, they had leysure to haue returned agayne. But now they desyre a better, that is to saye, a heauely. * Wherefore God is not ashamed of the, euē to be called their God: for he hath prepared a cite for them.

By faith Abraham offered vp Isaac, whā he was tempted, and gaue ouer his onely begotten sonne, in whom he had receaued the promyses, of whom it was sayde: In Isaac shal thy sede be called: For he considered, y God was able to raise vp agayne from the dead. Therefore receaued he him for an example.

By faith Isaac blessed Iacob and Esau, concernynge thynges to come.

By faith Iacob, whan he was a dyenge, blessed both the sonnes off Ioseph, and bowed himselfe towarde the toppe of his cepter.

By faith Ioseph whan he dyed, remembred y departynge of the childre of Israel, and gaue comaundemēt concernynge his bones.

By faith Moses whā he was borne, was hyd thre monethes of his Elders, because they sawe that he was a proper childe, nether feared they the kynges comaundemēt.

By faith Moses whan he was greate, refused to be called the sonne of Pharaos daughter: and chose rather to suffre aduersite with the people of God, then to enioye y pleasures of synne for a season: and esteemed the rebuke of Christ greater riches, then the treasure of Egipte: for he had respecte vnto the rewarde.

By faith he forsoke Egipte, and feared not the fearcenes of the kyng: for he endured, euē as though he had sene him which is inuisible.

By faith he helde Easter, and the effusion of bloude, lest he which slewe the firstborne, shulde touche them.

By faith they passed thorow the reed See as by drye londe: which whā the Egipcians assayed to do, they were drowned.

By faith the walles of Iericho fell, whā they were compased aboute seuen dayes.

By faith the harlot Raab perished not with the vnbeleuers, whā she had receaued the spies to lodginge peaceably

But other were racked, and accepted no deluyeraunce, that they mighte optayne the resurreccion that better is.

Other taisted of mockings and scourgings, of bondes also and presenment: † were stoned, were hewen a sunder, were tempted, were slayne with the swerde, † wente aboute in shepe skynnes and goates skynnes, in nede, in tribulacion, in vexacion, which (men) the worlde was not worthy of: they wandred aboute in wyldernesses, vpon mountaynes, in dennes and caues of the earth. And these all thorow faith optayned good reporte, and receaued not y promes: because God had prouyded a better thinge for vs, that they without vs shulde not be made perfecte.

Cōsidre him therefore that endured soch speakinge agaynst hi of synners, lest ye be weery and faynte in youre myndes: for ye haue not yet resisted vnto bloude, stryuinge agaynst synne, and haue forgotten the consolacion, which speaketh vnto you as vnto children: ¶ My sonne, despyse not the chastenyng off the LORDE, nether faynte whan thou art rebuked of him: ¶ for whō the LORDE loueth, him he chasteneth, yee and he scourgeth euery sonne that he receaueth.

Yf ye be not vnder correccion (wherof all are partakers) then are ye bastardes and not sonnes. Morouer seynge we haue had fathers off oure flesh which corrected vs, & we gaue them reuerence, shulde we not then moch rather be in subieccion vnto y^e father of spirituall giftes, y^e we mighte lyue? And they verely for a few dayes nurtred vs after their awne pleasure: but he lerneth vs vnto y^e which is profitable, that we mighte receaue of his holynes. No maner chastisyng for the present tyme semeth to be ioyous, but greuous: neuertheles afterwarde it bringeth the quyetie frute of righteousnes, vnto them which are exercysed therby. *Lifte vp therfore the handes which were let downe, and the weake knees, and se that ye haue straight steppes vnto youre fete, lest eny haltinge turne you out of the waye, yee let it rather be healed.

But now promyseth he, & sayeth: †† Yet once more wyl I shake, not the earth onely, but also heauen. No doute that same that he sayeth yet once more, signifieth the remouynge awaye of those thinges which are shaken, as off thinges which are made: that y^e thinges which are not shakē, maye remayne. The Epistle of S. James.

The summe of this epistle.

Chap. I.

He exhortheth to reioyse in trouble, to be feruent in prayer with stedfast beleue, to loke for all good thinges from aboue, to forsake all vyce : and thankfully to receaue the worde of God, not onely hearynge it and speakyng of it, but to do therafter in dede. True religion or deuocion what it is.

Chap. II

He forbyddeth to haue eny respecte of personnes, but to regarde the poore as wel as the ryche, to be lounge and mercifull, and not to boast of faith where no dedes are : for it is but a deed faith, where no good workes folowe not.

Chap. III.

What good and euell commeth thorow the tonge. The dutye of soch as be lerned. The difference betwixte the wysdome of the gospell and the wysdome of the worlde.

Chap. IIII.

Warre and fightinge commeth of voluptuousnesse. The frendshipe of the worlde is enemyte before God. An exhortacion to flye slauder and the vanite of this life.

Chap. V.

He threateneth the wicked rych mē, exhortheth vnto pacience, to beware of swearynge, one to knowlege his fautes to another, one to praye for another, and one to labour to bryng another to the trueth.

The first Chapter.

A JAMES the seruauit of God and of the LORDE Iesus Christ, sendeth gretinge to the xij. trybes which are *scatered here & there. My brethren, counte it exceedynge ioye whē ye fall in to diuers temptacions, for as moche as ye knowe, how ŷ the † tryinge of youre faith bringeth pacience: and let pacience haue her perfect worke, ŷ ye maye be perfecte and sounde, lakinge nothinge.

‡ Yf eny of you lacke wysdome, let him axe of God, which geueth to all men indifferentlie, and casteth no man in the teth: and it shal be geuē him. But let him axe in faith and wauer not. For he that douteth, is lyke the wauēs of ŷ See, tost of the wynde, and caried with violence. Nether let ŷ man thinke that he shal receaue eny thinge of ŷ LORDE. A wauerynge mynded mā ys vnstable in all his waies.

B Let the brother of lowe degre reioyce, in ŷ he is exalted: and the rich, in ŷ he is made lowe. For euē as the floure of ŷ grasse shal he vanyshe awaye. The Sonne ryseth with heat and the grasse wydereth, & his floure falleth awaye, and the beautie of the fassion of it periszeth: euen so shal the ryche man perishe with his abundaunce.

¶ Happy is the man that endureth in tēptacion, for when he is tryed, he shal receaue the crowne of life, which the LORDE hath promised to them that loue him.

Let no man saye when he is tempted, ŷ he is tempted of God. For God tēpteth not vnto euell, nether tēpteth he eny man. But euery mā is tēpted, drawne awaye, & entysed of his awne cōcupiscēce. Thē whē lust hath conceaued, she bringeth forth synne, & synne when it is fynished, bringeth forth deeth.

Erre not my deare brethrē. § Euery good gifte, & euery parfait gift, is from aboue, and cometh downe from ŷ father of light, with whom is no variableness, nether is he chaunged vnto darcknes. || Of his awne will begat he vs with the worde of life, that we shulde be the fyrst frutes of his creatures.

¶ Wherefore deare brethren, let euery man be swifte to heare, slowe to speake, and slowe to wrath. For the wrath of mā worketh not that which is righteous before God.

C Wherefore laye aparte all fylthines, all superfluite of maliciounes, & receaue with meknes & worde ŷ is grafted in you, which is able to saue youre soules.  And se that ye be doers of ŷ worde & not hearers only, deceauinge youre awne selues. †† For yf eny heare the worde, and do it not, he is like vnto a mā that beholdeth his bodily face in a glasse. For asone as he hath loked on himselfe, he goeth his waye, and forgetteth immediatly what his faszhiōn was. ‡ But who so loketh in ŷ perfect lawe of libertie, and continueth therin (yf he be not a forgetfull hearer, but a doer of the worke) the same shalbe happie in his dede.

Yf eny man amonge you seme deuoute, & refrayne not his tōge: but deceaue his awne herte, this mannes deuocion is in vayne. Pure deuocion and vndefiled before God the father, is this: to visit the frendlesse and widdowes in their aduersite, and to kepe him selfe vnspotted of the §§ worlde.

The ij. Chapter.

BRETHREN, haue not the faith of oure LORDE Iesus Christ ŷ LORDE of glory in ||| respecte of persons. Yf ther come in to youre cōpany a mā with a goldē ryng and in goodly aparell, & ther come in also a poore man in vyle raymēt, & ye haue a respecte to him ŷ weareth the gaye clothinge & saye vnto hī: Sit thou here i a good place, & saye vnto ŷ poore, stonde thou there or sit here vnder my fōte stole: are ye not parcial in youre selues, and haue iudged after euyl thoughtes?

Harken my deare beloued brethrē. ¶ Hath not God chosen the poore of this worlde, which are ryche in faith, and heyres of the kyngdom which he promysed to thē that loue him? But ye haue despised the poore. Are not the rych they which oppresse you: & they which drawe you before iudges? Do not they speake euell of that good name after which ye be named.

Yf ye fulfill the royall lawe acordinge to the scripture which saith: † Thou shalt loue thyne neghbour as thy selfe, ye do well. But yf ye regarde one person more then another, ye cōmit synne, and are rebuked of the lawe as trasgressours.  Whosoever shal kepe the whole lawe, and yet fayle in one poynt, he is gyltie in all. For he that sayde: Thou shalt not commit adulterie, sayed also: Thou shalt not kyll. Though thou do none adul-terie, yet yf thou kill, thou art a transgressor of the lawe. So speake ye, and so do as they that shalbe iudged by the lawe of libertie. * For ther shalbe iudgement merciles to him that sheweth no mercy, & mercy reioiseth against iudgment.

+ What a vayleth it my brethrē, though a man saye he hath faith, when he hath no dedes? Can faith saue him? + If a brother or a sister be naked or destitute of dayly fode, & one of you saye vnto them: Departe in peace, God sende you warmnes and fode: not withstōdinge ye geue them not tho thinges which are needfull to the body: what helpeth it them? Euen so faith, yf it haue no dedes, is deed in it selfe.

¶ Ye & a man might saye: Thou hast faith, and I haue dedes: Shewe me thy faith by thy dedes: and I wil shewe the my faith by my dedes. Beleuest thou yf ther is one God? Thou doest well. § The deuils also beleue and tremble.

Wilt thou vnderstōde o thou vayne man that faith with out dedes is deed: Was not Abraham oure father iustified thorow workes when he offered Isaac his sonne vpon the alter? Thou seist how yf faith wrought with his dedes, and through yf dedes was the faith made perfect: & the scripture was fulfilled which saith: ¶ Abraham beleued God and it was reputed vnto him for rightewesnes: and he was called yf frende of God. Ye se then how that of dedes a man is iustified, and not of faith only. ¶ Likewise also was not Raab the harlot iustified thorow workes, when she receaued the messengers, and sent them out another waye? For as the body, with oute the sprete is deed, euen so faith with out dedes is deed.

¶ MY brethrē, be not euery man a  master, remēbrynge how that we shall receaue the more damnacion: for in many thinges we synne all. * Yf a man synne not in worde, the same is a perfecte man, & able to tame all the body. soeuer the violence of the gouernier wyll. Euen so the tōge is a lyttell member, and bosteth great thinges.

Beholde how gret a thinge a lyttell fyre kyndleth, and the tonge is fyre, and a worlde of wyckednes. So is the tonge set amonge oure membres, that it defileth the whole body, and setteth a fyre all that we haue of nature, and is it selfe set a fyre euen of hell.

All the natures of beastes, and of byrdes, and of serpentes, and thinges of the see, are meked and tamed of the nature of mā. But the tōge can no man tame. Yt is an vnruely euell full of deedly payson. Therwith blesse we God the father, and therwith curse we men which † are made after the similitude of God. Out of one mouth procedeth blessinge and cursynge. My brethrē these thinges ought not so to be. Doth a fountayne sende forth at one place swete water and bytter also? Can the fygge tree, my Brethren, beare oliue beries: ether a vyne beare fygges? So can no fountayne geue bothe salt water and freshe also. If eny man be wyse and endued with learnynge amonge you, let him shewe the workes of his good cōuersacion in meknes that is coupled with wysdome.

But yf ye haue bitter enuyenge and stryfe in youre hertes, reioyce not: nether be lyars agaynst the trueth. This wysdome descendeth not from aboue: but is erthy, and naturall, and dyuelishe. For where enuyenge and stryfe is, there is vnstabilenes and all māner of euell workes. But the wysdom that is frō aboue, is fyrst pure, thē peasable, gentle, and easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good frutes, without iudgynge, and without simulacion: yee, and the frute of rightewesnes is sown in peace, of thē that mayntene peace.

to godwarde? Whosoever wilbe a frende of the worlde, is made \bar{y} enemye of god. Ether do ye thinke \bar{y} the scripture sayth in vayne. The \bar{y} sprete \bar{y} dwelleth in you, lusteth euen contrary to eniue: but geueth more grace.

Submit youre selues to God, and \dagger resist the deuell, \bar{t} he wil flye frō you. Drawe nye to God \bar{t} he wil drawe nye to you. Clense youre hondes ye synners, and pource youre hertes ye wauerynge mynded. Suffre afflictions: sorowe ye and wepe. Let youre laughter be turned to mornynge, and youre ioye to heuynes. \bar{c} Cast downe youre selues before the LORDE, and he shal lift you vp. Backbyte not one another, brethren. He that backbyteth his brother, and he \bar{y} iudgeth his brother, backbyteth the lawe, and iudgeth the lawe. But and yf thou iudge the lawe, thou art not an obseruer of the lawe: but a iudge. There is one lawe geuer, which is able to saue and to destroye. \dagger What art thou that iudgeth another man?

\bar{s} Go to now ye that saye: to daye \bar{t} to morow let vs go into soche a citie and continue there a yeaere, and bye and sell, and wyne: \bar{t} yet cā not tell what shal happē to morowe. For what thinge is youre life? It is euen a vapoure that apereth for a lytell tyme, and thē vanysheth awaye: For that ye ought to say: \bar{y} f the LORDE wil, and yf we liue, let vs do this or that. But nowe ye reioyce in youre bostinges. All soche reioysynge is euell. Therefore \bar{t} to him that knoweth how to do good, and doth it not, to him it is synne.

The 6. Chapter.

\bar{a} GOO to now ye riche men. Wepe, and howle on youre wretchednes^b that shal come vpon you. Your riches is corrupte, youre garmētes are motheaten. Your golde \bar{t} youre siluer are cancred, \bar{t} the rust of them shalbe a witnes vnto you, \bar{t} shal eate youre fleshe, as it were fyre. Ye haue heaped treasure toggeder in youre last dayes: \bar{c} Beholde, the hyre of the labourers which haue reped downe youre feldes (which hyer is of you kept backe by fraude) cryeth: and the cryes of thē which haue reped, are entred in to the eares of the LORDE Sabaoth. Ye haue liued in pleasure^c on the earth and in wantannes. Ye haue noryszhed youre hertes, as in a daye of slaughter. Ye haue cōdemnpd and haue killed the iust, and he hath not resisted you.

Be pacient therfore brethren, vnto the cōmynge of the LORDE. Beholde, the huszbāde man wayteth for the precious frute of \bar{y} earth, and hath longe pacience there vpon, vntill he receaue the erly and the latter rayne. Be ye also pacient therfore, and settle youre hertes, for the commynge of the LORDE draweth nye. Gredge not one agaynst another brethren, lest ye be damned. Beholde, the iudge stondesth before the dore. Take (my brethren) the prophetes for an ensample of sufferynge aduersitie, and of longe pacience, which spake in the name of the LORDE. Beholde we counte them happy which endure. Ye haue hearde \bar{t} of \bar{y} paciēce of Iob, and haue known what ende the LORDE made. For the LORDE is very pitifull and mercifull.

But aboute all thinges my brethrē, swears not, nether by heauē,^d nether by earth, nether by eny other othe. Let youre ye be ye, and youre naye naye: lest ye faule in to ypocricy. Yf eny of you be euell vexed, let hi praye. Yf eny of you be mery, let him singe Psalmes. Yf eny be diseased amonge you, let him call for the elders of the congregacion, \bar{t} let thē praye ouer him, and anoynte him with oyle in the name of the LORDE: and \bar{y} prayer of faith shal saue the sicke, and the LORDE shal rayse him vp: and yf he haue cōmitted synnes, they shalbe foregeuen him.

Knowlege youre fautes one to another: and praye one for another, that ye maye be healed. The prayer of a righteous man auayleth moche, yf it be seruēt. \bar{c} Helias was a mā mortall euen as we are, and he prayed in his prayer, that it might not rayne: \bar{t} it rayned not on the earth by the space of thre yeaeres and sixe monethes. \bar{c} And he prayed agayne, and \bar{y} heauē gaue rayne, \bar{t} \bar{y} earth brought forth her frute.

Brethren, yf eny of you erre frō the trueth and another conuert him, let \bar{y} same knowe that he which conuerted the synner from goynge astraye out off his waye, shal saue a soule frō death, and shal hyde the multitude of synnes.

The Epistle of S. Jude.

The summe of this epistle.

He rebuketh such as beyng blinded with their owne lustes, resist the truth, & that we maye knowe them the better, he sayeth they be such as synne beastly agaynst nature, and despise rulers &c. He exhorteth vs to edifie one another, to praye in the holy goost, to continue in loue, to loke for the cōmyng of the LORDE, and one to helpe another out of the fyre.

IUDAS the seruaut of Iesus Christ, the brother off Iames. To thē which are called, and sanctified in God the father, and preserued in Iesu Christ. Mercy vnto you, and peace and loue be multiplied.

Beloued, when I gaue all diligence to wryte vnto you of the commen saluacion: it was nedefull for me to wryte vnto you, to exhorte you, that ye shulde continually labour in the faith which was once geue vnto the sayntes. * For there are certayne crafty crept in, of which it was wrytten afore tyme vnto soche iudgement. They are vngodly, and turne the grace of oure God vnto wantānes, and denye God the onely LORDE, and oure LORDE Iesus Christ.

My minde is therefore to put you in remēbraunce, for as moche as ye once knowe this, how that † LORDE (after that he had deliuered the people out of Egypt) destroyed them which afterwarde beleued not. † The angels also which kept not their first estate: but left their awne habitacion, he hath reserued in euerlastinge chaynes vnder darchnes vnto the iudgement of the greates daye: euen as † Sodom and Gomor, and the cities aboute them (which in lyke maner defiled them selues with fornicacion and folowed straunge fleszhe) are set forth for an ensample, and suffre the vengeance of eternall fyre. Lykewyse these dremers defyle the fleszhe, despise rulers, and speake euell of them that are in auctorite.

‡ Yet Michael the archangell when he stroue agaynst the deuell, & disputed aboute the body of Moses, durst not geue raylinge sentence, but sayde: the LORDE rebuke the. ¶ But these speake euell off those thinges which they knowe not: and what thinges they knowe naturally, as beastes which are without reason, in tho thinges they corrupte them selues. § Wo be vnto thē, for they haue folowed the waye of Cain, and are vterly geue to the erroure of Balaam for lukers sake, and peryszhe in the treason of Core.

These are spotted which of youre kindnes feast togedder, without feare, fedyng the selues. ¶ Cloudes they are withouten water, caried about of wyndes, and trees without frute at gadringe tyme, twyse deed and plucked vp by the rotes. They are the ragynge waues of the see, fominge out their awne shame. They are wandryng starres, to whō is reserued the myst of darchnes for euer.

¶ Enoch the seventh from Adam prophesied before of suche, saiege: Beholde, the LORDE shal come with thousandes of sayntes, to geue iudgemēt agaynst all men, and to rebuke all that are vngodly amonge thē, of all their vngodly dedes, which they haue vngodly committed, and of all their cruell speakynges, which vngodly synners haue spoken agaynst him.

These are murmurers, complainers, walkyng after their awne lustes, whose mouthes speake proude thynges. They haue mē in greates reuerence because of auantage. But ye beloued, remēber the wordes which were spoken before of the Apostles of oure LORDE Iesus Christ, how that they tolde you ‡ their shulde be begylers in the last tyme, § which shulde walke after their awne vngodly lustes. These are makers off sectes fleshlie, hauyng no sprete.

But ye derlye beloued, edifye youre selues in youre most holy faith, prayenge in the holy goost, and kepe youre selues in the loue of God, lokinge for the mercy of oure LORDE Iesus Christ, vnto eternall life. And haue cōpassion on some, separatinge thē: and other saue with feare, pullinge them out of the fyre, and hate the fylthy vesture of the fleshe.

Vnto him that is able to kepe you, that ye faule not, and to present you faultlesse before ‡ presence of his glory with ioye, ‡ is to saye, to God oure sauoure which only is wyse, be glory, maiestie, dominion, & power, now and for euer. Amen.

Chap. XXI.

In this chapter is describyed the new and spirituall Ierusalem.

Chap. XXII.

The ryuer of the water of life, the frutefulnessse and light of the cite of God. The LORDE geueth euer his seruantes warnyng of thinges for to come: The angel wyl not be worshipped. To the worde of God maye nothinge be added ner mynished there from.

The first Chapter.

THE reuelacion of Iesus Christ, which God gaue vnto him, for to shewe vnto his seruantes thinges which muste shortly come to passe. And he sent and shewed by his angel vnto his seruauant Ihon *which bare recorde of the worde of God, and of the testimony of Iesus Christe, and of all thinges that he sawe. †Happy is he † readeth, and they that heare the wordes of the prophesie and kepe thoo thinges which are wrytten therin. For the tyme is at honde.

Ihon to the seuen cōgregacions in Asia. Grace be with you ⁊ peace, frō him which is and which was, and which is to come, ⁊ frō the seuen spretes which are present before his trone, and from Iesus Christ which is a faithfull witnes, and first begotten of the deed: ⁊ LORDE ouer † kinges of the earth. Vnto him that loued vs and weszhed vs frō synnes in his awne †bloud, and made vs kinges ⁊ Prestes vnto God his father, be glory, and dominion for euer more. Amen. Beholde, he commeth with cloudes, and all eyes shall se him: † ⁊ they also which peersed him. And all kinredes of the earth shal wayle. Euen so. Amen. I am Alpha and Omega, the begynninge and the endinge, † sayeth † LORDE almighty, which is and which was and which is to come.

I Ihon youre brother and cōpanyon in tribulacion, and in the kyngdome and paciēce which is in Iesu Christe, was in the yle of Pathmos for the worde of God, and for † witnessyng of Iesu Christe. I was in the sprete on a sondaye, and herde behynde me, a gret voyce, as it had bene of a trompe, sayenge: I am Alpha and Omega, the fyrst and † laste. That thou seist, write in a boke, and sende it vnto the cōgregacions which are in Asia, vnto Ephesus and vnto Smyrna, and vnto Pargamos, and vnto Thiatira, and vnto Sardis, and vnto Philadelphia, and vnto Laodicia.

And I turned backe to se the voyce that spake to me. And whē I was turned: I sawe seūc goldē candelstyckes, and in the myddes of the candelstyckes, † one like vnto the sonne of man clothed with a lynnin garmēt downe to the ground, and gyrd aboute the brest with a golden gyrdle. His heed, and his heares were whyte, as whyte woll, ⁊ as snowe: † and his eyes were as a flamme of fyre: and his fete like vnto brasse, as though they brēt in a furnace: and his voyce as the sounde of many waters. And he had in his right honde seūc starres. † And out of his mouth went a sharpe two edged swerde. And his † face shone euen as the sonne in his strength.

And when I sawe him, I fell at his fete, euen as deed. And he layde his right honde vpon me, sayenge vnto me: feare not. I am Wryte therfore the thinges which thou hast sene, and the thinges which are, and y thinges which shalbe fulfilled here after: ¶ the mistery of the seuen starres which thou sawest in my right honde, and the seuen golden candelstickes. The seuen starres are the angels of the seue congregacions: And the seuen candelstickes which thou sawest, are the seuen congregacions.

The ij. Chapter.

VNTO the angell of the congregacion of Ephesus wryte: These thinges sayth he that holdeth the seuen starres in his right honde, and walketh in the myddes of the seuen golde candelstickes: I knowe thy workes, and thy labour, and thy pacience, ¶ howe thou cannest not forbear them which are euell: and examynest them which saye they are Apostles, and are not: ¶ hast founde the lyars and hast suffred. And hast paciẽce: and for my names sake hast laboured and hast not faynted. Neuerthelesse I haue somewhat agaynst the, for thou hast lefte thy fyrst loue. Remember therfore frõ whence thou art fallen, and repent, and do the fyrst workes. † Or elles I wyl come vnto the shortly, and wil remoue thy cadelstykke out of his place, excepte thou repent. But this thou hast because thou hatest y dedes of the † Nicolaitans, which dedes I also hate. Let him y hath eares, heare, what y sprete saith vnto the congregacions. To him that ouercommeth, will I geue to eate of the tree of life, which is in the myddes of y paradise of God.

13 And vnto the angell of the congregacion of Smyrna wryte: These thinges saith he that is fyrst, and the last, which was deed, and is aliuẽ: I knowe thy workes and tribulacion and pouerte, but thou art ryche: And I knowe the blasphemie of them which call them selues Iewes and are not: but are the cõgregacion of Sathan. Feare none of the thinges which thou shalt soffre. Beholde, y deuell shal cast of you in to preson, to tempte you, and ye shal haue tribulacion x. dayes. Be faithfull vnto the deeth, and I wil geue y a crowne of life. Let him that hath eares, heare, what

And to the angell of the congregacion in Pergamos wryte: This saith he which ¶ hath the sharpe swerde with two edges: I knowe thy workes, and where thou dwellest, euen where Sathans seat is, and thou kepest my name, ¶ hast not denyed my faith. And in my dayes Antipas was a faithfull witnes of myne, which was slayne amonge you, where Sathan dwelleth. But I haue a fewe thinges agaynst the: that thou hast there, the that mayntayne the doctryne of  Balaam, which taught in Balak, to put occasion of syn before the children of Israell, that they shulde eate of meate dedicat vnto ydoles, and to commyt fornicacion. Euen so hast thou them that mayntayne y doctryne of the Nicolaytans, which thinge I hate. But be cõuerted, or elles I wil come vnto the shortly, and wil fight agaynst the with the swerde of my mouth. Let him y hath eares, heare, what the sprete saith vnto the cõgregacions: To him that ouercommeth, wil I geue to eate māna that is hyd, and wil geue him a whyte stone, ¶ in the stone a newe name wryttẽ, which no man knoweth, sauinge he that receaueth it.

And vnto the angell of the cõgregacion of Theatira write: This saith the sonne of God, ¶ which hath his eyes lyke vnto a flame of fyre, whose fete are like brasse: I knowe thy workes and thy loue, seruice, and faith and thy pacience, and thy dedes, which are mo at the last then at the firste. Not withstandinge I haue a feawe thinges agaynst the, that thou sufferest that woman † Iesabell (which called her selfe a prophetisse) to teache and to deceaue my seruauntes, to make them comytt fornicacion, and to eate meates offered vp vnto ydoles. And I gaue her space to repẽt of her fornicacion, and she repented not. Beholde, I wil cast her into a bed, and them that commit fornicacion with her, in to gret aduersite, excepte they turne from their dedes. And I wil kyll her childrẽ with deeth. And all the cõgregaciõs shal knowe, y I am he which searcheth the reynes and hertes. And I wil geue vnto euery one of you acordynge vnto youre workes.

The iij. Chapter.

2 AND wryte vnto the angell of the congregacion off Sardis: this sayth he that hath the seuen spretes of God, and the seuen starres. I knowe thy workes, thou hast a name that thou luyest, and thou art deed. Be awake, and strength the thinges which remaine, that are redy to dye. For I haue not founde thy workes perfecte before God. Remember therfore how thou hast receaued and hearde, and holde fast, and repent. Yf thou shalt not watche, I wil come on the as a thefe, and thou shalt not knowe what houre I wil come vpon y. Thou hast a fewe names in Sardis, which haue not defyled their garments: and they shal walke with me in whyte, for they are worthy. He that ouercommeth, shalbe clothed in whyte araye, and I wil not put out his name out of the boke of life, and I wil cōfesse his name before my father, and before his angels. Let him y hath eares, heare, what the sprete sayth vnto the congregaciōs.

33 And wryte vnto y angell of the cōgregaciō of Philadelphiā: this sayth he y is holy and true, which hath the keye of David: which openyth and noman shutteth, and shutteth and no man openeth. I knowe thy workes. Beholde, I haue set before the an open doore, and no man can shut it, for thou hast a lyttell strength and hast not denyed my name. Beholde, I shal geue some of the congregacion of Sathan, which call them selues Iewes and are not, but do lye: Beholde: I wil make them, that they shal come and worshippe before thy fete: and shal knowe that I haue loued the.

Because thou hast kept the wordes of my patience, therfore wil I kepe the from the houre of temptacion, which will come vpon all the worlde, to tempte them that dwell vpo the earth. Beholde, I come shortly. Holde that which thou hast, that no mā take awaye thy crowne. Him that ouer commeth, wil I make a pyllar in the temple of my God, and he shal goo no more out.

And I will wryte vpon him, the name of my God, and the name of y cite of my God, newe Ierusalem, which cometh downe out of heauen from my God, and I will wryte vpo him my newe name. Let him that hath eares, heare, what the sprete saith vnto the congregaciōs.

And vnto the angell of the cōgregacion, which is in Laodicia wryte: This sayth Amen the faithfull and true witnes, the begynnynge of y creatures of God. I knowe thy workes, y thou art nether colde nor hot: I wolde thou were colde or hote. So then because thou art bitwene bothe, and nether colde ner hote I wyll spew the out off my mouth: because thou saist thou art riche and incresyd with goodes and hast nede of nothinge, and knowest not how thou art wretched and miserable, poore, blynde, and nakyd. I counsell the to bye of me golde tryed in the fyre, that thou mayste be riche: and whyte rayment, that thou mayste be clothed, that thy fylthy nakednes do not apere: anoynt thine eyes with eye salue, y thou mayste se.

† As many as I loue, I rebuke and chasten. Be feruent therfore and repent. Beholde, I stonde at the doore and knocke. Let him that hath eares, heare, what the sprete saith vnto the cōgregaciōs.

AFTER this I loked, and beholde, a dore was open in heauē, and the fyrste voyce which I harde, was as it were of a trompet talkinge with me, which sayde: come vp hydder, and I wil shewe the thinges which must be fulfilled her after. And immediatly

Apo. 1. d. † Pro. 1. b. Heb. 4. a. § Luc. 22. b.

I was in the sprete: ⁊ beholde, a seate was set in heauen, and one sat on the seate. And he that sat, was to loke vpon like vnto a iaspur stone, and a sardyne stone: And there was a rayne bowe aboute the seate, in syght like to a smaragde. * And aboute the seate were xxiiij. seates. And vpon the seates xxiiij. elders syttinge clothed in whyte rayment, and had on their heades crownes of golde.

And out of ⁊ seate proceded lightnynges, and thundrynges, ⁊ voyces, and there wer seuen lāpes of fyre, burninge before the seate, 33 which are the seuen spretes of God. And before the seate there was a see of glasse like vnto crystall, and in the mydes off the seate, and rounde aboute the seate, were foure beastes full of eyes before and behynde. And the first beest was like a lion, the seconde beest like a calf, and the thyrde beest had a face as a man and the fourth beest was like a flyenge egle. And the foure beestes had eche one off them vj. wynges aboute him, and they were full of eyes with in. And they had no rest daye nether night, sayenge: † holy, holy, holy, is the LORDE God almyghty, which was, and is, and is to come.

And when those beestes gaue glory and honour and thanks to him that sat on the seate, which lyueth for euer and euer: † xxiiij. elders fell downe before him that sat on the trone, and worshipped him ⁊ lyueth for euer, and cast their crownes before ⁊ trone, sayenge: thou art worthy LORDE to receaue glory, and honour, and power, for thou hast created all thinges, and for thy willes sake they are, and were created.

The b. Chapter.

34 AND I sawe in the righte hōde of him, † that sat in the trone, a boke wrytten with in ⁊ on the backside, sealed with seue seals. And I sawe a strōge angell preachinge with a loude voyce: Who is worthy to open the boke, and to loose the seales therof? And no mā in heauē ner in earth, nether vnder ⁊ earth, was able to opē ⁊ boke, nether to loke thereon. And I wepte moch, because no man was founde worthy to open and to rede the boke, nether to loke thereon.

And one of the elders sayde vnto me: wepe not: † Beholde, the lyon which is off the trybe of Iuda, ⁊ rote of David, hath obtayned to opē the boke, and to lowse the seue seales therof. And I behelde, ⁊ lo, in the myddes of the seate, and of ⁊ foure beastes, and in the myddes of ⁊ elders, stode a lambe as though he had bene kylled, which had seuen hornes and seue eyes, which are the seue spretes of God, sent in to all the worlde. And he came and toke the boke out of the right hōde of him that sat vpon the seate.

And when he had taken the boke, the foure 35 beestes and the xxiiij. elders fell downe before the lambe, hauinge harpes and golden vialles full of odoures (which are ⁊ prayers of the sayntes) and they songe a newe songe saynge: thou art worthy to take the boke ⁊ to opē the seales therof: for thou wast kylled, and hast redemed vs by thy bloud, out of all kynredes, and tōges, and people, and nacions, ⁊ hast made vs vnto oure God, kynges and prestes, and we shal raygne on ⁊ earth.

† And I behelde, and I herd the voyce of many angilles aboute the trone, and aboute the beestes and ⁊ elders, and I herde thousand thousandes, sayenge with a loude voyce: Worthy is the lambe that was killed, to receaue power, and riches ⁊ wisdome, and strength, and honoure and glory, and blessinge. And all creatures, which are in heauē, ⁊ on the earth, ⁊ vnder the earth, ⁊ in the see, ⁊ all ⁊ are in thē, herd I sayenge: blessinge, honoure, glory, ⁊ power, be vnto him, ⁊ syteth vpō the seate, and vnto the lābe for euermore. And the foure beestes saide: Amē. And ⁊ xxiiij. elders fell vpon their faces, and worshipped him that lyueth for euermore.

And when he opened the thyrd seale, I herde the thyrd beste saye: come & se. And I behelde, and lo, a blacke horse: and he that sate on him, had a payre of balances in his honde. And I herde a voyce in the myddes of the foure bestes saye: a measure of whete for a peny, and thre measures of barly for a peny: and oyle and wyne se thou hurte not.

33 And when he opened the fourth seale, I herde the voyce of the fourth beste saye: come and se. And I looked, and behelde a pale horse, and his name that sat on him was deeth, and hell folowed after him, & power was geue vnto them ouer the fourth parte of the earth, to kyll with swearde, and with hunger, and with deeth, of the vermen of the earth.

And when he opened the fyfte seale, I sawe vnder the aultre, the soules of them y were kyllid for the worde of God, and for y testimony which they had, and they cryed with a lowde voyce sayenge: How longe tariest thou *LORDE holy and true, to iudge & to auenge oure bloude on them that dwell on the earth? And longe whyte garmentes were geuen vnto euery one of them. † And it was sayde vnto them, that they shulde reste for a lytle season, vntyll the number of their felowes, and brethre, and of them that shulde be killed as they were, were fulfilled.

Ⓒ And I behelde when he opened the sixte seale, and lo, there was a grett earthquake, and y sonne was as blacke as sacke cloth made of heare. And the mone waxed euē as bloude: and the starres of heauen fell vnto the earth, euen as a fygge tree castith from her her fygges, when she is shaken off a mighty wynde. And heauen vanyszhed awaye, as a scroll when it is rolled toggeder. AND after that sawe I foure angels stode on y foure corners of the earth, holdinge y foure wyndes of y earth, y y wyndes shulde not blowe on y earth, nether on y see, nether on eny tree. And I sawe another angel ascende fro the rysinge of the sonne: which had the seale of y luyng God and he cryed with a loude voyce to the foure angelles (to whom power was geuen to hurt the earth and the see) sayenge: y Hurt not the earth nether the see, nether the trees, till we haue sealed the seruautes of oure God in their forheddes.

33 And I herde the nombre of them which were sealed, and there were sealed an c. and xliij. M. of all the trybes of the children of Israell. Of y trybe of Iuda were sealed xij. M. Of the trybe of Ruben were sealed xij. M. Of the trybe of Gad were sealed xij. M. Of the trybe of Asser were sealed xij. M. Of the trybe of Neptalym were sealed xij. M. Ⓒ ¶ After this I behelde, and lo, a gret multitude (which no man coule nombre) of all nacions and people, and tonges, stode before the seate, and before the lambe, clothed with longe whyte garmētes, and palmes in their hondes, and cryed with a loude voyce, sayenge: saluacion be ascribed to him y syteth vpon the seate of oure God, and vnto the lambe. And all the angels stode in the compase of the seate, and of the elders and of the foure bestes, and fell before y seat on their faces, and worshipped God, sayenge, Amen: Blessyng and glory, wiszdome and thanks and honour, and power and might, be vnto oure God for euermore Amen.

And one of the elders answered, sayenge vnto me: what are these which are arayed in longe whyte garmētes, and whence cam they? And I sayde vnto him: LORDE thou wotest. And he sayde vnto me: these are they which cam out of gret tribulacion and made their garmentes large, and made the whyte in the

¶ AND when he had opened the seuenth seale, there was silēce in heauen aboute the space of halfe an houre. And I sawe seuē angells stondinge before God, and to them were geuen seuē trompettes. And another angell cam and stode before the aultre, hauynge a golden senser, and moch of odoures was geuen vnto him, that he shulde offre of the prayers of all sayntes vpon the golden aultre, which was before the seate. ‡ And the smoke of the odoures which came of the prayers of all sayntes, ascended vppe before God out of the angelles honde. And the angell toke the senser, and fylled it with fyre of the aultre, and caste it into the earth, and voyces were made, and thōdrynges and lightnynges, and earthquake.

¶ AND the seuē angells which had the seuē trompettes, prepared them selues to blowe. The first angel blew, and there was made hayle and fyre, which were myngled with bloud, ¶ they were cast in to the earth: and the thyrd parte of trees was burnt, and all grene grasse was brent. And the seconde angell blew: and as it were a greате mountayne burnynge with fyre was cast in to the see, and the thyrd parte of the see turned to bloud, and the thyrd parte of the creatures which had life, dyed, and the thyrd part of shippes were destroyed.

¶ AND the thyrd angell blew, and there fell a greате starre from heauen, burnynge as it were a lampe, and it fell in to the thyrd parte of the ryuers, and in to fountaynes of waters, and the name of the starre is called Wormwod. ¶ And the thyrd parte of the waters was turned to Wormwod. And many men dyed of the waters, because they were made bytter. And the fourth angel blew, and

And I behelde, and herde an angel flyenge thorowe the myddes of heauē, and sayēge with a lowde voyce: Wo, wo, wo to the inhabitors of the earth, because of the voyces to come of the trompe of the thre angels which were yet to blowe.

¶ AND the fyfte angell blew, ¶ I sawe a starre fall from heauē vnto † earth. And to him was geuē the kaye of the bottomlesse pytt. And he opened the bottomlesse pytt, and there arose the † smoke of a greате fornaice. And the sunne and † ayer were darkned by the reason of the smoke of the pytt. And there came out of the smoke locustes vpon the earth: and vnto thē was geuen power as the scorpions of the earth haue power. C And the sixte angel blew, and I herde a voyce from the foure corners of the golden aultre which is before God, sayenge to the sixte angel, which had the trompe: Lowse the foure angels, which are bounde in the greate ryuer Eufrates. And fy foure angels were lowsed, which were prepared for an houre, for a daye, for a moneth, and for a yere, for to slee the thyrdre parte of men. And the nombre of horsmen of warre, were twenty tymes x M. And I herde fy nombre of them. And thus I sawe the horses in a vision, and them that sat on the hauynge fyry habbergions of a yalowe and brymstony coloure, and the heades of fy horses werre as the heades of lyons. And out of their mouthes went forth fyre, and smoke, and brymstone. And of these three was the thirde parte of men kyllid: that is tosaye, of fyre, smoke, and brymstone: which proceded out of the mouthes of the: For their power was in their mouthes and in their tayles: for their tayles were like vnto serpetes, and had heades, and with the they dyd hurt: And the remnaunt of the me which were not kyllid by these plagis, repeted not of the dedes of their hondes, fy they shulde not worshippe deuels, and ymagis of golde, and syluer, and brasse, q stone, and of wod, which nether can se, nether heare, nether go. Also they repented not of their murthur, and of their witchcraft, nether of their whordome, nether of their thefts.

AND I sawe another mightye angell come doune fro heauen, clothed with a cloude, and the rayne bowe vpon his heed. And his face as it were fy Sonne, and his fete as it were pyllars of fyre: and he had in his honde a lytell boke opyn: and he put his right fote vpon fy see, and his lyfte fote on fy earth. And cryed with a lowde voyce, as when a lyon roreth. And when he had cryed, seuē thondres spake their voyces. And when the seuē thodres had spokē their voyces, I was aboute to wryte. And I herde a voyce from heauen sayenge vnto me: seale vp those thinges which the seuē thondres spake, and wryte them not.

the see, and vpon the earth, lifte vpe his honde to heauen, and swore by him that liueth for euermore, which created heauen, and the thinges that there in are, and fy see, and the thinges which are therin: that there shalbe nomore tyme: but in the dayes of the voyce of the seuēth angel, when he shal begynne to blowe, the mistery of God shalbe fynyszed, as he preached by his seruantes the prophetes.

And the voyce which I herde from heauē, spake vnto me agayne, and sayde: go and take the lytle boke which is open in the honde of the angel, which stonde vpo the see, and vpon the earth. And I went vnto the angel, and sayde vnto him: geue me the lytle boke. And he sayde vnto me: * Take it, and eate it vp, and it shal make thy belly bytter, but it shalbe in thy mouth as swete as hony. And I toke the lytle boke out of his honde, and ate it vp, and it was in my mouth as swete as hony, and as sone as I had eaten it, my belly was bytter. And he sayde vnto me: thou muste prophesy agayne vnto the people, and to the Heythen, and tonges, and to many kynges.

The xij. Chapter.

AND the seuenth angel blewe, and ther were made greate voyces in heauen, sayēge: the kyngdoms of this worlde are oure LORDES and his Christes, and he shal reigne for euermore. And the foure and twenty Elders, which sat before God on their seatts, fell vpon their faces, and worshipped God sayenge: we geue the thanks LORDE God almyghte: which art and wast, and art to come, for thou hast receaued thy greate might, and hast raygned. And the Heythen were angry, & thy wrath is come, and the tyme of the deed that they shulde be iudged, and that thou shuldest geue rewarde vnto thy seruantes the prophettes and sayntes, and to the that feare thy name, small & greate: and shuldest destroye them which destroye the earth. And the temple of God was opened in heauen, and there was sene in his temple the arke of his testament: and there folowed lightnynges, and voyces, and thondrynges and earth quake, and a greate hayle.

And there appeared a greate token in heauen. A woman clothed with the Sonne, and the mone vnder her fete, and vpon her heed a crowne of twolue starres. And she was with childe, and cryed traauailing in byrth, and payned redy to be deluyered. And there appeared another token in heauen, and beholde a greate reed dragon, hauinge seuen heades, and ten hornes and seue crownes vpon his heades: and his tayle drue the thyrdre parte of the starres, and cast them to the earth.

And the greate dragon that olde serpent (called the deuell and Sathanas) was cast out. Which disceaured all the worlde. "And he was cast in to the earth, and his angelles were cast out with him also.

And I harde a lowde voyce, which sayde in heauen: Now is saluacion, and strength and the kyngdome become oure Gods, and "power his Christes: For he is cast downe, which accused them before God daye and night. The xiiij. Chapter.

AND I sawe a beest rise out of the see, hauinge seven heades, and x. hornes, and vpon his hornes x. crownes, and vpō his heed, the names of blasphemy. ^bAnd the beest which I sawe was lyke a catt of the mountayne, and his fete were as the fete of a bear, and his mouth as the mouthe of a lyon. And ŷ dragō gaue him his power and his seate, and greate auctorite: and I sawe one of his heades as it were wounded to death, and his dedly wounde was healed. And all the worlde wōdred at the beest, and they worshipped the dragon which gaue power vnto the beest, and they worshipped the beest, sayenge: who is like vnto the beest? who is able to warre with him?

And there was geuen vnto him a mouth to speake greate thynges ⁊ blasphemies, and power was geuen vnto him, to do xliij. monethes. And he opened his mouth vnto blasphemy agaynst God, to blaspheme his name, and his tabernacle and them that dwell in heauen. ^cAnd it was geuen vnto him to make warre with the sayntes, and to ouercome them. And power was geuen him ouer all kynred, tonge, and nacion: ^dand all that dwell vpon the earth worshipt him: whose names are not wrytten in the boke of life of the lambe, which was kylled from the beginnyng of the worlde. Yf eny man haue an eare, let him heare. He that leadeth in to captiuite, shal go in to captiuite: ^eHe that killeth with a swearde, must be killed with ŷ swearde. ^fHeare is the pacience, and the faith of the sayntes.

And I behelde another beest comynge vp out of the earth, and he had two hornes like a lambe, and he spake as dyd the dragō. And he dyd all that the first beest coulde do in his presence, and he caused the earth, and them which dwell therin, to worshippe the fyrst beest, whose deedly wouide was healed. And he dyd greate wonders, so that he made fyre come downe from heauē in the sight of men. And deceaued them that dwell on the earth by ŷ meanes of those signes which he had power to do in the sight of the beest, sayenge to them that dwell on the earth: that they shulde make an ymage vnto the beest, which had the wounde of a swearde and dyd liue.

And he had power to geue a sprete vnto the ymage of the beest, and that the ymage of the beest shulde speake, and shulde cause, that as many as wolde not worshippe the ymage of the beest, shulde be kylled. And he made all bothe smale and greate, ryche and poore, fre and bond, to receaue a marke in their right hondes, or in their foreheades. And that no man might by or sell, saue he ŷ had ŷ marke, or the name of the beest, ether the nombre of his name. Here is wisdome. Let him that hath wyt, count the nombre of the beest. For it is the nombre of a man, and his nombre is sixe hondred, thre score and sixe.

And I herde a voyce from heauen, as the sounde of many waters, and as the voyce of a greate thondre. And the voyce that I herde, was as the harpers that playe vpon their harpers. And they songe as it were a newe songe, before the seate, ⁊ before ŷ foure beestes, and the elders, and no man coulde learne ŷ songe, but the hondred and xliij. M. which were redeemed from the earth. These are they, which were not defyled with wemen, for they are virgins. And I herde an angel saye: LORDE which art and wast, thou art righteous and holy, because thou hast geuē soche iudgmentes, for they shed the bloude of sayntes, and prophetes, and therfore hast thou geuen them bloude to drynke: for they are worthy. And I herde another angell out of the altier, saye: euen so LORDE God almighty, true and righteous are thy iudgmentes.

B And the fourth angell poured out his viall on the Sonne, and power was geuen vnto him to vexen men with heate of fyre. And the men raged in gret heate, and spake euell of the name of God, which had power ouer those plagis, and they repented not, to geue him glory. And the fyfte angell poured out his viall vpon the seate of the beest, and his kyngdome waxed derke, and they gnawed their tonges for sorowe, and blasphemed the God of heauē for sorowe, and payne of their sores, and repented not of their dedes.

C And the sixte angell poured out his viall vpon the gret ryuer Euphrates, and the water dried vp, that the waye of the kynges of the Easte shulde be prepared. And I sawe thre vnclene spretes like frogges come out of the mouth of the dragon, and out off the mouth off the beest, and out off the mouth of the false prophet. For they are the spretes of deuels workynge myracles, to go out vnto the kynges of the earth and of the whole worlde, to gaddre them to the battayle of that gret daye of God allmighty. *Beholde, I come as a thefe. Happy is he that watcheth and kepeth his garmentes, lest he be founde naked, and men se his filthynes. And he gaddered them toggeder in to a place, called in the hebrue tonge, Armagedon.

D And the seuenth angell poured out his viall in to the ayre. And there came a greate voyce out of heauen from the seate, sayenge: It is done. And there folowed voyces, thondrynges, and lightnynges, and there was a gret earthquake, such as was not sence mē were vpon the earth, so myghty an earthquake and so greate. And the greate cite was deuoyded in to thre parties. And the cities of nacions fell. And greate Babilon came in remembrance before God, to geue vnto hyr the cuppe of wyne of the fearenes of his wrath. And euery yle fled awaye, and the mountaynes were not founde. And there fell a greate hayle, as it had bene talentes, out of heauē vpon the men, and the men blasphemed God, because of the plague of the hayle, for it was greate, and the plague of it sore.

The xviij. Chapter.

AND there cam one of the seuē angels, A which had the seven vialles, and talked with me, sayenge vnto me: Come, I wil shewe the the iudgment of the greate whore, that sitteth vpon many waters, with whom the kynges of the earth haue commytted whordome, and the inhabitors of the earth are dronken with the wyne of her fornicacion. And he caryed me awaye into the wildernes in ſprete. And I sawe a woman syt vpon a rose colored beest, full of names of blasphemie, which had seuē heades & ten hornes. And ſ woman was arrayed in purple and rose color, and decked with golde, precious stone, and pearles, and had a cupp of golde in her honde, full of abhominacions, and fylthines of her wordome. And in her forhed was a name wryttē, a mistery: greate Babilon the mother of whordome, and abominaciōs of the earth. And I sawe the wyfe dronkē with the bloude of sayntes, and with the bloud of the witnessnes of Iesu. And when I sawe her, I wondred with greate mervayle. B

And the angell sayde vnto me: wherefore meruayllest thou? I wil shewe the the mistery of the woman, and of the beest that beerith her, which hath seven heades, and ten hornes. The beest that thou seest, was, and is not, and shall ascende out of the bottomlesse pytt, and shal go in to perdition, and they that dwell on the earth shal wondre (whose names are not wrytten in the boke of life from the begynnyng of the worlde) when they beholde the beest that was, and is not. And here is a mynde, that hath wiszdome.

The seven heades are seven mountanes, on which the woman sitteth: they are also seven kynges. Fyue are fallen, and one is, and the other is not yet come. When he commeth, he muste continue a space. And the beest C that was, and is not, is euē the eyght, and is of the seuen, and shal go in to destruccion. * And ſ ten hornes which thou sawest, are ten kynges, which haue not yet receaued the kyngdome, but shal receaue power as kynges at one houre with ſ beest. These haue one mynde, and shal geue their power and strēth vnto ſ beeste. These shal fyght with the lambe, and the lābe shal ouercome them: For he is † LORDE of all lordes, and kinge of all kinges: and they that are on his syde, are called, and chosē and faithfull.

And he saide vnto me: The † waters which thou sawest, where ſ whore sytteth, are people, and folke, and nacions, and tonges. And the ten hornes, which thou sawest vpon the beest, are they that shal hate the whore, and shal make her desolate, and naked, and shall eate hir fleshe, and burne her with fyre. For God hath put in their hertes, to fulfill his wyll, and to do with one consent, for to geue hir kyngdome vnto the beest, vntill the wordes of God be fulfilled. And the womā which thou sawest, is that greate cite, which raigneth ouer the kynges of the earth.

The xliij. Chapter.

AND after that I sawe another angel come downe frō heauē, hauinge greate power, and ſ earth was lightned with his brightnes. And he cryed mightely with a stronge voyce, sayenge: ‡ She is fallen, she is fallen, euen greate Babilon, and is become the habitacion of deuels, and ſ holde of all fowle spretes, and a cage of all vnclane and hatefull byrdes: for all naciōs haue dronken of the wyne of the wrath of her whordome. And the kynges of the earth haue committed fornicacion with her, and her marchauntes are waxed ryche of the abundaunce of her pleasures.

And I herde another voyce from heauen saye: ¶ come awaye from her my people, that ye be not partakers of her synnes, lest ye receaue of her plagēs. For her synnes are gone vp to heauen, and the LORDE hath remembered her wyckednes. Rewarde her euen as she rewarded you, and geue her dubble accordinge to her workes. And poure in dubble to her in the same cuppe, which she fylled vnto you. And as moche as she glorified her selfe and lyued wantanly, so moch poure ye in for her of punyszhmēt, and sorowe, for she sayeth in her herte: ¶ I syt beinge a quene, and am no wyddowe, and shall se no sorowe. Therefore shal her plagēs come at one daye, death, and sorowe, and hunger, and she shalbe brēt with fyre: for stronge is the LORDE God which shal iudge her.

And the kynges of the earth shal bewepe her and wayle ouer her, which haue committed fornicacion and lyued wantanly with her, when they shal se the smoke of her burnynge, and shal stonde a farre of for feare of her punyszhment, sayenge: Alas, Alas, that greate cite Babilon, that mighty cite: For at one houre is thy iudgment come. And the marchauntes off the earth shal wepe and wayle in them selues, because no man will bye their ware eny more, the ware of golde, and syluer, and of precious stones, off pearle, & sylke, and purple, and skarlet, & all Thynen wod, and all manner vessels of yuery, and all manner vessels of most precious wod, and of brasse, and of yron, & synomom and odours, and oyntmentes, and frankynsence, and wyne, and oyle, and fyne floure, and wheate, and catell, and shepe, and horses, and charrettes, and bodies and soules of men.

And the apples that thy soule lusted after, are departed from the. And all thynges which were deyntie, and had in pryce, are departed from the, and thou shalt fynde them no more. The marchauntes of these thynges which were waxed ryche by her, shall stonde a farre of for feare of the punyszhment of her, wepyng and waylinge, and sayenge: alas alas, that greate cite, that was clothed in sylke, and purple, and scarlet, and decked with golde, and precious stone, and pearles: for at one houre so greate ryches is come to naught.

And euery shippe gouerner, and all they that occupie shippes, and shippmen which worke in the see, stode a farre of, and cryed, when they sawe the smoke of her burnynge, and sayde: what cite is like vnto this greate cite? And they cast dust on their heades, and cryed wepyng, and waylinge, and sayde: Alas, Alas the greate cite, wherin were made ryche all that had shippes in the see, by the reason of her wares: for at one houre is she made desolate.

And a mighty angell toke vp a greate stone lyke a mylstone, and cast it in to the see, sayenge: with suche violēce shal that greate cite Babylon be cast, and shalbe founde nomore. And the voyce of harpers, and musicions, and of pyper, and trompetters, shalbe herde no more in the: and no craftes man (of what soeuer craft he be) shalbe founde eny more in the: and the sounde of a myll shalbe herde no more in the: * and the voyce of the brydegrome and of the bryde, shalbe herde nomore in the for thy marchauntes were prynces of the earth. And with thyne inchaūtmēt were deceaued all nacions: and in her was founde the bloude of the prophetes, and of the sayntes, and of all that were slayne vpō the earth.

The xij. Chapter.

AND after that, I herde the voyce of moch people in heauen, sayenge: Alleluia. Saluacion and glory and honour, and power be ascribed to the LORDE oure God, for true and righteous are his iudgements, because he hath iudged the greate whore (which did corrupt ŷ earth with her fornicacion) and hath auenged the bloud of his seruauētes of her bond. And agayne they sayde: Alleluia. * And smoke rose vp for euermore. And ŷ xxiiij: elders, and the foure beestes fell downe, and worshipped God that sat on the seate, sayenge: Amen: Alleluia. And a voice came out of the seate, sayenge: prayse our LORDE God all ye that are his seruauētes, and ye that feare him both small and greate.

B And I herde the voyce of moch people, euē as ŷ voyce of many waters, and as ŷ voyce of stronge thondrynges, sayenge: Alleluia, for God omnipotent raineth. Let vs be glad and reioyce, and geue honour to him: for the mariage of the lābe is come, and his wife made her selfe ready. And to her was graunted, that she shulde be arayed with pure and goodly sylke. (As for the sylke, it is the rightewesnes of sayntes.) And he sayde vnto me: † Blessed are they which are called vnto the Lambes supper. And he sayde vnto me:

these are the true sayenges of God. And I fell at his fete, to worshippe him. And he sayde vnto me: † Se thou do it not. For I am thy felowe seruauēt, and one of thy brethren, and of them that haue the testimony of Iesus. Worshippe God. For the testimony of Iesus is ŷ sprete of prophesie. And I sawe heauē open, and beholde, a whyte horse and he ŷ sat vpon him, was called faithfull and true, and in rightewesnes dyd iudge and make battayle. His eyes ŷ were as a flame of fyre, and on his heade were many crounes: and he had a name written, that noman knewe but him selfe. † And he was clothed with a vesture dipt in bloude, and his name is called, ŷ worde of God. And ŷ warriers which were in heauen, folowed him vpon whyte horses, clothed with whyte and pure sylke, and † out of his mouth wente a sharppe swerde, that with it he shulde smyte the Heithen:  And he shall rule them with a rodde of yron, and he trode the wynefatte of the fearenesse and wrath of almighty God. And hath on his vesture and on his thyghe a name written: † Kyng of all kinges, and LORDE of all lordes.

And I sawe an angell stonde in the Sonne, and he cryed with a lowde voyce, sayenge to all the fowles that flye by the myddes vnder the heauen: Come and gaddre youre selues togedder vnto the supper of the gret God, that ye maye eate the † fleszhe of kynges, and of hye captaynes, and the fleszhe of mighty men, and the fleszhe of horses, and of the that syt on them, and the fleszhe of all free men and bond men, both of small and greate. And I sawe the beeste and the kynges of ŷ earth, and their warriers gaddred togedder, to make battayle agaynste him that sat vpon the horse, and agaynste his sowdiers.

And the beeste was taken, and with him that false prophet that wrought myracles before him, with which he disceaued them that receaued the beestes marke, and them that worshipped his ymage. † These both were cast in to a ponde of fyre burnyng with brymstone: and the remnaunte were slayne with the † swerde of him that sat vpon the horse, which swerde proceded out of his mouth, and all the foules were filled with their fleszhe.

The xi. Chapter.

AND I sawe an angell come downe from heauen, hauinge the keye of the bottomlesse pyt, and a gret chayne in his honde. *And he toke the dragon that olde serpent (which is the deuell and Satanas) and he bounde him a thousand yeares: and cast him in to the bottomlesse pyt, and he bounde him, and set a seale on him, that he shuld disceauie the people nomoare, tyll the thousand yeares were fulfilled. And after that muste he be loused for a littell season.

I And I sawe seates, and they sat vpon them, and the iudgement was geuen vnto them: and I sawe the soules of them that were beheaded for the witnes of Iesu, and for the worde of God: which had not worshipped the beest, nether his ymage, nether had taken his marke vpon their foreheades, or on their hondes: and they lyued, and raygned with Christ a thousand yeare: but the other of the deed men lyued not agayne, vntill the thousand yeare were fynisshed. This is that fyrst resurreccion. Blessed and holy is he that hath parte in the fyrst resurreccion. On soch hath the seconde death no power, but they shalbe the prestes of God and of Christ, and shall raygne with him a thousande yeare.

E And when the thousand yeares are expyred, Sathan shalbe loused out of his preson, and shal go out to deceauie the people which are in the foure quarters of the earth. †Gog and Magog, to gadder them togedder to batayle, whose nombre is as the sonde off the see: and they went vp on the playne of the earth, and compassed the tentes of the sayntes aboute, and the beloued cite. And fyre cam doune from God out of heauen, and deuoured them: ‡and the deuell that disceaued them, was cast in to a lake of fyre and brymstone, where the beest and the false prophet were, and shalbe tormented daye and night for euermore.

I And I sawe a gret whyte seate, and him that sat on it, from whose face fled awaye both the earth and heauen, and their place was nomore founde. ¶ And I sawe the deed, both gret and small stonde before God: And the bokes were opened, and another boke was opened, which is (the boke) of life, and the deed were iudged of tho thinges which were wyrtten in the bokes accordinge to their dedes: and the see gaue vp her deed, which were in her, and deeth and hell delyuered vp the deed, which were in them: and they were iudged euery man accordyng to his dedes. And deth and hell were cast in to the lake of fyre. This is that second death. And whosoever was not founde wyrtten in the boke off life, was cast in to the lake of fyre.

The xii. Chapter.

AND I sawe a newe heauen and a newe earth. For the fyrst heauen, and the fyrst earth were vaniszed awaye, and there was nomore See. And I Iohn sawe that holy cite newe Ierusalem come downe from God out of heauen, prepared as a bryde garnisshed for hyr huszband. And I herde a greате voyce from the seate, sayenge: beholde, the tabernacle of God  is with men, and he wil dwell with them. And they shalbe his people, and God himselfe shalbe with the, and shalbe their God.†† And God shal wipe awaye all teares from their eyes. God, hauynge the brightnes of God. And her shynynge was lyke vnto a stone most precious, euen a Iasper cleare as cristall: ¶ had greate and hye walles, and had twolue gates, and at ʒ gates twolue angels: and names wrytten, which are the twolue trybes of Israel: on the est parte three gates, and on the north syde three gates, and towarde the south three gates, and from the west three gates: and the wall of the cite had twolue foundaciōs, and in them the names of the lambes twolue Apostles.

¶ * And he that talked with me, had a golden rede to measure the cite with all, and the gates therof, and the wall therof. ¶ And the twolue gates were twolue pearles, and euery gate was of one pearle, and ʒ strete of the cite was pure golde, as a thoroweshynynge glasse. And I sawe no temple therein. And ʒ people which are sauēd, shal walke in the light of it: and the kynges of the earth shal bryng their glory vnto it. † And the gates of it shal not be shut by daye. THE TREASURY BIBLE, Containing the Authorized Version of the Holy Scriptures, with the Work entitled "The Treasury of Scripture Knowledge," described below.

Two editions are published, containing the same matter, and at the same price, but varied in form, to suit the different views of the studious and devout reader.

2nd. The Sacred Text and corresponding matter of "The Treasury of Scripture Knowledge," printed side by side on the same page, in one quarto volume, on the very finest writing paper, with a novel and most useful variation in the fabric of the paper for manuscript notes.

The Treasury of Scripture Knowledge is a work of great importance and value, if judged by the length of time it has been in preparation, and the vast expense that has been incurred. The Notes are numerous, and the Scripture References are about 500,000. The most of Parallel Passages are so printed as to secure facility of reference, and give the fullest aid in elucidating Scripture by Scripture, and is equally adapted to every Edition of the Bible, the references of each respective verse being fully given.

2 Blessed, Ps. 113. 3.—151. 5.—106. 3.—112. 1.—119. 1.—Ps. 141. 12.—143. 7.—113. 17.—Re. 22. 14. tegeth, ver. 4. Ps. 113. Re. 7. 18. tegeth, ch. 14. 13. Re. 13. 13. Re. 13. 17. Je. 17. 21. 22. Ez. 30. 12. tegeth, Ps. 141. 12.—113. 101. Ps. 42. 14. 15.—16. 17. Re. 12. 3.

By reading the text of this verse, it will be seen that the word "Blessed" is the first of the second sentence, illustrated by the references which follow it, and by the second word, "layeth," the end of the first sentence and the beginning of the second are determined, and so on throughout. The additions to a single word point out the particular part of the verse, when the same word twice occurs; thus "tegeth" the "and" keepeth him" occur in this case. When the references illustrate the whole verse, the italic words are not printed, because not required.
